SEC. 2. Any municipality may acquire in any manner whatsoever from the United States of America or any department, board or agency thereof, or from the State or any department or agency thereof any Federal surplus property, real or personal, without regard to provisions of law which require posting of notices or advertising for bids, inviting or receiving of bids, delivery of purchases before payment, or provisions of law which prevent such municipality from entering a bid or bids in its behalf at any sale of Federal surplus property, real or personal, by the United States of America or any department, board or agency thereof, or by the State or any department or agency thereof. The facts constituting such necessity are as follows:

The act cited in the title hereof took effect immediately as an urgency measure necessitated by the facts stated in Section 5 thereof, which statement of facts is incorporated herein by this reference. A doubt has been suggested as to the sufficiency of the word "municipalities," as used in the title of the act hereby amended, to indicate and include all of the several public or governmental agencies indicated in the title of this amendatory act. To resolve that doubt and to avoid any delay which might otherwise occur it is necessary that this amendatory act take effect immediately, but no inference is to be drawn herefrom that the word "municipalities" does not include within the scope of its meaning all of such agencies."

THE MISSION INDIAN FEDERATION OF CALIFORNIA
WASHINGTON, D. C., May 12, 1945

To the Honorable Members of the California State Senate,
The Capitol, Sacramento, California.

Re: Assembly Bill No. 1178

GENTLEMEN: The undersigned, duly delegated by the Mission Indian Federation of Southern California to oppose State Assembly Bill No. 1178, have just learned that the bill, as amended, was passed by the Assembly and is now before the Senate for approval. We are indeed sorry that officials so highly honored to represent the best interests and welfare of all the people would so intolerantly ignore the appeals of the Indian citizens of our great State and pass A.B. No. 1178, as amended by its Committee on Governmental Efficiency and Economy on April 27, 1945.

The Indian people of the State, although greatly handicapped and unable to effectively present their voice of opposition to the proposed measure, they did manage to send delegates who clearly showed the State-wide injustices that would result if the State adopted the policies toward the Indians of the State cunningly encompassed in this bill.

Indians of California became full-fledged Citizens under the Treaty made with Mexico in 1848. Under century-old laws which the Indian Bureau has prevailed upon Congress to enact, and their own "regulations", the bureau holds all Indians as their "wards" or "incompetent people" and thus controls our very lives and our property. The courts in every instance rule that Indians of the State are citizens. We are taxpayers, voters and are in every way and by every test, fully as capable as the white race to take our places as responsible American citizens.

If the State of California is able to carry out the things covered in A.B. No. 1178 and actually get control of the award recently made by the Court of Claims in favor of the few remaining descendants of the legitimate owners of all the lands within the boundaries of the present State, its Legislators (and ours too) will have by that act written another dark and shameful page in the State's history. The real effect of this bill 1178 is to set up a State Indian Bureau! The State is seeking to control funds actually belonging to a group of its citizens. We are held as "wards" solely because we are Indians, and not because a court of law has so held. Own Indian people were "competent" enough to be subject to the draft laws. Yes, hundreds of our young men volunteered before their names were called! They have in every instance proved themselves equal to the best of the white race; they have done their full share in winning the victories already achieved. And, yet, a few ill-advised legislators would believe it is justified in grabbing this award.

It is eminently fair and proper to here turn the pages of our State's "history" back to 1852. The baby State just two years old, new and inexperienced, had some very intolerant (to say the least) members in the Assembly, who, when they learned that the Federal Government had just made some 18 treaties with about one-third of the Indian "nations" of the State in order to get the Indians to give up their rights in the balance of the State, passed a "resolution" calling upon the United States Senate to "not ratify the 18 treaties just made with Indians for the lands they are to keep are worth not less than one hundred million dollars." Thereupon, the United States Senate failed to ratify those solemn treaties. The Government and the State then took charge of all the Indians' lands. The treaties were hidden, and only accidentally found some 53 years later—in 1905. That act was and is the basic cause of our present pitiful condition.

AND HERE IS ANOTHER DARK PAGE

Then in 1934, the Legislature enacted a law (No. 1559) under which it actually created a "State Indian Bureau." The law provided for a committee of the heads of five State departments (instead of three now called for in 1178) and they were to get some $2,000,000 from Congress out of this present award, although it was not decided by the court. The Federation learned what was done months after it became a law. We appealed to our good friend Senator Ed Fletcher, and, with his cooperation, the committee allowed us to appear and show them why the bill was not for the best interest of the Indians or the State. It was unanimously repealed, although the Indian Bureau and certain "white friends" tried to block us. The Governor signed it.

Mr. President of the State Senate and Honored Members of this great body, California surely does not need this Indian money in order to carry on its great task! It is reported the State now has several hundred million dollars in a reserve fund to meet postwar needs. We would most respectfully ask you to turn this A. B. No. 1178 down and erase forever any plan to arbitrarily take control of Indian funds or in any manner be a party to adopting measures not applicable to all other citizens. That is all Indians want:

EQUAL JUSTICE UNDER LAW

Do this, we earnestly beseech you, and you will thus give us encouragement in our determination to prove to all peoples by our record of achievements and loyalty to our State and Nation that we are worthy of our great forefathers, and deserve a place by your side in the tasks lying ahead! And, we sincerely believe, to honorably solve those problems, California will have to call out: "Bring me men to match my mountains"! And for my Indian people, I have spoken!

Most sincerely,

THE MISSION INDIAN FEDERATION
By ADAM CASTILLO, President

Temporary address: No. 424 Senate Office Building.

Japs Fanatics

"The Japanese people are fanatical in their faith that they are destined to conquer the world.

"They traditionally measure time in terms of generations and centuries, and reverses and defeats in the span of a single generation are merely incidents in the sweep of time, to be expected and endured.

"They are a 'holy' race and their land is 'holy,' literally begotten of the gods.

"Their cause is 'holy' because it is divinely inspired. Ultimate victory will be theirs because the gods have divinely ordained it.

"Unless Japan is utterly crushed and broken in this war and her power to make war forever destroyed, defeat will be regarded as a temporary setback and the Japanese people will begin again to build methodically for another attempt at the destiny they believe their gods have planned for them."

Nips in U. S.

The report was submitted to the State Senate April 16 by Senator Jack B. Tenney, Chairman of the Joint Fact-Finding Committee, as the group's second formal treatment since the war started of the problem of the Japanese population in the United States, which the committee has charged is in large part loyal to the Japanese Emperor.

The report is being urged for especial immediate study by committees belonging to the Security Council Commission of the United Nations Conference.

Once recognized by the committees as a document of value, it would be passed on to the world organization and would become expert testimony when the future status of Japan is determined.

The west coast in general believes that status should be the closest of forcible confinement for as many generations as are needed to re-educate the whole psychology of the Japanese race.

And the knowledgeable west coast knows that if the world state treats Japan with any degree of the condonation a beaten western enemy might deserve, there will in time come another war in the Pacific which might not end as this one is ending.

COMMUNICATIONS

The following communication was received and read, and on motion of Senator Salsman, ordered printed in the Journal:

CALIFORNIA DEPARTMENT OF EMPLOYMENT
 SACRAMENTO 14, CALIFORNIA, May 18, 1945

Honorable Byrl R. Salsman, State Senate
State Capitol, Sacramento, California

DEAR SENATOR SALSMAN: This is in response to your request of this afternoon for information as to the effect of Senate Bill No. 615, on coverage under the Unemployment Insurance Act.

The principal difference between the definition of agricultural labor contained in Senate Bill No. 615 and that contained in the regulation of the commission as recently revised is that the definition in Senate Bill No. 615 includes as agricultural labor and accordingly exempts from the provisions of the act off-the-farm packing of fruits and vegetables. Our records indicate that the number of jobs throughout the State which are now covered and which would be exempted would average some 44,000. Taking into consideration the turnover in such employment there are approximately 100,000 different individuals at some time during the year who earn wage credits in these jobs and of this number approximately 53,000 earn the $300 in wage credits which make them eligible for benefits.

You asked whether we could supply figures as to the effect of this bill on coverage in Santa Clara County. From available records we estimate that some 1650 workers employed in such packing plants in Santa Clara County who are now covered by the act would be exempt under the provisions of Senate Bill No. 615.

Very truly yours,

T. H. MUGFORD, Vice Chairman
California Employment Stabilization Commission

REQUEST FOR UNANIMOUS CONSENT

Senator Rich asked for, and was granted unanimous consent to have the following information concerning Assembly Bill No. 500 printed in the Journal:

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, May 21, 1945

Honorable W. P. Rich, Chairman

Senate Finance Committee, Sacramento, Calif.

SUBJECT: ASSEMBLY BILL NO. 500—THE BUDGET BILL, AS PASSED BY THE ASSEMBLY

DEAR SENATOR RICH: Section 34a of Article IV of the State Constitution provides that appropriations from the General Fund of the State for any biennium, exclusive of appropriations for support of the Public School System, shall not exceed by more than five per cent the appropriations from said fund, exclusive of such public school appropriations, for the preceding biennium unless two-thirds of all of the Members elected to each house of the Legislature vote in favor thereof.

This section of the Constitution also provides that no amount appropriated in excess of such five per cent in any biennium shall become a part of the base for determining the maximum appropriation for a succeeding biennium. In other words, since 1935, when this section first became effective so far as the Budget Bill is concerned, the maximum appropriations which could be withdrawn from the General Fund by only a majority vote could not exceed by more than five per cent per biennium, compounded biennially, the appropriations for the biennium ending June 30, 1935, exclusive of the appropriations for support of the Public School System.

This section of the Constitution provides further that should the appropriations in the Budget Act for any biennium exceed the limitations therein prescribed, and such Budget Act be not passed by such two-thirds vote, the several items of appropriation therein shall be deemed reduced by that percentage which the excess amount of appropriations bears to the total appropriation.

Fixed charges and recurrent appropriations for 1945-47 already on the statute books prior to the enactment of the 1945 Budget Bill (Assembly Bill No. 500), exclusive of the appropriations for support of the Public School System, amount to $132,894,949. This sum exceeds the maximum allowable under the five per cent limitation by $33,536,074.

In view of this excess of fixed charges and recurrent expenditures over the allowable maximum, none of the appropriation items in Assembly Bill No. 500 payable from the General Fund, other than Items 77 and 78, and Items 79.5 to 102.6, inclusive, which are for support of the Public School System, can be made effective without a two-thirds vote of both houses of the Legislature. Therefore, should Assembly Bill No. 500 be passed by the Assembly with less than a two-thirds vote, all items of General Fund appropriations except those for support of the Public School System mentioned above will be completely null and void. Appropriations contained in the Budget Bill payable from special funds, however, will not be affected. Such items of appropriation are not subject to the five per cent limitation. Only a majority vote is required to pass them.

Since Assembly Bill No. 500 was passed by the Assembly and sent to the Senate with less than the two-thirds vote, there is no available appropriation in the next biennium for support of the State institutions, State prisons, the several departments of State Government, the constitutional officers, the Board of Equalization, or any other State agency which obtains its appropriation for support from the General Fund through the Budget Bill. There are no appropriations for support of the Legislature except Items 4 and 9 for salaries, which probably under the provisions of the Constitution are continuing appropriations.

The Attorney General has held in a previous opinion that should the Budget Bill as passed by the Assembly with less than a two-thirds vote be amended in the Senate and passed with a two-thirds vote by that body, and the Assembly in concurring in the Senate amendments does so by a two-thirds vote, the failure of the Assembly in the first instance to have passed Assembly Bill No. 500 by a two-thirds vote would then be remedied, and the appropriations in the Budget Bill payable from the General Fund will be effective without reduction.

For your information, I am enclosing a statement showing the computation of the five per cent limitation prescribed by the constitutional provision.

Yours very truly,

JAMES S. DEAN, Director of Finance

Subject: The Present Status of Assembly Bill No. 500

Assembly Bill No. 500 passed the Assembly by a vote of 44 ayes and 33 noes which is less than the two-thirds vote necessary to authorize expenditures from the General Fund in excess of the five per cent limitation placed by the Constitution in 1935.

Since the appropriations from the General Fund already exceed this limitation by some $33,000,000 only the appropriations in the Budget Bill for education, amounting to $16,435,000 from the General Fund, could be made effective. The remainder, or $150,664,738, will automatically be non-effective under the constitutional limitation above noted, unless the Senate passes the Budget Bill by the necessary two-thirds vote, and the amendments thereto and the bill itself is finally concurred in by a two-thirds vote of the Assembly.

Any special appropriation bill from the General Fund which was not approved by a two-thirds vote of both houses, which increases the appropriation from the General Fund beyond the constitutional limitation, likewise will be null and void.

This session of the Legislature approved increasing the aid to the aged from $40 to $50 per month. This passed both houses by a unanimous vote and is therefore not affected by this situation.

Memo to: Honorable W. P. Rich, Chairman of Senate Finance Committee

Subject: Controls in Assembly Bill No. 500 Removed by Floor Amendments in the Assembly.

By floor amendments in the Assembly the controls on expenditures were removed in the following places:

Item 111—For the Support of the Board of Equalization.

The item was restored to the original amount of $1,495,991. The sum of $69,535 for salaries for unfilled positions was put back into the appropriation and this amount was deleted from Item 276.5 for the Salary Restoration Fund.

Item 112—Board of Equalization, for the support of the Retail Sales Tax Division.

The item was restored to the original amount of $6,626,112. $625,063 for salaries for unfilled positions was put back in the appropriation and this amount was deleted from Item 276.5, the Salary Restoration Fund.

Item 113—Board of Equalization, for the support of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Division.

This was restored to the original amount of $2,796,301 which included $71,960 for vacant positions transferred to the Salary Restoration Fund, Item 276.5, this latter fund being reduced by this amount. The remainder or net reduction was $91,631 which represented a cut that was restored.

Item 114—Board of Equalization, for the support of the Motor Vehicle Fuel Tax Division.

This was restored to the original amount of $396,330, and the special category (a.a) in the sum of $22,980 was eliminated, and this sum was restored to category (a) Salaries and Wages, increasing it to $302,295.

Item 187—For the support of the Motor Vehicle Department.

In this item there was exempted, from positions that could only be filled by re-employment of employees of the Highway Patrol, district traffic inspectors, traffic captains, and traffic sergeants, thus making it possible to fill these positions by new employees on a permanent basis.

Item 187.2—For salaries and wages of California Highway Patrolmen who returned from military leave.

In this item, the limitation was stricken out which provided that this appropriation shall not be used until after traffic officers employed since January 1, 1942, who have not been in military service, were replaced by veterans. This amendment would make it possible to increase the Highway Patrol staff by 200 employees, and would make it possible to retain all the present staff and use the appropriation in Item 187 to employ additional personnel, and use the appropriation in Item 187.2 to re-employ all personnel on military leave. This has the effect of increasing the potential spending of the Motor Vehicle Department by $684,000 although it does not actually increase the Budget, for this amount was included with the controls mentioned.

Memo to: Hon. W. P. Rich, Chairman of Senate Finance Committee

Subject: Principal Increases Made in Assembly Bill No. 500 by Floor Amendments Other Than the Removal of Controls

1. The largest increase in Assembly Bill No. 500 by floor amendments is in Item 276.6, the Salary Increase Fund for General Fund agencies at the rate of $25 per month for all employees. For the General Fund the appropriation is $10,940,322. The general provision in this item for the special fund agencies would require approximately $8,000,000 more, making a total of around $19,000,000.

2. The sum of $96,300 was added to Item 178 for the support of the Department of Justice for the employment of 10 narcotic agents.

3. In Item 228, for the support of the Department of Public Health, $119,530 was restored which represented a reduction made by the Ways and Means Committee, thus allowing an increase of 39.6 per cent for this department.

4. Item 28, for the support of the Governor's residence, was increased by $12,000.

5. Item 68, for the support of Preston School of Industry. $4,920 was added to provide the necessary amount for two full-time Chaplains. They already have two on half time. It was agreed that these Chaplains should likewise serve the forestry camps that might be established from Preston.

6. Item 185, for veterans claims and rights service. Increased by $150,000 to $300,000. There is no particular control on this expenditure. It is suggested that controls should be placed on it.

May 19, 1945

Memo to: Hon. W. P. Rich, Chairman of Senate Finance Committee

Subject: Controls Amended Into Assembly Bill No. 500 on the Recommendation of the Ways and Means Committee.

While the Budget as it was introduced in Assembly Bill No. 500 called for an expenditure of $683,710,643, the amended bill as it came from the Ways and Means Committee to the Assembly increases this by $71,382. This increase results from the numerous adjustments that have been made. These adjustments in appropriations, both upward and downward, reduce some appropriations materially—such as the reduction in the appropriation for the State Guard and for the Motor Vehicle Department, in an endeavor to hold expenditures to income. In other instances additions were made where conditions changed subsequent to the making of the Governor's Budget, or where added service appeared desirable, and in other instances where salary increases approved by the Personnel Board required more money.

More important than actual reductions in the Budget are the numerous budgetary controls actually set up in the appropriation bill itself. These controls, which are now actually spelled out, impose an obligation on the Administration and particularly on the Department of Finance to follow certain lines of procedure which will require strict economy, and all of them together should result in a saving of some 15 to 20 millions of dollars. I would like to explain these controls so that you will see their significance and understand their effect and their potential results. The legislative intent as respects the exercising of these controls has been definitely stated and a record of the deliberation of the Ways and Means Committee has been preserved in a full report of a court reporter. This report will be available to demonstrate just what was intended in establishing the controls in the Budget Bill.

During the current biennium, by exercising budgetary control, a saving which may reach twenty millions of dollars has been made. This was accomplished by making effective the legislative intent as was promised by the Administration when the Ways and Means Committee discussed with the Chief Executive the proposition of establishing a "line item" Budget, or at least a Budget Bill with categorical controls.

The Several Controls Explained

The Governor, in his Budget Message, stated that he believed that the categorical controls could be administered without undue complications. The Ways and Means Committee considered this matter carefully and determined that since something over 60 per cent of the entire State Budget is for salaries and wages, it felt that if a control which is effective could be established over salaries and wages, a large portion of the Budget problem would be solved. During its attention to this matter, the committee concluded that it would be wise to re-establish the categorical schedules for each appropriation item, similar to that which appeared in the Budget Bill of 1941. The three categories will be found in your amended bill for each General Fund appropriation as follows: (a) salaries and wages, (b) operating expense, (c) equipment. In addition, where it appears, there will be a fourth item, capital outlay, which was already set up in the original bill. In the case of Special Funds, you will find an additional item, indicated by (a.a) and entitled "Salary Restoration." In the case of the General Fund, the salary restoration item has been consolidated and it appears in your appropriation bill as Item 276.5. The effect of this will be explained following our explanation of the categorical controls.

It is provided in Section 2.5, page 69 of your appropriation bill, just how categorical controls will operate. In short, it is provided that these categories limit the amount of money to be spent from each appropriation for these several purposes, and it further ties them fast to the amount set up in the Governor's Budget document itself.

Section 2.6 provides that a transfer from one category to another cannot be made except on the approval of the Director of Finance. The Director of Finance shall report to the Joint Legislative Budget Committee all authorizations for such transfers. We believe that this provision alone will result in producing material savings.

Salary Savings

Since expenditures for salaries and wages make up approximately 60 per cent of the entire Budget, the Ways and Means Committee believed that direct control of a considerable portion of salaries and wages would result in an effective control of the entire Budget. For this reason the committee adopted a procedure for the taking out of all the General Fund money required for vacant positions to be carried forward for the coming biennium, and they set up in Item 276.5 a Salary Restoration Fund. This is in the sum of $2,772,320.

For Special Funds they set up the categorical division (a.a.) in the schedule for each item of appropriation. The total of these individual items and the General Fund Salary Restoration item will approximate $5,000,000.

In this instance this money cannot be spent until the Department of Finance is satisfied that it is necessary and desirable to fill the vacant position. Furthermore, in Section 5 of the appropriation bill, an additional control is established over salaries and wages by providing for the setting up of a Salary Savings Reserve which will accumulate for each quarter from the appropriations remaining unexpended for the quarter for salaries and wages. Transfers from the Salary Savings Reserve by the Director of Finance shall be approved only after the department is satisfied that the allotment to be recommended is insufficient to meet necessary expenditures for salaries and wages.

It is likewise provided in Section 5.5 that the Director of Finance shall report to the Legislature through the Joint Legislative Budget Committee for each quarter the condition of the Salary Savings Reserve Fund, showing all authorizations for transfer during the preceding quarter.

It is further provided that no money in any Salary Savings Reserve may be expended to pay increases in salary ranges unless prior approval has been secured from the Department of Finance.

Filling of Positions Limited

We also call attention to the fact that vacant positions can not be filled either in General Fund or in Special Fund agencies by merely making a request. The filling of vacant positions is limited by the fact that the language in Item 276.5, lines 26 to 35, wherein it is required that the various agencies of the State shall demonstrate to the satisfaction of the Department of Finance that it is necessary and desirable to fill vacant positions and the agencies shall substantiate such requests by presentation of such work load statistics, analysis of available man hours, and other information, as the Department of Finance may require.

Control of Personnel Limits Other Expenditures

It is accepted by the Department of Finance as a matter of budgetary control that if personnel is held down there will be corresponding savings in operating expense items. Money not needed for travel and other operating expense, for the reason that personnel is not hired, will be held as surplus in the several departmental accounts.

Purchase of Motor Vehicles Limited

A new section has been placed in the Budget Bill, No. 56, which definitely provides that no purchase order for the acquisition or replacement of motor vehicles shall be issued against any appropriation made by the Budget Bill until the Department of Finance has investigated and established the necessity therefor.

Also, an amendment has been added to Item 250 which appropriates $200,000 to the Department of Finance for the purchase and operation of motor vehicles for the several General Fund agencies. This amendment provides that in lieu of allocating funds from this item, the Department of Finance may supply transportation service. This will make it possible to eliminate some of the abuse in the use of automobiles and to operate a general transportation pool if found desirable.

Other Specific Limitations

There are a number of other lesser specific limitations amended into A.B. No. 500. Trustees for the Institution for Women—In Item 57 the expenditure for the per diem for the Board of Trustees for the Institution for Women has been limited.

Vocational Rehabilitation—In Item 78 the transfers from this appropriation have been limited to the amounts necessary to meet the State's matching requirement under the Federal Act.

Motor Vehicle Department—In Item 187 for the support of the Department of Motor Vehicles, an amendment has been inserted which provides that vacancies in the Highway Patrol can be filled only re-employment of the members of the Patrol who return from military leave or by duration appointment. This will mean that any jobs available, including the present twenty vacancies, will be available for returning military personnel.

Item 187.5 was drawn to meet a possible deficit in the Motor Vehicle Support Fund. This provision makes a loan from the State Highway Fund share of the Motor Vehicle Fund, but specifically limits the transfer and requires a repayment.

Public Shooting Grounds for the Fish and Game Commission—Item 198 appropriates $674,000 for the acquisition of lands for a public shooting grounds. In order to protect the taxpayers of the counties wherein such property might be secured, a provision is written into the appropriation item that no acquisition shall be made until the board of supervisors of the counties in which such lands are situated approves the same, and provides further that there shall be paid to each county for such real property acquired an amount equivalent to the taxes that would be paid on such property.

Division of Forestry—Specific controls have been placed over a number of appropriations for the Division of Forestry. For example, a new Item, 200.5, has been set up for the operation of the Forestry Work Camps. For the first specific allotment to the cooperating counties for the prevention and suppression of fire has been set up according to a schedule in Item 201. These counties will now know definitely the amount of money they are to receive and the method whereby additional funds allocated on the basis of Clarke-McNary funds will be allocated. Likewise, Item 202.5 has been set up specifically for the manning and maintenance of emergency fire fighting equipment assigned by agreement with certain counties and municipalities.

Forty Hour Week Continued

The forty hour work week established for the first time with the authorization of the war bonus pay for the current biennium, has been continued in Assembly Bill No. 500 in Section 14. This provides that the increases in compensation shall not be paid unless the employees work on the basis of a minimum of forty hours per week. This control is again continued for another two years.

Added Burden of Additional Budgetary Control

It is generally recognized that the additional controls placed in this appropriation bill will impose added burdens both on the Department of Finance and the State Controller. Full consideration has been given to this and the matter has been carefully considered with these two departments. They know the legislative intent and it is felt that they will exercise due diligence in carrying into effect these controls and the legislative intent, both in letter and in spirit. We believe that the largest possible savings will accrue and at the same time there will be sufficient elasticity and opportunity to exercise good judgment and proper management, so that both economy and the highest State Service can be secured.

By Dan Markel, Post-Intelligencer Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, April 28.—A clear-cut National policy on Japanese residing in the United States was demanded tonight by Sen. Warren G. Magnuson (D, Wash.)

Magnuson said he would call on the immigration service to announce immediately after X-Day how it proposes to handle the Japanese problem. Congress can proceed from that point on, he added.

The Washington Senator has definite views on what should be done with each of several distinctive groupings of Japanese and Japanese-Americans.

Would Deport Some

"One class of Japanese should be shipped off to Japanese territory on the first boat we can spare," Magnuson asserted. "They are the alien Japanese and the American-born Japanese who have indicated by act or implication their loyalty to Hirohito.

"Japanese aliens not deported promptly should be held subject to deportation on the first evidence of sympathy toward Japan or of unfriendliness to this country, deportation to be consummated without involved and prolonged bureau procedures.

"Persons of Japanese ancestry born in America should also be subject to deportation unless they attest their loyalty to the United States by formally renouncing the principle of dual citizenship."

Magnuson explained the Japanese government considers all persons of Japanese ancestry, wherever they may be born, citizens of that country and subjects of the emperor.

"Events have proved many Japanese, although born in the United States, have considered their real allegiance is to Japan," he said.

"On the other hand there have been Japanese-Americans, although their number is few, who long before the war went into court and legally renounced Japan's pretensions of their citizenship.

Loyalty Test Urged

"It is time every Japanese-American stand up and be counted. This country has no place either in war or in peace for anyone of questioned or questionable loyalty."

MOTION TO PRINT IN JOURNAL

Senator DeLap moved that the following explanation by the Franchise Tax Commissioner, of Assembly Bills Nos. 912, 913, 1518, 911, 914 and 915, be printed in the Journal:

Motion carried.

COMMUNICATIONS

EXPLANATION OF ASSEMBLY BILL NO. 912, AS AMENDED MAY 10, 1945, PROPOSING
AMENDMENTS TO THE BANK AND CORPORATION FRANCHISE TAX ACT

By Chas. J. McColgan, Franchise Tax Commissioner

Page 2, lines 27, 32, 35; page 3, line 5

Mere procedure amendment striking out language which was unnecessary; that is,
"incorporated" and "shall not be taxed" were eliminated, because of the language contained in lines 28 and 29, page 2, of the bill.

Amendment No. 2*Page 9, lines 1 to 6

Amendment provides that cancellation of corporate indebtedness by a stockholder does not result in income to corporation except to extent to tax benefit which accrued to corporation as a result of such indebtedness.

Amendment No. 3*Page 9, lines 32 to 34

Interest deduction allowed to the extent of intangible income included in measure of tax or to the extent in excess of such income excluded from measure of tax, whichever is the greater.

Amendment No. 4*Page 10, lines 41 and 42

Deduction allowed. The act is made to conform with the Federal act by allowing a deduction for partial bad debts "charged off."

Amendment No. 5*Page 11, lines 27 and 28

Discovery value as basis for depletion prohibited to more mines.

Amendment provides for percentage depletion for more mines.

Amendment provides for a definition of "gross income from the property" for purposes of percentage depletion deduction.

Amendment No. 8*Page 13, lines 21 and 34 to 50

The amendment makes the provisions relating to deduction for charitable contributions more liberal in respect to contributions to veterans' organizations.

Present Section 8(j) places a burden on the Building and Loan Commissioner of establishing an average rate of interest on money borrowed by building and loan and saving and loan institutions. That commissioner properly complains that the impossible is placed upon him and has asked the Franchise Tax Commissioner to eliminate this problem by allowing a deduction for the entire amount paid by such association on their withdrawable shares. This amendment complies with the request of the Building and Loan Commissioner by providing for such a deduction by such mutual associations.

Amendment No. 10*Page 18, lines 41 and 42

Amendment merely clarifies the act to specifically provide that any amount otherwise allowable as a deduction is not deductible if it is allocable to income excluded from the measure of the tax even though there may not be any of that particular type of income during any particular year.

Amendment No. 11*Page 24, lines 3 to 20

Corporation which has been subjected to corporation income tax is not subjected to the provisions of Section 13(c) during the first and second years that it does business in California and thus becomes subject to the Franchise Tax Act.

Section 13(k) of the act is amended to eliminate inequities in the present act when a corporation dissolves after changing its accounting period.

Amendment No. 13*Page 26, lines 20 to 30

Special provision proposed to cover dissolving banks and financial corporations. Provides in effect that they shall pay the maximum Section 4(a) rate upon dissolution prior to the time that the Section 4(a) rate is determined and for a refund in case such rate is less than the maximum.

Amendment No. 14*Page 27, lines 1 to 4

This amendment complements Amendment No. 14, supra. It merely provides that if a corporation having once been subjected to the Franchise Tax Act discontinues doing business for several years and then commences again to do business in California, thus again coming within the purview of the Franchise Tax Act, the provisions of Section 13(c) are not applicable if in the interim it was subjected to the Corporation Income Tax Act.

Amendment No. 15*Page 27, lines 32 and 39; page 28, lines 24 and 25 and 28-30

Technical amendment to clarify the present provisions of Section 134. No change in the present substantive law is contemplated.

Amendment No. 16*Page 29, lines 1 to 37

The proposed amendment would conform our act to Section 123(a) of the Revenue Act of 1943. It provides for the denial of deductions, otherwise allowable, in cases where a corporation was acquired (after October 5, 1940) for the "principal purpose" of evasion or avoidance of tax. The amendment would not change the law but merely codify the rule of Higgins v. Smith (308 U.S. 473).

Amendment No. 17*Page 32, lines 1 and 2

This is a technical amendment to provide where "last in, first out" inventory method is used, items of inventory involved in replacement are to be carried as items acquired at a cost equal to the base stock inventory cost of the item involved in the involuntary liquidation. Conforms to Section 110 of the Revenue Act of 1943.

A series of nine technical amendments proposed to be made to our act to have the same conform to Section 121 of the Federal Revenue Act of 1943. The various technical amendments provide for the nonrecognition of gain or loss on the reorganization of insolvent corporations and also provide for adjustment to basis in such circumstances. The technical amendments attempt to cover tax problems such as those as were involved in the Alabama v. Asphaltic (315 U.S. 179), Southwest Consolidated case (315 U.S. 184), and the Cement Investors case (315 U.S. 527). The amendments are to be given a prospective application and are not to be deemed as affecting in any manner the law in existence prior to the adoption of these amendments.

Amendment would provide that exchange or sale of property, pursuant to orders of the Federal Communications Commission, are to be treated as an involuntary conversion of such property. Conforms to Section 123 of the Revenue Act of 1943.

Amendment No. 20*Page 46, lines 42, 43, and 44

The amendment would provide that the provisions of Section 19.1(a) are not to be deemed as in any way limiting the State's right to offset or recoup barred deficiencies. No change in law is contemplated but merely clarification thereof.

Amendment No. 21*Page 47, line 8

The amendment proposes to eliminate the necessity of filing a protest under oath by striking out specific language requiring such oath.

Amendment No. 22*Page 48, lines 18 to 20

Amendment would provide that the commissioner may collect tax due to mathematical error on face of return by mere demand.

Amendment No. 23*Page 50, line 2

Amendment No. 24*Page 51, lines 5 to 10

Amendment would eliminate circuitous actions where a tax has been paid under protest pending action on such protest or an appeal to the Board of Equalization. In such circumstances, the protest or appeal are deemed to have been made in connection with a refund claim or an appeal on a refund claim.

Amendment No. 25*Page 51, lines 22 to 27

Amendment proposes to treat fraudulent assessment in the same manner as a deficiency assessment. Under the present act, taxpayer must pay immediately upon receiving the assessment without right of protest, etc. Amendment changes present law.

Amendment No. 26*Page 51, lines 44 to 46

Amendment would allow taxpayer to bring an action to recover a deficiency assessment paid if he has filed a claim for refund therefor or filed a protest to the proposed assessment.

Amendment No. 27*Page 53, line 7

Amendment provides that the amendments affecting computation of taxes are applicable to income years "ending after December 31, 1944" and all of the other amendments in this bill are to become effective immediately.

EXPLANATION OF ASSEMBLY BILL NO. 913, AS AMENDED MAY 10, 1945, PROPOSING AMENDMENTS TO THE CORPORATION INCOME TAX ACT

By Charles J. McColgan, Franchise Tax Commissioner

Amendment No. 1*Page 2, lines 26 and 29

More procedure amendment striking out language which was unnecessary; that is, "incorporated" and "shall not be taxed" were eliminated, because of the language contained in lines 19 and 20, page 2, of the bill.

Amendment No. 2*Page 9, lines 17 to 21, inclusive

Amendment provides that cancellation of corporate indebtedness by a stockholder does not result in income to corporation except to extent to tax benefit which accrued to corporation as a result of such indebtedness.

Interest deduction allowed to the extent of intangible income included in measure of tax or to the extent in excess of such income excluded from measure of tax, whichever is the greater.

Amendment No. 4*Page 11, lines 8 and 9

Deductions allowed. The act is made to conform with the Federal Act by allowing a deduction for partial bad debts "charged off".

Amendment No. 5*Page 11, lines 47 and 48

Discovery value as basis for depletion prohibited to more mines.

Amendment provides for percentage depletion for more mines.

Amendment No. 8*Page 13, lines 32 to 36, inclusive

Present Section 7(i) places a burden upon the Building and Loan Commissioner of establishing an average rate of interest on money borrowed by building and loan and saving and loan institutions. That commissioner properly complains that the impossible is placed upon him and has asked the Franchise Tax Commissioner to eliminate this problem by allowing a deduction for the entire amount paid by such associations on their withdrawable shares. This amendment complies with the request of the Building and Loan Commissioner by providing for such a deduction by such mutual associations.

Amendment No. 9*Page 14, lines 17 and 18 and 30 to 41, inclusive

The amendment makes the provision relating to deduction for charitable contributions more liberal in respect to contributions to Veterans' organizations.

Page 17, lines 30 to 48, inclusive; page 18, lines 1 to 30, inclusive

Amendment proposes to extend until December 31, 1945, the time within which all taxpayers can qualify their pension trusts for the purpose of claiming a deduction under the Corporation Income Tax Act for contributions thereto. The Federal Government recently extended the same time six months, and this amendment merely fits in and conforms our act to the Federal practice.

Page 20, lines 4 to 6, inclusive

Amendment merely clarifies the act to specifically provide that any amount otherwise allowable as a deduction is not deductible if it is allocable to income excluded from the measure of the tax even though there may not be any of that particular type of income during any particular year.

Page 23, lines 16 and 17

This is a technical amendment to provide where "last in, first out" inventory method is used, items of inventory involved in replacement are to be carried as items acquired at a cost equal to the base stock inventory cost of the item involved in the involuntary liquidation. Conforms to Section 110 of the Revenue Act of 1943.

Asphaltic* (315 U.S. 179), Southwest Consolidated case (315 U.S. 184), and the Cement Investors case (315 U.S. 527). The amendments are to be given a prospective application and are not to be deemed as affecting in any manner the law in existence prior to the adoption of these amendments.

Page 29, lines 24 to 50, inclusive

Amendment would provide that exchange or sale of property, pursuant to orders of the Federal Communications Commission, are to be treated as an involuntary conversion of such property. Conforms to Section 123 of the Revenue Act of 1943.

The proposed amendment would conform our act to Section 128(a) of the Revenue Act of 1943. It provides for the denial of deductions, otherwise allowable, in cases where a corporation was acquired (after October 5, 1940) for the "principal purpose" of evasion or avoidance of tax. The amendment would not change the law but merely codify the rule of Higgins v. Smith (308 U.S. 473).

Amendment would provide that the commissioner may collect tax due to mathematical error on face of return by mere demand.

Amendment No. 18

Page 42, lines 50 to 52, inclusive

The amendment would provide that the provisions of Section 19.1(a) are not to be deemed as in any way limiting the State's right to offset or recoup barred deficiencies. No change in law is contemplated but merely clarification thereof.

Amendment merely eliminates the necessity of filing a refund claim under oath by striking out specific language providing for such requirement.

Amendment would eliminate circuitous actions where a tax has been paid under protest pending action on such protest or an appeal to the Board of Equalization. In such circumstances, the protest or appeal are deemed to have been made in connection with a refund claim or an appeal on a refund claim.

Amendment proposes to treat a fraudulent assessment in the same manner as a deficiency assessment. Under the present act, taxpayer must pay immediately upon receiving the assessment without right of protest, etc. Amendment changes present law.

Amendment No. 22*Page 45, lines 36 to 38, inclusive

Amendment would allow taxpayer to bring an action to recover a deficiency assessment paid if he has filed a claim for refund therefor or filed a protest to the proposed assessment.

EXPLANATION OF ASSEMBLY BILL NO. 1518, AS AMENDED MARCH 27, 1945, PROPOSING AMENDMENTS TO THE PERSONAL INCOME TAX ACT

By Charles J. McColgan, Franchise Tax Commissioner

To: Hon. Frank W. Mixter, Chairman, Senate Revenue and Taxation Committee, and Members Thereof

From: Chas. J. McColgan Franchise Tax Commissioner

Re: Assembly Bill No. 1518 as amended in Assembly March 27, 1945

This bill is the usual administrative bill sponsored by the Franchise Tax Commissioner. It contains about forty-seven amendments which merely conform the State Income Tax Act to the Federal Income Tax Act with exceptions relating to rates and personal exemptions and some other relatively unimportant items, and provides for certain procedural administrative changes. These forty-seven amendments do not affect the rate of tax and will not increase or decrease the overall revenue picture.

In addition to these forty-seven amendments, there are approximately fifty technical amendments which do not change the present law in any respect but merely correct errors made by the codifiers of the act in 1943. These fifty amendments merely assure us that the Personal Income Tax Law in code form would conform exactly to the old Personal Income Tax Act which it has codified.

Attached hereto are specific explanations to the forty-seven specific amendments heretofore referred to.

Amendment provides that the 1943 law codifying the Personal Income Tax Act is to take effect on the effective date of Assembly Bill No. 1518.

Amendment No. 2*Page 1, line 7

In the bill as originally introduced and as amended in Assembly on March 12, 1945, Section 6 proposed to carry forward Governor Warren's tax reduction plan for two more years in connection with the simplified method of filing State income tax returns; and Sections 114 to 119, inclusive, proposed to carry forward the same reduction plan for two more years in connection with the ordinary method of filing State income tax returns. In light of the Franchise Tax Commissioner's policy of not entering into controversial and policy-making subject matters, he has stricken out all of this language with the thought that this problem would be covered by other bills now pending in the Legislature and which will undoubtedly amend these various sections of the Personal Income Tax Law in some manner or other.

Amendment conforms to Section 5(a) of the Federal Individual Income Tax Act of 1944 (hereinafter referred to as the 1944 Federal Act). The amendment prorates "back pay", which exceeds 15 per cent of gross income in any particular year, ratably over the years it was earned.

Amendment No. 5*Page 5, lines 33 to 35, inclusive

Code is clarified to insure equal treatment to annuity contract beneficiaries regardless of the State Act under which the employer receives a deduction for his contributions under the contract.

Compensation and mustering-out pay of members of the armed forces exempt.

Amendment No. 7*Page 6, line 28

Technical error; changed "estate" tax to "inheritance" tax.

Amendment No. 8*Page 6, lines 42 and 43

Deduction allowed for partial debt "charged off".

Amendment No. 9*Page 7, lines 28-29

Technical error in language of original bill corrected.

Amendment No. 10*Page 7, lines 32 to 47, inclusive

$500 deduction allowed for the blind.

Amendment No. 11*Page 11, lines 42 and 43

In 1943 the codifiers of the Personal Income Tax Act added two Sections "17356". This amendment eliminates one of them.

Amendment No. 12*Page 12, lines 46 and 47

Amendment would provide that where "last-in first-out" inventory method is used, the items of inventory involved in the replacement are to be carried as items acquired at a cost equal to the base stock inventory cost of the item involved in the involuntary liquidation. Amendment conforms to Section 110 of the Revenue Act of 1943.

Technical amendment adding "persons" to the section of the code preventing tax evasion, by various devices, by the various organizations, etc.

Amendment No. 14*Page 14, lines 17 to 23, inclusive

Amendment would provide that there is to be no pro ration of personal exemption and credit for dependents except in cases of returns for a fractional part of a year when a "jeopardy" assessment has been levied.

Amendment No. 15*Page 14, lines 43 and 44

Amendment eliminates conflict between Section 17564 and the effective date provisions of this bill and any future bills.

Page 15, lines 3 to 14, inclusive; page 15, lines 18 and 26; page 15, lines 42 and 43; page 16, line 18; page 16, lines 27 and 28; page 16, lines 33 to 40, inclusive; page 19, lines 35 and 36; page 19, lines 43 and 44

These 8 technical amendments conform our act to Section 121 of the Revenue Act of 1943. They provide for special treatment of reorganizations of insolvent corporations and cover tax problems recently discussed in a series of cases by the United States Supreme Court (Alabama Asphaltic, 315 U.S. 179; Southwest Consolidated, 315 U.S. 184; Cement investors, 316 U.S. 527).

These amendments are not to affect the construction of the act as it previously read, in any manner, whatsoever, but are to merely have a prospective application.

Amendment proposes to treat sales or exchanges of property pursuant to orders by the Federal Communications Commission as involuntary conversions of such property.

Amendment No. 18*Page 18, lines 23 and 24

Technical amendment tying Section 17721 and Sections 17725 and 17726 together "Timber" included with the term "property used in the trade or business" Conforms to Revenue Act of 1943

Amendment corrects technical error made in 1943.

Amendment No. 21*Page 18, lines 37 to 52, inclusive; page 19, lines 1 to 10, inclusive

Taxpayer given option to treat cutting of timber as a sale of the same. Gives taxpayer benefits of "capital assets" provisions, whereas present law does not.

Amendment No. 22*Page 19, lines 11 to 18, inclusive

Taxpayer, who is the owner, disposing of timber under a contract by which he retains an economic interest in such timber, treated as though he had sold such timber. Amendment would give such taxpayer the benefits of the "capital assets" provisions.

Amendment No. 23*Page 20, lines 10 and 12

Amendment would correct a technical error made in 1943.

Amendment No. 24*Page 20, lines 37 and 38

Discovery value as a basis for depletion is prohibited in the case of more mines.

Miscellaneous Amendments

In addition to the foregoing 47 amendments, Assembly Bill No. 1518 as amended in Assembly on March 27, 1945, contains about 50 amendments which merely correct errors committed by the codifiers of the Personal Income Tax Act during the 1943 Session of the Legislature. These amendments do not make any substantive change but assure us that the code merely codifies the Personal Income Tax Act.

EXPLANATION OF ASSEMBLY BILL NO. 911, AS AMENDED MARCH 27, 1945, PROPOSING

By Charles J. McColgan, Franchise Tax Commissioner

This bill contains all of the amendments made to Section 8 of the Bank and Corporation Franchise Tax Act which were proposed by Assembly Bill No. 912 (as amended March 12, 1945), and in addition thereto (page 11, lines 3 to 52) this bill has as its primary purpose the extension until December 31, 1945, within which corporate employers and taxpayers can qualify their pension trusts plans in order to claim a deduction under Section 8(p) of the Franchise Tax Act. This latter amendment conforms to the Federal Act which also extended the time within which such taxpayers could qualify such trusts under the Federal Act. The amendment does not affect the rates or the revenue.

All of the other italicized amendments are, as heretofore stated, exactly the same as amendments proposed to Section 8 by Assembly Bill No. 912 as amended March 12, 1945.

EXPLANATION OF ASSEMBLY BILL NO. 914, AS AMENDED MARCH 27, 1945,
PROPOSING AMENDMENTS TO THE PERSONAL INCOME TAX ACT

By Charles J. McColgan, Franchise Tax Commissioner

Page 1, lines 1 to 11; page 2, lines 1 to 48; page 3, lines 1 to 48; page 4, lines 1 to 15

This amendment consists of a strike-out of Section 17053.5 of the Revenue and Taxation Code. The bill as originally introduced would have extended for two more years Governor Warren's tax reduction program for purposes of the simplified method of paying the State income tax. Inasmuch as this issue is now pending before the Legislature in several other bills (Assembly Bills Nos. 272 and 1059 and Senate Bill No. 9), it was taken out of Assembly Bill No. 914 and the bill used for other purposes.

This series of amendments would extend until December 31, 1945, the time within which taxpayers could qualify their pension trusts plans for purposes of claiming a deduction for contributions thereto. Conforms to the Federal Act which also extended such time.

This amendment would give the commissioner the right to collect a tax based upon information in his possession without any further administrative steps if a taxpayer refuses, upon demand being made, to file a return or supply the commissioner with any information.

Under Section 18648, if no demand has been made, the taxpayer is given the right to a hearing and the right to protest, etc., any assessment made by the commissioner where the taxpayer has failed to file a return. The only difference between Section 18682 of the Code and Section 18648 is that in the latter section the commissioner has not demanded or requested taxpayer to file information or a return. Under the former section, if such a demand has been made the tax may be collected immediately without giving the taxpayer any further administrative remedies prior to collection.

EXPLANATION OF ASSEMBLY BILL NO. 915, PROPOSING AMENDMENTS TO THE BANK AND CORPORATION FRANCHISE TAX ACT

By Chas. J. McColgan, Franchise Tax Commissioner

The amendment is contained on page 1, line 20. It strikes out "4 per centum" and inserts in lieu thereof "3.4 per centum".

The reason for the proposed amendment is simply that ordinary corporations now pay 3.4 per cent under Section 7.5 of the Franchise Tax Act as added in 1943. Therefore, this amendment proposes to change the bank rate formula to the same per centum.

Stating the explanation in another way, through use of formula, it may be explained as follows: Prior to Section 7.5, the bank rate formula was as follows:
Four per cent plus personal property taxes of ordinary corporations minus 4 per cent net income of ordinary corporations plus their personal property taxes.

After Section 7.5, the commissioner believes that in line with the reduction given to ordinary corporations, the formula should now read as follows:

Four per cent plus personal property taxes of ordinary corporations minus 3.4 per cent net income of ordinary corporations plus their personal property taxes.

It is the commissioner's understanding that if the 15 per cent credit is continued for two years, the corporations affected by this change have no objection thereto. It is noted that based upon 1943 income it is estimated that this amendment would merely increase the tax burden of banks and financial corporations by only $12,000. They are now paying approximately four million dollars a year.

This act is hereby declared to be an urgency measure necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety within the meaning of Section 1 of Article IV of the Constitution and shall therefore go into immediate effect. A statement of the facts constituting such necessity is as follows:

That the flood control project contemplated in this act has been recommended by the United States Army Engineers for immediate construction so as to prevent the interruption in the movement of war freight and troops to the Pacific War Zone and the Federal Government has made available funds to meet the cost for the construction of such project and has made available material and labor so that the work of construction may go forward immediately. That unless the floods from the Lytle and Cajon Creeks are controlled by the immediate construction of such project, three transcontinental railroads, two main State highways, numerous war industries, as well as the City of San Bernardino and the City of Colton and the inhabitants thereof will be exposed to the dangers from floods during the coming winter. That heretofore floods from said Lytle and Cajon Creeks have assumed such proportions that the transportation systems of said railroads have been completely paralyzed for long periods of time, State Highways and bridges have been destroyed, interrupting the flow of traffic and preventing the transportation of army supplies and troops to the Pacific War Zone. That the prosecution of the Pacific War and the movement of war material and troops into that war zone is largely dependent upon the said railroad system and highways, and that interruption of such traffic will materially endanger the prosecution of such war. That the seriousness of such condition is emphasized by the demand of the U. S. Army Engineers that the work upon such project be commenced immediately and prosecuted diligently to completion. That in order to proceed with such project and have said work proceed forthwith, it is necessary that the moneys herein appropriated be made available immediately for the purposes herein stated.

"SEC. 2. A new section is hereby added to the Agricultural Code, to be numbered 1190 and to read:

1190. The purpose of this chapter is to promote, foster and encourage the intelligent and orderly marketing of agricultural products through cooperation; and to eliminate speculation and waste; and to make the distribution of agricultural products between producer and consumer as direct as can be efficiently done; and to stabilize the marketing of agricultural products. It is here recognized that agriculture is characterized by individual production in contrast to the group or factory system that characterizes other forms of individual production; and that the ordinary form of corporate organization permits industrial groups to combine for the purpose of group production and the ensuing group marketing and that the public has an interest in permitting farmers to bring their industry to the high degree of efficiency and merchandising skill evidenced in the manufacturing industries; and that the public interest urgently needs to prevent the migration from the farm to the city in order to keep up farm production and to preserve the agricultural supply of the nation; and that the public interest demands that the farmer be encouraged to attain a superior and more direct system of marketing in the substitution of merchandising for the blind, unscientific and speculative selling of crops.

SEC. 3. Section 1191 of the Agricultural Code is hereby amended to read:

1191. As used in this chapter:

(a) "Products" includes horticultural, viticultural, forestry, dairy, live stock, poultry, bee and any farm products.

(b) "Member" includes members of associations without capital stock and holders of common stock in associations organized with shares of stock.

(c) "Association" means any corporation organized under this chapter. An association will be deemed incorporated under this chapter or organized under this chapter and will be deemed a producer of products within the meaning of this chapter when it is functioning under, or is subject to, the provisions of this chapter, irrespective of whether it was originally incorporated under such provisions or was incorporated under other provisions."

"SEC. 9. Section 1200 of the Agricultural Code is hereby amended to read:

[A majority vote of the members or shares of stock issued and outstanding and entitled to vote, or the written assent of a majority of the members or of stockholders representing a majority of all the shares of stock issued and outstanding and entitled to vote.] The vote or written assent of shareholders or members holding at least a majority of the voting power is necessary to adopt such by-laws and is effectual to repeal or amend any by-laws, or to adopt additional by-laws.

The power to repeal and amend the by-laws, and adopt new by-laws, may, by a similar vote, or similar written assent, be delegated to the board of directors, which authority may, by a similar vote, or similar written assent, be revoked. Each association, under its by-laws, may provide for any or all of the following matters:

(a) The time, place and manner of calling and conducting its meetings. Meetings of members or stockholders shall be held at the place as provided in the by-laws; and if no provision be made, then in the city where the principal place of business is located at a place designated by the board of directors. Subject to the provisions of the general corporation law, the number of directors may be changed by a by-law duly adopted by the shareholders or members.

(j) The number and qualification of members of stockholders of the association and the conditions precedent to membership or ownership of common stock; the method, time and manner of permitting members to withdraw or the holders of common stock to transfer their stock; the manner of assignment and transfer of the interest of members, and of the shares of common stock; the conditions upon which and time when membership of any member shall cease; the automatic suspension of the rights of a member when he ceases to be eligible to membership in the association; and the mode, manner and effect of the expulsion of a member; the manner of determining the value of a member's interest and provision for its purchase by the association upon the death or withdrawal of a member or upon the expulsion of a member or forfeiture of his membership, or at the option of the association, the purchase at a price fixed by conclusive appraisal by the board of directors; and the conditions and terms for the repurchase by the corporation from its stockholders of their stock upon their disqualification as stockholders. In case of the expulsion of a member, and where the by-laws do not provide any procedure or penalty, the board of directors shall equitably and conclusively appraise his property interest in the association and shall fix the amount thereof in money, which shall be paid to him within one year after such expulsion.

SEC. 10. Section 1202 of the Agricultural Code is hereby amended to read:

1202. The by-laws may provide that:

(a) The territory in which the association has members shall be divided into districts and that directors shall be elected from the several districts. In any such case, the by-laws shall specify the number of directors to be elected by each district, the manner and method of reapportioning the directors and of redistricting the territory covered by the association.

(b) Primary elections shall be held to nominate directors. Where the by-laws provide that the territory in which the association has members shall be divided into districts, the by-laws may also provide that the results of the primary elections in the various districts shall be final and must be ratified at the annual meeting of the association.

(c) The territory in which the association has members shall be divided into districts, and that the directors shall be elected by representatives or advisers, who themselves have been elected by the members or stockholders from the several territorial districts. In any such case, the by-laws shall specify the number of representatives or advisers to be elected by each district, the manner and method of reapportioning the representatives or advisers and of redistricting the territory covered by the association.

Such director shall represent primarily the interest of the general public in such associations. The directors so [nominated] chosen shall have the same powers and rights as other directors. Such directors shall not number more than one-fifth of the entire number of directors.

(e) The by-laws may provide for an executive committee and may allot to such committee all the functions and powers of the board of directors, subject to the general direction and control of the board."

Remarks of Senator Dorsey

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, May 22, 1945

MR. PRESIDENT: One hundred twenty-six years today marked the first trans-ocean crossing under steam power—to be exact, on May 22, 1819.

The Congress of the United States, in 1933, provided for the annual observance of this day as "National Maritime Day," at which time the American Merchant Marine was of little importance so far as the world markets were concerned. Thereafter, "National Maritime Day" has been observed year after year. But it was not until 1937 that the United States Maritime Commission embarked upon a program in which many cargo ships were to be constructed.

It is reported that in 1939, the United States controlled something less than one-seventh of all the world's ocean shipping. However, in 1941, upon the entry of the United States into the present conflict, the building of the Merchant Marine began in earnest, since which time the American Merchant Marine has rightfully secured the commendation of all the Allied powers for the efficient service rendered our Country and its allies in delivering men, munitions, and materiel to the many world fighting fronts in volume theretofore deemed impossible. These American vessels have been manned by American seamen; these men have sailed these vessels into every combat area and beachhead with men and materiel. The casualty list of men and ships is the highest proportionately of all our services.

It is now reported that the United States controls more than two-thirds of all the world's shipping, and has more than 4,000 merchant vessels operating under the War Shipping Administration; the dead-weight tonnage has increased from 11,000 tons in 1942 to over 45,000,000 tons on this day; hence, "National Maritime Day" in this year finds the American Merchant Marine not only important in world trade, but it has a monopoly in world trade.

It is therefore hoped that the American Merchant Marine will be governed in peace time by a policy allowing the ships of our Country to compete profitably with foreign ships.

Now, therefore, Mr. President, I move that when this Senate does recess today, that it shall do so in commendation of the services of the men of the Merchant Marine and in commemoration of National Maritime Day.

MESSAGES FROM THE GOVERNOR

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE

Sacramento 14, May 22, 1945

To the Honorable Members of the Senate,

State of California

Sacramento, California

GREETINGS: I am returning herewith, without my signature, Senate Bill No. 168, entitled: "An act to amend Sections 1730 and 1771 of Title XI of Part III of the Code of Civil Procedure, relating to conciliation proceedings."

My objections to this bill are as follows:

As originally introduced, this bill repealed those provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure relating to conciliation proceedings. As amended in its passage through the Legislature, the provision for repeal was taken out and it was provided that the provisions with regard to conciliation proceedings should be applicable only in counties having a population in excess of 900,000.

I am advised by the Attorney General and the Legislative Counsel that the Legislature is without power to so classify counties for the purpose of this bill. Inasmuch as I am convinced that the bill in its final form is unconstitutional, I am withholding my approval.

Respectfully submitted.

EARL WARREN, Governor

Message read.

MESSAGES FROM THE GOVERNOR

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE

Sacramento 14, May 22, 1945

To the Honorable Members of the Senate,

*State of California
Sacramento, California*

GREETINGS: The vital importance of basic industry in California as a foundation for full employment in the postwar years, has been repeatedly emphasized. Attention has been directed to it by the report of the Assembly Interim Committee on Postwar Rehabilitation, and by the reports submitted to you by the Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission.

Of all the war-induced development of industry in our State, no unit is of greater importance than the Fontana Steel Mill. Constructed for war needs, it can become a foundation for great industrial advances in peacetime.

The fact that this is a daring venture of private enterprise as distinguished from one dependent upon Government initiative alone makes its conversion problems different from those of any Government owned facility. I am gratified to note that all Members of Congress from California have directed a letter to Honorable John Snyder, Federal Loan Administrator, inviting his attention to the need for early and constructive decisions to make possible the preservation of this enterprise.

There is a common National concern over the need for such preservation and expansion of industry as will promote full employment. We may assume that there will be a common interest in a course of action which will insure a competitive opportunity for this vital California enterprise. But we cannot safely assume that the officials of the National Government are as conscious as we, and as the California Members in Congress, of the four immediate concerns which face us.

The first is that a truly competitive opportunity be insured for this enterprise promptly.

The second is that the postwar operation of this and similar Western facilities be in the hands of those who have both intelligent self interest and intelligent public interest in the development of the Western economy.

The third is that in the reconversion of this, as well as other Western war industries, the fullest consideration should be given to programs which contemplate the continued operation of these plants by those who pioneered them, not only as a recognition of what they have done to balance our economy but also as additional assurance to people in interdependent enterprises that a determined effort will be made here in peacetime to perpetuate and expand the opportunities which they have created.

The fourth is that the Federal Government act immediately on conversion policy for the Fontana plant and other basic Western industry.

For these reasons I am respectfully suggesting for consideration of the Senate and the Assembly the adoption of an appropriate resolution expressing the concern of the Legislature for prompt action to make possible the retention of this basic industry as a unit of our postwar competitive economy. I am further suggesting that a copy of such resolution as may be adopted by you be transmitted to the Honorable John Snyder, Federal Loan Administrator.

Respectfully submitted.

EARL WARREN, Governor

Message read and ordered printed in the Journal.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, OFFICE OF LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL

*Honorable Elwyn S. Bennett, Assembly Chamber
State Capitol,
Sacramento, California*

Assembly Bill No. 130, County Ambulance Service, No. 5444

DEAR MR. BENNETT: You have asked us whether Assembly Bill No. 130, as proposed to be amended to restrict ambulance service to counties having a population in excess of one million is constitutional.

In our opinion the bill would be held constitutional.

Assembly Bill No. 130, as amended in Assembly April 9, 1945, authorizes the board of supervisors of each county to purchase ambulances and establish an ambulance service to care for persons in need of immediate hospital service. It provides that the patient shall pay for the service if not indigent.

This appears to be in furtherance of a public purpose for the public health, safety and welfare, and similar to other authority given the board of supervisors in Sections 4041 to 4041r of the Political Code. In practically all of these sections it is provided that the board of supervisors "may" exercise certain powers. In only a few cases is it provided that the board "shall" exercise the powers. A general law granting power to be exercised in the discretion of the board of supervisors is not invalid because it does not provide that it must be exercised.

The amendments restrict this service to counties having a population in excess of one million.

Such classification will be sustained if there is any natural and intrinsic difference between the classes which is related to the purposes of the legislation. It appears to us that such relation exists in Assembly Bill No. 130.

Counties with smaller population are less concentrated, have less traffic hazard, and are less industrialized. In a county with a large concentrated population, hazard of injury is greater and more people are subject to sudden illness, requiring greater expediency and ambulance service in order to transport them to hospitals for the care needed. This distinction appears to us to justify the classification made by the bill.

Very truly yours,

FRED B. WOOD, Legislative Counsel
By JOSEPH L. KNOWLES, Deputy

RESOLUTIONS

Relative to the Commemoration of the Eighty-second birthday of Frank P. Doyle, "The Father of The Golden Gate Bridge"

By this little token of appreciation of his long and valued service for public welfare and development, the Senate of the State of California joins in extending hearty felicitations to Frank P. Doyle of Santa Rosa, the "Father of the Golden Gate Bridge" and in so doing, expresses the hope that he will be spared for more years to come to pursue his continuing efforts in further promoting the advancement of his beloved Native State of California.

On Decoration Day, May 30, 1945, Mr. Doyle commemorates his eighty-second birthday. He was born in Petaluma, Sonoma County and as a young man moved to Santa Rosa, where he assisted his father, the late Manville Doyle, in the founding and organizing of the Exchange Bank and succeeded his father as President of this great financial institution at the latter's death many years ago. Mr. Doyle is now the oldest banker in point of years of service in this State and is still actively engaged in his duties as a bank president.

Long before the Golden Gate Bridge was built, Mr. Doyle urged the construction of the span across the bay from the Marin shore to San Francisco and finally as a result of his constant endeavor, the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District was formed and through the eminent skill of the late famous engineer Joseph Strauss, was designed and built and is now classified as "The Eighth Wonder of the World." Since the inception of the bridge district, Mr. Doyle has been a member of the directorate. As a token of appreciation of the pioneer's deep concern in the building of the bridge, he was signally honored in being the first person to drive across the Golden Gate Bridge prior to its formal opening for regular transportation. On this initial drive across the bridge he was accompanied by a warm personal friend, J. H. Williams of Santa Rosa.

Mr. Doyle is a past president of the Redwood Empire Association, is now and for many years has been a director of the California State Automobile Association and a close associate of former Senator Arthur H. Breed, Senior. His benefactions have included the gift of the picturesque Doyle Park in Santa Rosa, where thousands of children and older persons enjoy recreation. He is also identified with extensive agricultural and horticultural pursuits and interested in many public and private enterprises.

In recognition of the achievements of Frank P. Doyle, the Senate of the State of California adopts this tribute with the accompaniment of its best wishes for "Many Happy Returns of the Day" and a continuance of activity and happiness. "Happy Birthday to You—Mr. Doyle!"

Resolution read, and on motion of Senator Slater, adopted.

RESOLUTIONS

The following resolution was offered:

By Senator Hulse:

Senate Resolution No. 116

Relative to a Senate Committee on State and Local Taxation to make inquiry into every phase of taxation, creating the Committee and defining its powers and duties.

WHEREAS, The economy of the State of California has during the past four years gone through a revolutionary change so that the State may now be classified as industrial rather than agricultural; and

WHEREAS, This change has resulted in bringing into the State industries and properties of large value which have not previously been considered in our tax structure, and has created new governmental problems; and

WHEREAS, The increased population incident to this change in our economy has also created new governmental problems and made new demands upon both local and State Government; and

WHEREAS, The war industries, though they have given rise to unprecedented revenues for the State, have created new problems requiring large expenditures of money both by State and local governments, and the tax returns to local government have not been commensurate with the added costs of the services required; and

WHEREAS, The unprecedented growth of motor transportation and the change over to the use of diesel fuel in motor transportation during the war period, together with the added population of our State and the concentration in industrial centers, has materially changed the requirements for the support of highways, streets, and bridges; and

WHEREAS, The transition from war conditions to peace conditions will create particularly difficult problems for local and State Governments in California, drastically affecting both the demands upon Government and the revenue structure; and

WHEREAS, It appears that there may be large sums in the way of Federal subsidies granted both to the State and local governments, in the postwar period, which will directly affect the revenue structure and will require careful examination to coordinate the disposition of these subsidies equitably into the entire revenue program of both State and local government; and

WHEREAS, From the beginning of the State's History, the ad valorem tax has been and still is the fiscal mainstay of local government and has not been adjusted to meet the new conditions; and

WHEREAS, The administration of taxation by the State and by the local governments has not been modernized, in fact has not been materially changed to bring it into line with present or prospective needs; and

WHEREAS, The relative burden of our several taxes on the different classes of taxpayers and different classes of property has not been fully determined; and

WHEREAS, There are new classes of property and rights that have grown up in the State that are not subject to taxation; and

WHEREAS, The return to peace time conditions will undoubtedly see the falling off in revenue from our present taxes and tax rates, coupled with a demand for increased and additional governmental services and the need for greater revenues to meet the cost of such services; and

WHEREAS, Neither the State nor local governments have available to their legislative bodies information concerning all the varied phases of this problem adequate to legislative consideration and action in the endeavor to find and effect a solution; and

WHEREAS, For many years the burdens of Government have been increasing both for the State and local governments, including many fixed charges not controllable by administrative bodies but brought about in answer to the demand of the people expressed in continuing legislation or in constitutional requirements, it is imperative that an appraisal be made so that revenues may be made adequate to meet the demands of Government, both local and State, and the burdens of taxation may be equitably distributed upon and among the several classes of property and of taxpayers; now, therefore, be it

1. The Senate Committee on State and Local Taxation is hereby created and appointed, and authorized and directed, to ascertain, study, and analyze all facts relating to or in any way bearing upon any of the subjects mentioned in the recitals of this resolution, particularly including but not limited to each phase of each and every tax (as herein defined) imposed in this State by any governmental agency (State, local, or Federal); the incidence and burden of each such tax upon property, business and the taxpayer and the ability of the latter to pay, also the productivity of each such tax in relation to its cost of administration and in relation to the purposes for which imposed, each of which factors of each tax the committee shall consider, weigh, appraise and evaluate with each such factor of every other tax; the present and prospective revenue needs of each agency of Government and the most equitable means of meeting each such need, taking into consideration all of the varied forms of tax now in use or that might be devised and put into use, and all existing sources of revenue and new sources of revenue that might be developed; administrative methods and procedures which now obtain in respect to each such tax and how they might be improved; present and prospective governmental expenditures of each governmental agency and the bearing thereof upon and relation to each and every form of tax now imposed or that might be devised and imposed; and the operation, effect, administration, enforcement, and needed revision of any and all laws in any way bearing upon or relating to the subjects of this resolution; and to report thereon to the Senate, including in the reports its recommendations for appropriate legislation.

Bill ordered transmitted to the Assembly.

EXPLANATION OF VOTE ON SENATE BILL NO. 800

May 29, 1945

I voted for Senate Bill No. 800 after being assured by the author of the measure that he would accept my amendments to Section 18, the effort of which would be to strike from the bill those provisions which might permit the Board of Equalization to disregard court decisions defining a bona fide restaurant, as that term is used in the Constitution.

SENATOR BYRL R. SALSMAN
SENATOR ED FLETCHER

COMMUNICATIONS

The following communication was received and read, and on motion of Senator Hatfield, ordered printed in the Journal:

OFFICE OF LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL
SACRAMENTO 2, May 28, 1945

Honorable George J. Hatfield, Senate Chamber
State Capitol, Sacramento, California

Effect of passage of Budget Bill, Assembly Bill No. 500, by a majority, but less than a two-thirds vote—No. 5666.

DEAR SENATOR HATFIELD: You direct attention to the report by the Director of Finance that "fixed charges and recurrent appropriations for 1945-47 already on the statute books prior to the enactment of the 1945 Budget Bill, * * * exclusive of the appropriations for the Public School System" exceed the "maximum allowable under the five per cent limitation" prescribed by Section 34a of Article IV of the State Constitution. (Senate Journal, May 21, 1945, page 2992.)

You ask what, in the light of that fact, would happen in respect to the support of the State Government, commencing July 1 next, should the Budget Bill, Assembly Bill No. 500, receive a majority but not a two-thirds vote in either house of the Legislature.

The result, in my opinion, would be a failure of funds in respect to all State functions (except the public school system) supported from the General Fund.

The Constitution declares that (after the prescribed limit has been reached) all subsequent appropriations from the General Fund (other than for support of the Public School System) not passed by a two-thirds vote in each house "shall be void."

This would render void the General Fund appropriations for the support of such offices and functions as these:

Supreme Court, Judicial Council, District Courts of Appeal (Items 19-24).
Governor (Items 26-27).

Secretary of State, Controller, Board of Equalization, Treasurer, Attorney General (Items 37, 107, 111, 136, 178).

Departments of Finance, Industrial Relations, Public Health, Social Welfare (Items 115-121; 137-139, 141-144; 228, 229, 231; 247, 248).

State Prisons and the Department of Corrections (Items 45-74).

State Hospitals and the Department of Institutions (Items 145-171).

Legislative expenses other than salaries and mileage of members (Items 2, 3, 5, 6, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12).

State's share of salaries of all judges of the superior court (Item 25).

Some of the State agencies here listed are supported in part from special funds. The functions thus supported could go on. In a few cases salaries are fixed by the Constitution. Those, I think, would continue payable. Save for such exceptions, there would, in my opinion, be no money available for expenditure (July 1, 1945 to June 30, 1947) by any of the agencies or for any of the purposes listed above, unless and until appropriations are made by other bills passed by a two-thirds vote in each house.

Yours very truly,

FRED B. WOOD, Legislative Counsel

Amendments read and adopted.

Bill ordered printed, re-engrossed, and to third reading.

COMMUNICATIONS

The following communication was received and read, and on motion of Senator Cunningham, ordered printed in the Journal:

OFFICE OF LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL
Sacramento 2, May 26, 1945

*Honorable R. R. Cunningham, Senate Chamber,
State Capitol.*

SENATE BILL NO. 811 RE CALIFORNIA RESORT DISTRICT ACT NO. 5461

DEAR SENATOR CUNNINGHAM: Responding to your request for a report and opinion concerning the effect and constitutionality of Senate Bill No. 811 which proposes to amend the "California Resort District Act"; Statutes of 1931, Chapter 1208, page 2521; Deering's 1944 Act No. 6555, we submit the following to your consideration.

Opinion

The measure conflicts with the constitutional provisions of Section 24, Article IV, relating to statutory titles, and to the provision of Section 11, Article XI, relating to municipal police power.

Analysis

The foundation to the objection relating to the title lies in the body of the bill. The objection to the title will be more readily understood if the objection to the body of the bill is discussed first.

The bill adds a new division to the act to be designated as Division 2. It contains three sections numbered 1, 2, and 4. The constitutional objection lies against such Section 4.

First, it should be observed that the bill does not affect the subject matter of the present law. The present law remains as it is without change. The effect of the amendment is to establish a type of district which is referred to in the title as an "alternative organization of the board of directors" and an "alternatively organized district." The district proposed by the amendment is a new type substantially very different from the present one. This new type of district is designed to include not only all the powers provided in the present law, but adds powers now confined to municipalities organized under the Municipal Corporation Act of 1883, relating to sixth class cities.

The Section 4

This section provides that in addition to the powers prescribed by the present law, districts to be organized under the proposed amendment "shall have and enjoy and may exercise all or any of the powers now conferred by statute upon cities of the sixth class."

Notwithstanding the broad nature of the quoted delegation of municipal power, just what is thereby intended is uncertain. It is quite certain that it is not intended to provide a new general law for the organization of municipal corporations, which in providing only for a board of seven directors, a treasurer, and an engineer, does not provide for judicial and other administrative officers. Thus it is indicated very definitely that a new municipal corporation act is not intended and that it is intended that the proposed organization is to be a "district" as distinguished from a municipal corporation.

The Delegation of Police Power

The police power of the State, which is merely an expression meaning the power to legislate and govern, is by the Constitution primarily delegated to the Legislature. Otherwise than that, as provided in Section 11, Article XI, of the Constitution, the police power is delegated to counties, cities, towns and townships. Districts are not included within the category of political organizations which may exercise police powers. Law on this subject is firmly established by the rulings of the Supreme and Appellate Courts.

One of the earlier cases under the present Constitution is In re Werner (1900) 129 Cal. 567, 572-574 (2) 575 (3). It is there held "A sanitary district, no more than an irrigation district, or a reclamation district, or a drainage district, possesses police powers properly belonging to cities and municipal bodies exercising local governmental functions. Such districts are created for the purpose generally of some special local improvement, and should exercise only such powers as may be conferred upon them by the Legislature in the line of the object of their creation. Although in the nature of public corporations, they are not municipal corporations * * *. The Legislature is also required by general law to provide for the incorporation, organization, and classification in proportion to population of cities and towns. * * * and it is further declared: 'Any county, city, town, or township may make and enforce within its limits all such local, police, sanitary, and other regulations as are not in conflict with general laws * * *'. The question here is whether the Legislature can graft upon an act designed for some local improvement * * * a subject also which clearly falls within the police powers possessed by cities and other like corporations formed and organized for governmental purposes. Under the rule of construction, Expressio unius est exclusio alterius, the Legislature has no authority to create other public corporate bodies—whether called districts or by any other name—and clothe them with the power to make and enforce local, police, sanitary, and other regulations conferred by the Constitution upon counties, cities, towns, or townships."

McFarland, J., concurring said: "the Legislature cannot, under any circumstances, delegate to such a thing as a sanitary district the power of enacting penal legislation. That power must be confined to the municipalities mentioned in the Constitution which are given police powers, etc."

In Randolph v. County of Stanislaus (1919) 44 Cal. App. 322, 327 (2), it is said: "an irrigation district formed under the laws of the State of California is not a municipal corporation. A municipal corporation in its strict and proper sense is the body politic and corporate constituted by the incorporation of the inhabitants of a city or town for the purposes of local government thereof."

The decision in Gilbert v. Stockton Port Dist. (1936) 7 Cal. (2) 384, holds: "The act providing for the creation of the Stockton Port District declares that any port district created thereunder is a public corporation created for municipal purposes, and delegates to the district the power among others: 'To enact necessary police regulations * * *'. Held: 'The police power is vested primarily in the State. Section 11 of Article XI provides, 'any county, city, town, or township may make and enforce within its limits all such local police, sanitary, and other regulations as are not in conflict with general laws.' In the enumeration of political subdivisions to which the Constitution has granted the right to make and enforce police regulations, we do not find port districts, and it is a rule of recognized construction that the expression of one thing necessarily involves the exclusion of other things not expressed."

In Laguna Beach etc. Dist. v. County of Orange (1939) 30 Cal. App. (2d) 740, the court said "Plaintiff is a county water district organized under an act of the Legislature. (Stats. 1913, ch. 592, p. 1049; D. A. 9124) * * *. A municipal corporation is created under authority of the State whereby a portion of the State and the inhabitants therein are organized into a political entity that exercises legislative, executive and judicial powers. (Sec. 6, Art. XI et seq., Const.) A city is organized to give its inhabitants certain powers of self-government and is granted broad police powers (Sec. 11, Art. XI, Const.)." "Districts of the nature just discussed (county water districts) are not municipal corporations in the contemplation of the Constitution * * *. Because it lacks the broad legislative, executive and judicial powers of a municipal corporation, it seems clear that a county water district is not a municipal corporation as that term is technically used in the laws of this State * * *. As to swamp-land, drainage, levee, and reclamation districts, similar to irrigation districts it has been held that they are not municipal corporations."

The title of the bill

The uncertainty in the section and extent of the municipal powers sought to be given to the district according to the body of the bill is reflected in the title wherein it is said that such alternatively organized districts shall have "generally the powers of a city of the sixth class."

The foregoing comment relating to the Section 4 shows definitely that notwithstanding such wording of the bill it is not intended that such districts shall have general municipal powers.

Conclusion

The title, as well as the body of the bill, is uncertain and misleading as to what municipal powers are intended to be vested in the district, and is therefore violative of Section 24 of Article IV of the Constitution.

Section 4 of the bill conflicts with Section 11, Article XI, of the Constitution and is therefore void as to municipal powers.

Very truly yours,

FRED B. WOOD, Legislative Counsel
By FRANK V. KINGTON, Deputy

Amendment No. 4

The Department may, for the protection of the State of California, insure any bridge on the State Highway System acquired or constructed under provisions of the California Toll Bridge Authority Act against all risks in any amount up to the full insurable value thereof. In case of damage or destruction, the proceeds of such insurance shall be applied to the restoration of such bridge. Any such bridge may be so insured irrespective of the retirement of all indebtedness incurred for its acquisition or construction, and the cost of such insurance shall be paid from any funds available to the department for highway purposes.

Any such bridge shall, after retirement of all indebtedness incurred for its acquisition or construction, be maintained and operated as a free bridge and the cost thereof charged to funds available for maintenance of State highways. Nothing in this section contained shall repeal or impair the provisions of Chapter 24 of the Statutes of 1933, providing for the continued collection of tolls on the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge until moneys advanced by the State are reimbursed, and said Chapter 24 is continued in full force and effect.

SEC. 2. This act is hereby declared an urgency measure necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and safety within the meaning of Section 1 of Article IV of the Constitution, and shall therefore go into immediate effect. A statement of the facts constituting such necessity is as follows:

It is anticipated that sufficient funds will be accumulated for the retirement of all indebtedness against the Carquinez and Antioch Bridges prior to the date on which this act otherwise would become effective, and there is no provision of law authorizing carrying of insurance on said bridges after the retirement of such indebtedness. Damage or destruction of said bridges, or either of them, would require expenditure of large sums of money and would place an unreasonable burden upon highway funds of this State. It is necessary that funds be available for the immediate repair or reconstruction of such bridges in order to preserve the public peace, health and safety and the facilities for public travel and transportation which said bridges now afford.

This act is necessary in order that such funds be immediately available for the financing of such repair or restoration of said bridges. It is, therefore, essential that this act go into immediate effect, and the legislature so determines that it shall become effective immediately.

It is also necessary that immediate provision be made for the maintenance and operation of said bridges as free bridges in order to avoid any necessity for continued collection of tolls thereon for purposes of maintenance or operation by reason of the provisions of Section 6 of Chapter 927 of the Statutes of 1937. It is therefore necessary that this act go into immediate effect in order to permit the maintenance and operation of each of said bridges as a toll-free bridge as well as the insurance of the same."

Amendments read and adopted.

Bill ordered printed, engrossed, and to third reading.

Senate Bill No. 991—An act to add Chapter 7 to Title 10 of Part 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure, relating to civil proceedings for franchises and permits.

The department may draw, without at the time furnishing vouchers and itemized statements, sums not to exceed in the aggregate one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000), said sums so drawn to be used as a revolving fund where cash advances are necessary. At the close of each fiscal year the moneys so drawn must be accounted for and substantiated by vouchers and itemized statements submitted to and audited by [the Department of Finance and by] the State Controller.

SEC. 3. Section 778 is added to the Vehicle Code, to read:

Said payments shall be made to the counties in proportion to the number of fee-paid vehicles registered in such counties as determined by the places of residence of the owners to whom the registration cards are issued.

The department shall, when requested by the State Controller, furnish to him a verified statement showing the number of such fee-paid vehicles registered in each county according to the records of the department for the use of the State Controller in making the apportionments provided for herein.

(b) In the event the actual domicile, residence or place of abode of an owner of any vehicle registered hereunder is in a county other than the county which the owner has designated as his place of residence in his application for registration and as shown by the records of the department, then the county auditor of the county receiving such funds from the State as hereinabove provided may draw his warrant in favor of the county wherein is located the actual domicile, residence or place of abode of such owner. Such warrant when so drawn shall be in such total sum as to cover all such vehicles as may properly be attributed to the latter county hereunder in order to secure payment to each county of sums in proportion to registration of vehicles therein according to the actual residences of the owners thereof.

SEC. 5. Section 781 of the Vehicle Code is amended to read:

781. Remainder of Motor Vehicle Fund [Deposited in] Transferred to the State Highway Fund. [All moneys remaining in the motor vehicle fund after the expenditures and deductions hereinbefore authorized, shall be paid into] An amount equal to the total moneys remaining in the motor vehicle fund at the close of business on the last day of December of each year, after the expenditures and deductions authorized by this chapter, shall, during the month of February of each year, be transferred on order of the State Controller to the "State highway fund," to be expended in accordance with law.

SEC. 7. Section 11005 of the Revenue and Taxation Code is amended to read:

11005. The balance of [the money] all motor vehicle license fees and any other money deposited, in accordance with law, in the Motor Vehicle License Fee Fund during the preceding three months and remaining therein after payment of refunds therefrom during said period and after making the deductions authorized by Sections 11003 and 11004 shall, on order of the Controller at the time of making the transfers authorized by Section 11003, be disbursed as follows:

(a) Twenty per cent thereof shall be paid to the [General Fund of] Motor Vehicle Fund in the State Treasury.

(b) Forty per cent thereof shall be paid quarterly during each fiscal year to the cities and counties of this State in the proportion that the total population of each city or city and county bears to the total population of all cities and counties in this State, as [certified] determined by the [department] Controller. For the purpose of this subdivision the population of each city or city and county is that determined by the last Federal census. In the case of a city incorporated subsequent to the last census, or in the case of an unincorporated territory being annexed to a city subsequent to the last census, the department shall ascertain the population of the city or the annexed territory by multiplying the number of registered electors therein by three. In the case of the consolidation of one city with another subsequent to the last census the population of the consolidated city for the purpose of this subdivision is the aggregate population of the respective cities as determined by the last Federal census.

The money so paid shall be expended by the cities and counties for law enforcement, for the regulation and control and fire protection of highway traffic, and for any other State purpose.

(c) Forty per cent thereof shall be paid quarterly during each fiscal year to the counties and cities and counties of the State in the proportion that the population of each county or city and county bears to the total population of all the counties and cities and counties of the State, as [certified] determined by the [department] Controller. For the purpose of this subdivision the population of each county or city and county is that determined by the last Federal census.

SEC. 8. Any other provision of law to the contrary notwithstanding, the apportionment herein provided to be made from the Motor Vehicle License Fee Fund during the month of July, 1945, and the apportionment herein provided to be made from the Motor Vehicle Fund during the month of August, 1945, shall not include the apportionment of any moneys deposited in said funds which shall theretofore have been apportioned in accordance with the provisions of law as they existed prior to the effective date hereof.

SEC. 9. Whenever, under the provisions of any law heretofore or hereafter enacted, any statement of determination of population of any city, city and county, or county of this State, or any other census report, is filed with the Department of Motor Vehicles of this State by the United States Bureau of the Census, the said Department of Motor Vehicles shall, forthwith upon the receipt by it of such statement or report, deliver the same to the Controller to be retained in his office.

SEC. 10. The Motor Vehicle Support Fund is hereby abolished as of the close of business June 30, 1945, and any cash balance remaining in said fund on said date, according to the records of the Controller, shall, during the following month of July, be transferred, on order of the Controller, to the Motor Vehicle Fund. Effective July 1, 1945, any appropriations heretofore and hereafter made out of the moneys deposited in the Motor Vehicle Support Fund or the Motor Vehicle License Fee Fund for the support of the Department of Motor Vehicles shall be payable from the Motor Vehicle Fund.

SEC. 11. This act is hereby declared to be an urgency measure necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and safety within the meaning of Section 1 of Article IV of the Constitution and shall therefore go into immediate effect. A statement of the facts constituting such necessity is as follows:

The requirements for support of the Department of Motor Vehicles are such as to exceed the limitations of existing law as to said department's apportionment from the Motor Vehicle Fund and unless provision is made for adequate revenues to meet the requirements of the Department of Motor Vehicles, it will be necessary to reduce law enforcement and other functions of the department which are necessary or to provide additional funds from some other source. It is necessary that permanent provision be made to provide adequate revenues for the Department of Motor Vehicles to meet successive budgets of the department hereafter. A permanent solution of the problems involved which will provide sufficient revenues for support of the Department of Motor Vehicles without disrupting budgets for State and county highway purposes with attendant confusion is required and in order that such a solution may be made effective at the beginning of the coming biennium under the Budget Act and to avoid confusion in fiscal affairs, it is necessary that this act go into immediate effect."

Amendments read and adopted.

Summary of Previous Proceedings

In 1942, at one of the hearings of the Senate Fact-Finding Committee created by Senate Resolution No. 156 (1941), evidence was submitted pointing to the fact that improper conditions existed in boarding homes, sanitariums, and rest homes where many aged people resided. Accordingly, the Senate of California, at the Fifty-fifth Session of the State Legislature, appointed a Fact-Finding Committee on Homes and Institutions for the Aged, under Senate Resolution No. 49 (1943), for the purpose of investigating conditions in boarding homes, rest homes, sanitariums and other institutions for the aged, as well as the competency of the persons operating them, the care furnished to the aged, and the licensing and supervision of such institutions.

An investigation was conducted and hearings were held, with a report of the Senate Fact-Finding Committee on Homes and Institutions for the Aged being filed with the Senate of the State of California on May 4, 1943, as printed in the Senate Journal on pages 2752-2765. Reference is hereby made to the said report of the committee as though set forth in full herein.

The report of the committee which was filed on May 4, 1943, disclosed the following factual information:

Number of Aged and Homes Furnishing Care

Miss Martha A. Chickering, Director of the State Department of Social Welfare, testified:

	Los Angeles County	City and County of San Francisco	Alameda County	San Diego County
Number of aged receiving aid-----	65,423	11,372	7,629	7,395
Number of licensed boarding homes_	793	130	66	79
Number of licensed boarding homes caring for 15 or more aged-----	28	11	8	3
Statistics furnished by local officials:
Approximately
Licensed sanitariums and nursing homes -----	350	47	---	32

Lawrence C. Schreiber, Executive Director, Department of Public Assistance of Los Angeles County, testified that of the aged receiving aid in Los Angeles County, there are approximately 3,300 living in boarding homes, 1,700 in rest homes, and 1,400 in psychopathic rest homes; that almost 10 per cent of the aged receiving aid in Los Angeles County live in boarding homes, sanitariums and rest homes, according to the figures available in his department.

In addition to the number of licensed boarding homes, sanitariums and rest homes, it is estimated that the number of unlicensed places runs into the hundreds, according to the opinion rendered by Morris S. Siegel, Director of Sanitation and Housing of the Los Angeles City Health Department.

Sufficiency of Present Laws and Regulations

Boarding homes for the aged are governed by Sections 2300 to 2310 of the Welfare and Institutions Code, and the rules and regulations adopted by the Department, which, in substance, require a written license or permit from the State Department of Social Welfare or from one of its local accredited agencies in order for any person to receive or care for one or more persons over the age of 65 years, who is not a relative of the operator of the boarding home. Sanitariums and rest homes are not required to obtain a license or permit under State law or regulations.

Certain localities have enacted ordinances pertaining to this subject, but in most instances these are inadequate.

Conditions in Places Used for Care of the Aged

The evidence disclosed that many boarding homes for the aged, sanitariums and rest homes were improper in the following particulars:

1. Lack of sanitation and cleanliness.
2. Meager food and malnutrition.
3. Lack of linen and medical supplies.
4. Proper medical attention was not given to the aged in many instances.
5. Insufficient number of nurses and attendants.
6. Improper type of persons operating homes.
7. Physical violence to patients.
8. Lack of attention to patients who were left in a filthy condition on many occasions.
9. There are instances where there is not proper segregation of mentally and physically ill patients.

On March 23, 1943, a conference was held with State, county and city health and social welfare officials for the purpose of arriving at recommendations for the enactment of legislation covering the subject of boarding homes for the aged, sanitariums and rest homes.

When the report of the Senate Committee was filed on May 4, 1943, the Legislature was in the process of completing its business and seeking to finally adjourn; it therefore did not appear feasible to enact legislation which would under the circumstances be hurried and ill-considered. It was deemed essential that any legislation presented be thoroughly considered and carefully thought out, and all parties given an opportunity to be heard.

Accordingly the Senate Fact-Finding Committee on Homes and Institutions for the Aged was authorized, under Senate Resolution No. 134, to exercise all the powers granted to it by Senate Resolution No. 49 after the final adjournment of the Fifty-fifth Session of the Legislature, and to file its report with the Senate of the Fifty-sixth Session of the Legislature during January, 1945.

Present Inquiry

On September 5, 1944, a communication was sent to State, county and city health and welfare officials. A copy of the report of the Senate Fact-Finding Committee on Homes and Institutions for the Aged, filed with the State Senate on May 4, 1943, was enclosed with the communication, and the public officials were requested to submit their answers to pertinent questions concerning the subject of boarding homes for the aged, sanitariums and rest homes.

The questions propounded were:

- (1) Are conditions in boarding homes, rest homes and sanitariums the same now as were disclosed by the previous investigation?
- (2) Are housing facilities for the aged in boarding homes, rest homes, and sanitariums scarcer than they were in 1943?
- (3) Is there a need for State legislation covering the subject of boarding homes for aged, hospitals, sanitariums, and rest homes?
- (4) Should the licensing and regulation of them be done by the State, or local officials?
- (5) Should there be a uniformity of minimum rules and regulations throughout the State?
- (6) Should a State agency maintain supervision over the local agencies in the event the matter of licensing, regulation and enforcement is delegated to local officials; if so, which State agency should be used?
- (7) If local agencies are to license and regulate boarding homes for the aged, sanitariums and rest homes, which local agencies should be charged with that responsibility?
- (8) Should commercial placement agencies be banned, or licensed and regulated; and, if so, should it be under the supervision of a State or local agency?

Written replies to the interrogatories were furnished by the following: Dr. Wilton L. Halverson, State Director of Public Health, Charles M. Wollenberg, State Director of Department of Social Welfare, Dr. H. O. Swartout, County of Los Angeles Health Officer, E. J. Bumiller, Los Angeles County Health Department, Chief of Section of Sanitation and Housing, Harry Farrell, President, Los Angeles County Public Welfare Commission, Floyd A. Walker, Los Angeles County Deputy Superintendent of Charities, Dr. George M. Uhl, Los Angeles City Health Officer, Charles L. Senn, Los Angeles City Health Department Director of Sanitation Section, M. S. Siegel, Los Angeles City Health Department, Director of Division of Institutional Inspection, William P. Mayer, San Diego County Director of Department of Public Welfare, Dr. Alex M. Leseem, San Diego County Director of Health, Dr. J. C. Geiger, City and County of San Francisco Director of Public Health.

In addition to the written communications received from the foregoing public officials, the following appeared at the hearings of the committee held on December 19th and 20th and gave oral testimony: Charles M. Wollenberg, State Director of Department of Social Welfare, C. A. Herbage, Deputy Director, State Department of Social Welfare, Dr. Wilton L. Halverson, State Director of Public Health, Floyd A. Walker, Los Angeles County Deputy Superintendent of Charities, E. J. Bumiller, Los Angeles County Health Department, Chief of Section of Sanitation and Housing, and M. S. Siegel, Los Angeles City Health Department, Director of Division of Institutional Inspection.

Summary of Answers to Interrogatories Propounded

- (1) Are conditions in boarding homes, rest homes, and sanitariums the same now as were disclosed by the previous investigation?

The general consensus is that conditions in boarding homes, sanitariums and rest homes are generally the same now as were disclosed by the previous investigation. Opinion was expressed that they are probably worse, due to the difficulty in securing the services of physicians, nurses and attendants.

- (2) Are housing facilities for the aged in boarding homes, rest homes, and sanitariums scarcer than they were in 1943?

The general consensus is that housing facilities for the aged in boarding homes, sanitariums, and rest homes are more limited now than they were in 1943. The number of licensed boarding homes has decreased slightly due in part to the housing situation and in part to the desire of some operators to enter into other activities. Many homes and institutions have long waiting lists. It was pointed out that "bootleg" operation of sanitariums and rest homes is on the increase, and that the war, as well as economic conditions, together with a lack of appropriate laws, or regulations, encourage their increase and interfere with the improvement of standards of sanitariums and rest homes.

- (3) Is there a need for State legislation covering the subject of boarding homes for aged, hospitals, sanitariums and rest homes?

It was the unanimous opinion of all witnesses who were interviewed that there is a definite need for State legislation covering the subject of boarding homes for the aged, sanitariums and rest homes. It was pointed out that there is no State law or regulation governing hospitals, sanitariums and rest homes other than maternity hospitals, tuberculosis sanitariums and mental institutions.

- (4) Should the licensing and regulation of them be done by the State, or local officials?

It was the general consensus that the original responsibility for the licensing and regulation of boarding homes for the aged, sanitariums and rest homes should rest in a State agency. However, it was the unanimous opinion of all persons interviewed that the State agency should delegate the powers to accredited local agencies.

- (5) Should there be a uniformity of minimum rules and regulations throughout the State?

It was the unanimous opinion of all witnesses that there should be a uniformity of minimum rules and regulations throughout the State and, at the same time, leave the matter of increased regulations to the respective local communities depending upon their need and facilities.

- (6) Should a State agency maintain supervision over the local agencies in the event the matter of licensing, regulation and enforcement is delegated to local officials; if so, which State agency should be used?

It was unanimously agreed that jurisdiction over the licensing and regulating of sanitariums and rest homes should be given to the State Department of Public Health, with authority being granted to it to delegate its functions to local accredited agencies.

However, there was a definite difference of opinion as to which State department should be given the jurisdiction of licensing and regulating boarding homes for the aged. It should be noted that at the present time the State Department of Social Welfare is the State agency charged with that responsibility. The testimony disclosed that there is a very thin line of demarcation, if any at all, between a boarding home for the aged, and sanitariums, or rest homes.

It can best be summarized by stating that the Social Welfare officials were of the opinion that the Department of Social Welfare should maintain jurisdiction over boarding homes for the aged, whereas Public Health officials were generally of the opinion that the Department of Public Health should exercise jurisdiction over the boarding homes for the aged.

Mr. Charles M. Wollenberg, State Director of the Department of Social Welfare, recommended that the State Department of Public Health have the jurisdiction over sanitariums and rest homes as distinguished from strictly boarding homes for the aged.

Mr. CHOTINER: Now, let us take the example of a home which has aged persons over the age of 65 years, who are ambulatory—they are able to take care of themselves. That same home will have some aged persons who come under the jurisdiction of, you might say, a rest home, or let us say that one of the aged persons is well and becomes sick to the point where that person needs attention, then you would have a home which would require a license from two State departments—one from the Department of Social Welfare and one from the Department of Public Health.

Now, do you see any obstacles in the way of enforcement in that type of situation?

Mr. WOLLENBERG: We have a feeling that we can develop legislation that will give the licensing to the department that has the major problem in that home and cooperation from the other department—that is, they can be brought in when the condition arises. In other words, we want to see legislation that will give rest homes to the Department of Public Health—definitely a nursing home or rest home and the Department of Public Health has the opportunity to call on the Department of Welfare to help solve the problems that concern the aged as to the welfare side of the problem and vice versa.

Mr. CHOTINER: Would you recommend that any home be required to have two licenses?

Mr. WOLLENBERG: No.

Mr. CHOTINER: One from the Department of Social Welfare and one from the Department of Public Health?

Mr. WOLLENBERG: I think that would be a mistake.

Mr. CHOTINER: Who, in your opinion, should be the person or the agency to determine under which department that individual place should operate?

Mr. WOLLENBERG: I think that the original request should be weighed as to the type of people they expect to take into that home originally and the department, accordingly, that operates, would grant the license. In other words, if a person applies for a license and in the discussion it is indicated they are going to take care of bed and nursing cases, semi-chronically ill cases, it should be the Department of Health. If it is a home for the aged, then the Department of Welfare.

Mr. CHOTINER: Let us take a home which strictly speaking would be considered as a boarding home for the aged. That type of a place would require a license from the Department of Social Welfare, is that correct?

Mr. WOLLENBERG: Yes.

Mr. CHOTINER: Then let us assume that that same home has some of its aged who become ill, would that type of a home then be referred to the Department of Public Health or would your department continue to handle it?

Mr. WOLLENBERG: We would discover that there were ill people in the home either by complaint or by re-investigation and if we discovered that we would call on the Department of Public Health to go into that home to see that adequate nursing care was provided to those who needed it.

Mr. CHOTINER: And if that situation arose where it looked like you needed the assistance of the Department of Public Health would you recommend then that that home come under the jurisdiction from that time on of the Public Health Department or should the Social Welfare Department continue to handle it?

Mr. WOLLENBERG: I think my policy would be that we would try to have that patient moved out of the home to a standard nursing home and continue the licensing under the State Department of Welfare.

In normal times that could be done. Today I doubt whether you could move people quickly on account of the scarcity of housing and scarcity of nursing homes, but I feel that we should legislate for a normal condition and a home that is not originally intended as a nursing home when an aged person becomes ill and the doctor decides that that illness is a permanent thing we should endeavor to assist those people in getting that person out and into a standard nursing home.

MR. CHOTINER: At this point, if I may ask Mr. Wollenberg the same question as has been propounded by Senator Dorsey. Do you see any objection to transferring the jurisdiction over boarding homes for the aged to the State Department of Public Health?

MR. WOLLENBERG: From the standpoint of transferring, no. But I think there is a responsibility on the Department of Public Welfare. When we speak of aged we must remember that we are talking of the dependent aged and not the self-supporting aged.

We have some 165,000 or 170,000 in the State Department of Social Welfare. We have the definite responsibility of safe-guarding their pensions and seeing that they are spent in a proper way under the Social Security Act. I can see where difficulties would arise with the subvention that comes from the Federal Government if we transferred that portion of the aged that are on Social Security to a department outside of the Social Security Act. In that particular activity I can see difficulty.

From a practical standpoint, none. But from the law that exists today, yes, I can see difficulties.

MR. CHOTINER: From the standpoint of merely transferring the licensing and regulation of these homes to the Department of Public Health do you feel that there would be any conflict with the Federal Law insofar as assistance from the Federal Government is concerned?

MR. WOLLENBERG: As I see the law, we are charged with going into these homes. We go into them through the power of licensing them.

MR. CHOTINER: Would you have the same authority or the same privilege of checking these homes by conference with the Department of Public Health?

MR. WOLLENBERG: With the association that we have with the Department of Public Health I know we would have no difficulty. But I don't think it would be a good procedure under which you could operate. There are hundreds of homes in which we have the ambulatory group—a group which is moving around on their own. I can see difficulty in keeping our hand in contact with that group if licenses were issued somewhere else.

SENATOR SHELLEY: I would like to ask either one of these gentlemen, does any problem arise in these homes for the aged people in distinguishing between what the actual condition of a person is? Some of these people are old to the point of, perhaps, bordering on senility and sometimes people may think they are a little off balance mentally when actually it is simply old age. Is there any way that would create a problem?

MR. WOLLENBERG: Are you asking me?

SENATOR SHELLEY: Either or both of you. I would like to have the views of both of you.

SENATOR DORSEY: One at a time, however.

MR. WOLLENBERG: I would say that problem is going to develop all the time as people get old and become more senile and irresponsible. We call those homes nursing homes but many are custodial homes, and I don't think there would be any question between us as to where that type of person who, through processes of age, have become mentally irresponsible should go. They should go to a nursing home. They might not need medical or nursing care but they need custodial care, bed care and safe-guarding.

The nursing home would be the proper place for such a person.

MR. CHOTINER: Mr. Wollenberg, suppose the jurisdiction over all boarding homes for the aged as well as the sanitariums and rest homes was granted to the Department of Public Health and before the Department of Public Health would issue a license to what is commonly known as strictly a boarding home for the aged, it would require a report from the Department of Social Welfare, then do you see any objection to that type of licensing?

MR. WOLLENBERG: That could be worked out.

MR. CHOTINER: Do you think that would be preferable to having two State departments issuing licenses to two different types of institutions, but where the border line or line of demarcation is so fine that it is difficult to tell just which department has jurisdiction?

MR. WOLLENBERG: I think the State Department of Public Health today and the State Department of Social Welfare working together in many of these cases could determine that. I think we could work together and determine whichever department should license that particular place.

I think today under the law we are probably charged with licensing the homes we are discussing—that is, the nursing homes. If you decide that one department is to issue all the licenses I think you would have to weigh the load on this side and that side and see where it should be placed. I am not sure where it should be placed.

I do not anticipate if the law sets up the cooperation in the law that you have set up there would be any difficulty at all between the two departments."

Dr. Wilton L. Halverson, State Director of Public Health, Los Angeles, testified as follows:

DR. HALVERSON: Well, in the light of the statements that I have made it seems to me that the responsibility of a State Department of Health should rest almost solely with the institutions that are giving medical care—that is giving care that is usually given in hospitals, sanatoria, and rest homes for patients that are not ambulatory, but patients that are in bed and requiring nursing and medical care. And in further amplification of that I would like to say if we think of this group of institutions as a general group as contrasted with hotels and boarding rooms, whether for the aged or for other individuals, it seems to me that it should not be the responsibility of the Department of Public Health—or stated the other way, it should be the responsibility of the Department of Social Welfare to license agencies that care for persons who are not ill in the age groups or in the classification of populations for which they have responsibility. And I am thinking of the children's homes and homes for the aged, and possibly other categories—homes for the blind. I don't know of any homes, especially for the blind that are operated by private individuals, but it seems to me that the population groups that are not ill and that fall under the jurisdiction of the Social Welfare Department—I will state it conversely, that institutions that care for those units of the population that are not ill probably should be under the supervision of the Department of Social Welfare.

MR. CHOTINER: Dr. Halverson, from your experience as a physician and engaged in public health work, would you say that people once reaching the age of 65 years, as a general proposition, there is enough temporary illness among those of that age that they require some medical attention if they are going to be living in a boarding home or some place away from, we will say, their family.

DR. HALVERSON: Yes. I suppose we would have to say as a person grows older he is subject to more periods of time when he needs medical care or nursing care.

MR. CHOTINER: From the standpoint of the operator of the home who is trying to conduct a legitimate place of business, do you believe that it is preferable from the standpoint of the operator that he should be subject to the jurisdiction, both from a licensing standpoint, inspection standpoint, and rules and regulations, of two departments of the State or just one?

DR. HALVERSON: I think he should be subject to the rules and regulations and licensing of only one department.

MR. CHOTINER: Now let us take the home that starts out to maintain a strictly boarding home for the aged, a home which caters to people over the age of 65 years.

As you have pointed out, once they reach that age there is more recurrence of illness where they do require medical attention. Do you believe that that type of home should be under the jurisdiction of the Department of Public Health or the Department of Social Welfare, keeping in mind that there are recurrent cases of temporary illness.

DR. HALVERSON: I would have to say it seems to me that the individual operating the home would have to arrive at a decision whether he was going to care for the chronically ill or not.

And when it becomes evident, as it always does, that an individual reaches a state where he is more susceptible than the average to chronic illness, he will have to make the decision that that patient will be shifted to a rest home or to a nursing home.

Now, no matter what the types of institutions we have, people will be ill a certain amount of time, there will be a few illnesses, but if the operator of the rest home for the aged reaches the decision that he is going to take care of individuals who are chronically ill, then he should make application for license for the operation of an institution for the care of the ill.

MR. CHOTINER: Let us take the case of an operator of a home who finds it more convenient not to make an application to the Department of Health, but prefers to operate under the Department of Social Welfare for the reason that obviously the regulations and the requirements would not be as strict where medical care is not professed to be given, but who, nevertheless, is caring for people who do require medical attention.

Now, if that type of case were before us what is your recommendation as to how that type of home should be handled?

DR. HALVERSON: Well, it is my impression that the investigators for the local welfare department without any difficulty would detect such subterfuges. And when I say that, I think of my experience in the actual checking of these homes in Pasadena and Los Angeles County during my previous experience. It was very apparent even to the non-professional groups who had the responsibility of checking these homes when individuals were employing a subterfuge in an attempt to deceive the authorities.

MR. CHOTINER: Supposing the Legislature should see fit to require that all of these types of places, including boarding homes for the aged and for people over 65, should be under the jurisdiction of one State agency, which State agency do you think is the proper one to handle it?

DR. HALVERSON: Well, that is a hard one for me to answer. If you are thinking of the general category of the general responsibility for institutions for the care of the ill, you see, then it becomes evident that it should be a department of State Government that employs professional medical individuals.

There must be some time soon general legislation for the supervision of institutions that care for the ill.

MR. CHOTINER: From an administrative standpoint, Doctor, and assume that the State Legislature would pass a law placing all of these types of homes and sanitariums and so forth under the jurisdiction of the Department of Public Health, do you see any obstacles or any practical difficulties in the Department of Public Health adopting rules and regulations which would apply to the strictly boarding home for the aged then otherwise would apply to general hospitals, sanitariums, and rest homes, and calling on the Department of Social Welfare to submit its report and recommendations as to strictly boarding homes for the aged before your department would issue a license to a boarding home for the aged?

DR. HALVERSON: I believe that that could be worked out very well between the departments of Social Welfare and Public Health. And I would say further that should legislation of that type be enacted it would be the plan of the State Department of Public Health to utilize the Welfare Agencies throughout the State, of the State Department of Social Welfare, to take the responsibility of the administration of the act as far as the strictly boarding homes were concerned.

MR. CHOTINER: Dr. Halverson, which do you think is the more prevalent in boarding homes for aged over 65 years of age, the homes where there are recurrent cases of illness or homes which do not have recurrent cases of temporary illnesses?

DR. HALVERSON: When you say "recurrent cases of temporary illnesses," then of course I would have to say that every home occasionally has somebody who is ill.

MR. CHOTINER: In other words, at some time or another there is somebody in that home that requires some medical attention.

DR. HALVERSON: But I would say this: that in my limited experience in checking of these rest homes I would say it would be divided about half and half between the homes that really care for the aged ill and the homes that care for the aged who are not ill, who are ambulatory and who are up and about, and homes that make no pretense for providing medical care and where the necessity for providing medical care is not great. That may not be a good estimate, but that is as close as I can say.

MR. CHOTINER: When you say half and half, do you mean half of the people in the homes or half of the homes?

DR. HALVERSON: I was thinking half of the individuals and half of the homes. I was talking rather loosely there because I don't have data before me to substantiate that.

* * * * *

DR. HALVERSON: It would seem to me that on the average the elderly people who seek a home of any kind would tend to be the people who have some physical infirmity. Therefore, the percentage of aged in homes who are chronically ill would be greater than the percentage of the aged in the general population who were chronically ill.

SENATOR SHELLEY: That is in line with my thinking.

SENATOR DORSEY: Isn't there in these boarding homes always involved the matter of the health of those aged persons?

DR. HALVERSON: Yes, that is true.

SENATOR DORSEY: The matter of diet and the matter of care of recurrent illnesses, temporary illnesses, colds and all that, isn't there always involved a health question there? That is what I am concerned with.

DR. HALVERSON: My answer to that, Senator, would be yes there is. There is always a health problem involved with our general population—with every one of us.

MR. CHOTINER: Do you see any objections from an administrative standpoint if your department were to have the jurisdiction of licensing the boarding homes for the aged provided the Department of Social Welfare were required by the law to furnish and submit reports to you of any applicant that wishes to conduct such a boarding home?

DR. HALVERSON: I see none, if the legislation makes funds available to the Department of Social Welfare to perform those functions.

* * * * *

DR. HALVERSON: It is my present feeling that it will be necessary to have different rules and regulations for a boarding home than for hospitals or sanitoriums or rest homes. And I say that thinking of the experience that we have had over the years in preparing rules and regulations for the conduct of maternity hospitals."

Mr. E. J. Bumiller, Los Angeles County Health Department, Chief of Section of Sanitation and Housing, testified as follows:

SENATOR DORSEY: I would like to ask a question. What objection would there be to having the boarding homes placed under the jurisdiction of the Department of Public Health just the same as the others, in order to eliminate the two agencies?

MR. BUMILLER: There wouldn't be any objection as far as I can see. And I don't think there would be any objection to our Health officer, but I think that the State Department of Public Health should clear through the Department of Social Welfare before they license the institution, because they are Welfare people and we are nothing but Public Health people, you see.

MR. BUMILLER: In the aged homes we have a lot of arthritis, heart trouble, and so forth. The seniles are not as cumbersome as the other type and that is where the problem comes in.

MR. CHOTINER: There is this question that occurs to me and I want to get some enlightenment from the witnesses here. I can visualize where two different State agencies are handling a general subject and the general subject is only divided by a line which is where you need medical care the patient comes under the Department of Health and where medical care is not needed it comes under the Department of Social Welfare. And the illustration as suggested here by Senator Shelley, I am wondering in my own mind from an administrative standpoint, not only from the agency viewpoint but from the viewpoint of the operators of these homes, where you are going to draw the line and who is going to be able to say:

"Well, you need a license from the Department of Social Welfare," or "you need a license from the Department of Public Health."

Can you help me on that, Mr. Bumiller?

MR. BUMILLER: I see your point very clearly and I feel no doubt the Department of Public Health could license all of those and still, as I said before, clear through the Social Welfare outside of what this gentleman brings forth with reference to the Social Security Act. I am not acquainted with that and I would not want to answer that. But I know in our dealings with the Department of Institutions and the Department of Social Welfare we get along fine together. They submit to us everything over 10 to 12 people and ask us to pass on it. Anything below that is turned over to the Public Welfare Commission of the county and they do not see fit to clear through us on that point. There is little friction there.

Mr. Floyd A. Walker, Los Angeles County Deputy Superintendent of Charities, testified as follows:

MR. CHOTINER: Now, do you believe that the jurisdiction of the licensing and regulations of boarding homes for the aged should be in one agency, whereas the supervision and regulation of licensing of sanitariums, and rest homes, should be in another agency?

MR. WALKER: Well, I would like to carry out that line of demarcation between the care to those who are ill and those who are not, one coming clearly under the Department of Health and the other, I think, under Social Welfare."

Mr. Morris S. Siegel, Los Angeles City Health Department, Director of Division of Institutional Inspection, testified as follows:

MR. CHOTINER: Now, if you will keep in mind what is commonly referred to as a "boarding home for the aged" as distinguished from a sanitarium or rest home where medical care is supposed to be provided for the people who live there, what is your opinion as to whether or not the two classifications should be under the jurisdiction of one agency or under two agencies?

MR. SIEGEL: I cannot possibly see why two agencies should be involved in this when 90 per cent of the problems that arise in these institutions are health problems.

I believe that the Department of Social Welfare has a certain field that they must cover from a social welfare point of view. That has been my experience from actual contact for years as a field representative. The social welfare is only 10 per cent of the problem that we encounter in any of these institutions and I cannot possibly see how after the health and sanitary and medical care features and all the related incidents that go with it are once taken care of the remainder, 10 per cent of the problem, dealing with social welfare, can easily be taken care of by the Department of Social Welfare without any authority for licensing or the adoption of that authority or the regulation of those institutions because in most instances their problems will be of a nature that is personal with the patient or the inmate to bring it up to a standard and in harmony with the policy of the department.

MR. CHOTINER: Mr. Siegel, let us take the case of an operator who sets out legitimately to run just strictly a boarding home for the aged. Do you find from your experience that there are enough cases within that strictly boarding home for the aged as they started out to operate, involving medical care over a period of time that take it out of the classification of boarding home for the aged and put it in the classification where some medical care is required so as to require supervision by some health agency.

MR. SIEGEL: If the Committee will pardon me for using slang, I will say that 90 per cent of the boarding homes for aged that are licensed by the State Department of Social Welfare turn out to be bootleg sanitariums.

MR. CHOTINER: You say 9 or 90 per cent?

MR. SIEGEL: 90 per cent turn out to be bootleg sanitariums where all kinds of patients are housed that are in need of medical care or nursing care or some other kind of care. And the reason for it is—it is quite obvious because of the zoning laws that exist in this city. In this city we do not permit a sanitarium to be established in any other place or zone other than a so-called "C-2" or better zone. Now, for the enlightenment of the members of the committee I will say that the C-2 zones include business zones, heavily trafficked arteries. They do not include residential zones of any nature whatsoever.

Now, 90 per cent of these homes for the aged want to be established in the so-called "R" zones—the multiple dwelling zones and some of them even in single dwelling zones. Now, it is obvious they cannot obtain a permit from the Health Department to run a sanitarium in those so-called "R" zones. Consequently, the next out is to go to the Department of Social Welfare and obtain a license from them to run a home for the aged or boarding home for the aged, which is permitted in the residential areas, and in 90 per cent of the instances we find that these so-called boarding homes for the aged are in fact sanitariums in that they house the sick, the ill, the aged, and the infirm.

MR. CHOTINER: What agency in your opinion should be the one given the authority to supervise and license and regulate boarding houses for the aged as well as sanitariums and rest homes?

MR. SIEGEL: I believe that for purpose of good administration and for purposes of having a close check on the administration of a law of this nature, that it would be wise, first, to establish minimum regulations as to what kind of care and what kind of facilities should be provided for this type of home or institution. That it should be more or less broad gauge so that the small counties can comply with the minimum standards; that local departments or political subdivisions of a size or nature like Los Angeles and San Francisco or Oakland or San Diego should be empowered to enact further and more restrictive legislation or more elaborate legislation to meet the needs of the local community. The State can then be a supervisor and see to it that these laws are not neglected; that they are enforced but that the basic authority, the primary duty of enforcing these standards be left with local agencies like local departments of San Francisco or Oakland or Los Angeles or San Diego.

MR. CHOTINER: Which State agency should be given the jurisdiction over the entire subject matter in your opinion?

MR. SIEGEL: Oh, I think the State Department of Public Health should have 90 per cent control over it.

MR. CHOTINER: When you say '90 per cent' where does the other 10 per cent go?

MR. SIEGEL: Well, I figure that the other 10 per cent should go to the State Department of Social Welfare for purposes of acting as consultant in the welfare field in the institutions in which they might be concerned.

MR. CHOTINER: Now, by that, Mr. Siegel, do you have in mind that the Department of Public Health should issue all of the licenses or that the Department of Social Welfare should issue any of them?

MR. SIEGEL: I think that the local departments should issue the licenses pursuant to that law. I don't think that the State department should issue the licenses at all. I think the local department should issue the licenses and the State department should only issue the licenses in cases of counties where there are no organized health departments or where it is impossible for them to maintain a corps of personnel necessary to carry on this work.

MR. CHOTINER: Well, perhaps I did not make myself clear. What I had in mind was this: When I say 'the State Department of Public Health or State Department of Social Welfare' I use those terms to include whatever delegated agencies they might give the authority to in the local area. But what I want to arrive at is this: should a social welfare agency, whether it should be State or local, handle the issuance of the licenses as well as regulate and supervise the boarding homes for the aged? Or should it be handled solely by the Department of Health?

MR. SIEGEL: I think the State Health Department should handle the whole field of licensing. I don't think that the State Department of Social Welfare is the proper agency, in view of many experiences, to license these institutions at all.

MR. CHOTINER: What part, if any, do you think the Social Welfare Department should play in the subject matter?

MR. SIEGEL: They should play a sufficient part to take care of such incidents as this. I think that they should be consulted with reference to investigating the operator or applicant for the operation of these places. I think that they are the proper parties to investigate as to whether or not life care contracts are entered into between inmates and operators.

I believe that they should come in in the way of advising procedure or what steps there are to be taken in the case of mistreatment of inmates by fraud or many other factors that enter into the field such as, for instance, the experience we have had here where somebody started a home for the aged and collected a month's rent from about 40 inmates and then left the inmates starving to death and departed for places unknown. I think that a contingency of that sort ought to be taken care of either by investigation of the character of the operator, or the applicant for a license or permit, or by means of a bond wherever it is necessary. But something ought to be done.

There is a field for the Social Welfare Department to come in and fill but, as I have said, it only represents about 10 per cent of the entire field of activity and scope of activity in the operation of these institutions.

MR. CHOTINER: Do you believe that the law should require a report from the Social Welfare Department before the Health Department issues a license to any of these classifications?

MR. SIEGEL: There is no reason why that would not be a good idea. We require a report at the present time from the fire department for the construction of a building. We require a report from the safety and building department as to proper construction and I can not see why good can not be accomplished by also requiring a clearance from the Social Welfare Department with reference to the character of whatever social welfare features there may be involved.

MR. CHOTINER: Do you believe the law should go so far as to require the approval of the Social Welfare Department before the Department of Public Health issues a license to any of these classifications?

MR. SIEGEL: I don't think that is necessary in every instance but I think it may be necessary in some instances.

MR. CHOTINER: Well, now, where would you draw the line as to where it is necessary and where it is not?

MR. SIEGEL: Well, it all depends on the type of institution and the type patients they intend to cater to. For instance, the biggest problem that we have now is the care or the lack of care that is afforded to the individual that is a State pensioner.

He comes into these privately operated institutions with his $50 a month and he needs $150 worth of care a month in the way of nursing and diet and whatnot. Now, that type of institution can operate with profit only when they have a capacity of 150 or more. The very moment they have a smaller number they can not possibly give them the care that they need. Consequently, I believe that in the case of an operator intending to take in pensioners, I believe the State Social Welfare Department should check into that situation and see whether or not they are responsible parties, parties that can be trusted with the care of inmates of that character.

But when it comes down to the other type of institution where the people are able to pay their way, pay $100 a month or more for their care, that type of individual can usually be regulated and brought to time and made to comply with standards and is usually willing to comply with standards and he doesn't need any social service investigation—that is, to the extent that these others would.

SENATOR DORSEY: I would like to ask a question. Don't you think that the recommendation of the Welfare Department for or against the granting of an application that you are talking about would be given proper and due consideration by the Health Department in the matter of issuing the license or not issuing the license?

MR. SIEGEL: I want to be conciliatory. I think the Health Department would do a 100 per cent job there but, for the sake of being conciliatory and not trying to hog the whole show, I am willing to concede that the Social Welfare Department has 10 per cent of the business there.

SENATOR DORSEY: Then they would recommend for or against the granting of that license and the Health Department would give that proper consideration.

MR. SIEGEL: They sure would.

SENATOR DORSEY: As to their action.

MR. SIEGEL: They sure would.

SENATOR DORSEY: So they could work along together.

MR. SIEGEL: That is right.

SENATOR DORSEY: On the 10 per cent you are talking about.

MR. SIEGEL: That is right, Senator.

MR. CHOTINER: Do you think it is necessary to make the favorable recommendation of the Welfare Department mandatory in any of the cases?

MR. SIEGEL: Why, I think that—I don't believe so. I believe that it should be given serious consideration but to make it mandatory I think would be throwing an obstacle in the way of sensible enforcement because, with all due respect to the social workers as a profession, and if there are any present I apologize to them, but my reaction to their viewpoint is that they are full of book learning and haven't got a sense of practicality or realism in their make-up.

- (7) If local agencies are to license and regulate boarding homes for the aged, sanitariums and rest homes, which local agencies should be used?

The opinion as to whether it should be a local health department or a local welfare department was substantially the same as the opinion rendered by the various witnesses as to whether it should be a State Department of Health or a State Department of Social Welfare to be charged with the responsibility of licensing and regulating boarding homes for the aged, sanitariums, and rest homes. The opinion was also expressed that the local authorities should have the choice of determining whether it should be a local health or welfare department to be designated as the accredited agency.

- (8) Should commercial placement agencies be banned, or licensed and regulated; and, if so, should it be under the supervision of a state or local agency?

A commercial placement agency is regarded as a private business which keeps available data concerning boarding homes, sanitariums and rest homes, and makes the information available to physicians and persons desiring the facilities of such institutions. A fee is charged of the operator of the institution which is a percentage of the amount of money paid by the inmate or patient to the operator of the institution.

The testimony disclosed that there is a need for commercial placement agencies but that because of abuses which exist and because of the likelihood of further abuses being committed, it was recommended that the commercial placement agencies should be subject to licensing and regulating.

Recommendations of the Committee

Based on the foregoing facts, your committee makes the recommendation that a bill should be passed by the State Legislature providing for:

(1) Definition of boarding homes for the aged, sanitariums, rest homes and hospitals;

(2) Jurisdiction over the licensing and regulating of boarding homes for the aged, sanitariums, rest homes and hospitals should be placed in the State Department of Public Health;

(3) The State Department of Public Health may delegate its duties to accredited local agencies;

(4) Before a license to operate a boarding home for the aged is issued by the State Department of Public Health, or any of its accredited local agencies, a report from the State Social Welfare Department, or its accredited local agency, concerning the welfare problems involved shall be submitted to the licensing authority;

(5) The State Department of Social Welfare may delegate its duties in connection with recommendation (4) to accredited local agencies;

(6) Minimum standards should be set forth, which shall be applicable to every county in the State and shall govern the operation of boarding homes for the aged, sanitariums, rest homes, and hospitals;

(7) The State Department of Public Health shall be empowered to adopt additional standards, regulations, and rules, which shall be applicable only to counties of the first to fifteenth classes, inclusive (Los Angeles, San Francisco, Alameda, San Diego, Fresno, Santa Clara, Sacramento, San Bernardino, Kern, San Joaquin, Orange, San Mateo, Tulare, Riverside and Contra Costa);

(8) All cities and counties are empowered to enact ordinances providing for additional standards, regulations and rules governing the operation of boarding homes for the aged, sanitariums, rest homes, and hospitals, so that the State shall not preempt the field in this class of legislation;

(9) It shall be a misdemeanor for anyone to operate a boarding home for the aged, sanitarium, rest home, or hospital, without first obtaining a license therefor from the State Department of Public Health or from one of its accredited local agencies; it shall also be a misdemeanor to violate any of the rules or regulations that may be adopted by the State Department of Public Health, or any of its accredited local agencies, pursuant to the authorization given to it by this bill, governing the operation of boarding homes for the aged, sanitariums, rest homes, or hospitals. The punishment for violation of either one of the said misdemeanors shall be imprisonment in the county jail for a period up to six months, or by a fine up to the sum of $500, or both;

(10) The State Department of Public Health, or its accredited local agency, may revoke the license granted to any operator of a boarding home for the aged, sanitarium, rest home, or hospital, for violation of any statute, or the violation of any rule or regulation adopted by the State Department of Public Health, or any of its accredited local agencies, pursuant to the authorization granted in this bill, governing the operation of any boarding home for the aged, sanitarium, rest home, or hospital. Revocation of the license shall only be made after a hearing is held by the State Department of Public Health, or its accredited local agency, and due notice of such hearing is given to the operator;

(11) Definition of a commercial placement agency shall be set forth;

(12) Jurisdiction for licensing and regulating commercial placement agencies shall be placed in the State Department of Public Health. No license shall be granted to any operator of a commercial placement agency without first obtaining a written report from the State Department of Social Welfare. The license fee shall be one hundred dollars ($100) a year, payable at the time of making the application for a license. In the event the license is not granted.

the applicant shall be entitled to refund of seventy-five dollars ($75). (The power to license and regulate commercial placement agencies shall not be delegated to any accredited local agency);

(13) The operator of a commercial placement agency shall not have any interest, directly or indirectly, in any boarding home for the aged, sanitarium, rest home, or hospital;

(14) The State Department of Public Health is authorized to adopt rules and regulations governing the operation of commercial placement agencies;

(15) It shall be a misdemeanor for any person to operate a commercial placement agency without first obtaining a license therefor from the State Department of Public Health; it shall also be a misdemeanor for the operator of any commercial placement agency to violate any rule or regulation adopted by the State Department of Public Health. The punishment for violation of either one of the said misdemeanors shall be imprisonment in the county jail for a period up to six months, or by a fine up to the sum of five hundred dollars ($500), or both;

(16) The license of an operator to conduct a commercial placement agency may be revoked for the violation of the statute, or for violation of any rule or regulation adopted by the State Department of Public Health governing the operation of commercial placement agencies. Such revocation shall only be made after a hearing is held by the State Department of Public Health and due notice of such hearing is given to the operator;

(17) The Director of the State Department of Public Health may bring an action to enjoin the violation or threatened violation of any provision of the statute in the Superior Court, in and for the county in which the violation occurred, or is about to occur. (The committee is not in favor of eliminating the necessity of the director being required to allege facts necessary to show, or tending to show, lack of adequate remedy at law, or to show, or tending to show, irreparable damage or loss.)

Respectfully submitted.

A copy of said cost bill after judgment shall be filed with the officer who executes said writ of execution, otherwise the officer is not required to collect the accrued interest or accrued costs.

A cost bill after judgment need not repeat the items set out in a prior cost bill or bills but may incorporate them by reference.

For the purpose of administering the system of disability unemployment insurance established by this article, the commission may employ, subject to Article XXIV of the Constitution and the State Civil Service Act, such licensed physician and surgeon personnel and other technical and clerical personnel as may be necessary."

Part 8. Miscellaneous

Sec. 200. All fines collected for violations of the provisions of this article shall be paid one-half into the State Treasury to the credit of the Disability Fund, and one-half to the Treasurer of the jurisdiction in which the misdemeanor is prosecuted, to be deposited in the same fund as fines for other misdemeanors occurring in that jurisdiction are deposited.

Sec. 2. Section 40 of said act is amended to read:
Sec. 40. The commission shall keep separate records of the amounts paid into the fund by each employer in his own behalf, or chargeable to him as benefits; but nothing in this chapter shall be construed to grant any employer or his employees prior claims or rights to the amount contributed by him to the fund, either on his own account or on behalf of his employees. The amount of employer contributions [together with the employee contributions] shall be pooled and available to pay benefits to any employee entitled to benefits under the provisions of this chapter regardless of the source of such contributions.

SEC. 3. Section 44 of said act is amended to read:

Sec. 44. (a) Beginning on [January 1, 1936] June 1, 1945, each worker, employed by one employer subject to this act, shall contribute to the disability fund established by Article 10 of this act. [one-half of] 1 per cent of his wages paid by an employer with respect to employment; [and beginning on January 1, 1937, nine-tenths of 1 per cent of such wages and on and after January 1, 1938, and after his employer has satisfied the conditions set forth in this act with respect to becoming an employer, 1 per cent of such wages; except that the rate of contributions required of a worker shall not in any year exceed 50 per cent of the general rate required of employers.] Each employer shall, notwithstanding any provisions of law in this State to the contrary, withhold in trust the amount of his workers' contributions from their wages at the time such wages are paid, shall show such deduction on his pay roll records, shall furnish each worker with a statement in writing showing the amount which has been deducted, in such form and at such times as [the commission may prescribe, and shall transmit all such contributions to the fund, in addition to his own contributions, pursuant to regulations of the commission.] may be prescribed, and shall transmit all such contributions to the fund, in addition to his own contributions, pursuant to authorized regulations.

(b) Contributions by workers, payable to the commission as herein provided, shall be exempt from garnishment, attachment, execution or any other remedy for the collections of debts, and in the event of the insolvency or bankruptcy of the employer such contribution shall not be considered any part of the assets of the employer and shall be paid to the commission prior to the payment of any other claim against such employer.

(c) Each employer shall be liable for any and all contributions required to be made by his workers on account of wages paid to them by such employer regardless of whether or not such employer shall have made a deduction on account thereof from the workers' wages at the time such wages were paid; provided, however, that no employer shall be liable for contributions required on behalf of himself or of any of his employees with respect to wages payable or paid, as the case may require, while there is in effect at the time such wages became payable or were paid (whichever time is the time for determining contribution liability) a rule or regulation or interpretation of the commission or of the department that such wages were not subject to contributions imposed by this section. [As used in this act, except when the context clearly requires otherwise, the term "contributions" shall include the contributions of workers pursuant to this section.]

(d) The commission or the department may prescribe the extent, if any, to which any rule, regulation or interpretation issued or promulgated in accordance with the provisions of this act shall be applied without retroactive effect.

SEC. 4. Section 101.9 of said act is amended to read:

Sec. 101.9. Any employing unit, including any individual member of a partnership employing unit, and any officer of a corporate employing unit having knowledge thereof, which withholds the deductions required by Section 44 of this act from remuneration paid to its workers, and wilfully fails or is financially unable to pay such deductions to the [unemployment] disability fund before the date on which the same become delinquent shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

SEC. 5. Section 102 of said act is amended to read:

Sec. 102. All fines collected for violations of the provisions of Articles 1 to 9, inclusive of this act shall be paid one-half into the State treasury to the credit of the Unemployment Fund, and one-half to the treasurer of the jurisdiction in which the misdemeanor is prosecuted, to be deposited in the same fund as fines for other misdemeanors occurring in that jurisdiction are deposited.

SEC. 6. Section 41 of the Unemployment Insurance Act is amended to read:

Sec. 41. (a) The commission shall maintain a separate account for each employer, and shall credit his account with all the contributions paid on his own behalf. But nothing in this act shall be construed to grant any employer or individuals in his service prior claims or rights to the amounts paid by him into the fund either on his own behalf or on behalf of such individuals.

(b) Except as provided in subdivision (c) of this section [Benefits] benefits paid to an unemployed individual during any benefit year shall be charged against the account of his employer during his base period; provided, that if such individual performed services in employment for more than one employer during his base period, benefits paid to such individual shall be charged against the respective accounts of such employers in the proportion that the total wages earned by such individual in employment for each such employer bears to the total wages earned by such individual in employment for all such employers during the base period. [The maximum amount of benefits payable under this act and chargeable against such employer's accounts shall not be in excess of four hundred sixty-eight dollars ($468) for any one individual in any one benefit year.]

(c) Seventy-three (73) per cent of benefits paid on or after July 1, 1945 to an unemployed individual during any benefit year shall be charged against the account of his employer during his base period: provided, that if such individual performed services in employment for more than one employer during his base period, seventy-three (73) per cent of the benefits paid to such individual shall be charged against the respective accounts of such employers in the proportion that the total wages earned by such individual in employment for each such employer bears to the total wages earned by such individual in employment for all such employers during the base period. The provisions of this subsection, however, shall be applicable only if and when the accumulated total amount of worker contributions paid into the Unemployment Fund pursuant to Section 44 of this act in respect to employment with an employer, exceeds twenty-seven (27) per cent of the benefits which are chargeable under this subsection to such employer's account at the rate of seventy-three (73) per cent; otherwise the provisions of subsection (b) shall be applicable."

Amendments read and adopted.

Bill ordered printed, and re-referred to Committee on Social Welfare.

MESSAGES FROM THE GOVERNOR

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE

Sacramento 14, May 31, 1945

*To the Honorable Members of the Senate,
State of California,
Sacramento, California*

GREETINGS: I am returning herewith, without my signature,

Senate Bill No. 989, entitled: "An act to add Section 7.6 to the Unemployment Insurance Act, relating to excluded employments under said act."

My objections to this bill are as follows:

This bill seeks to exclude from unemployment insurance, insurance agents other than debit or rewrite agents, if all services are performed for commissions only. This bill would serve no useful purpose inasmuch as the commission has by rule excluded the same class of employees as would be excluded by statute if this bill should become law. Should this bill be approved it would be an open invitation to place more and more employees on a commission basis and to seek to exclude such employees from unemployment insurance coverage on the precedent of this proposed exclusion. This is contrary to the spirit of unemployment insurance and should not be encouraged.

This protection should eventually be expanded to include all employees, and rather than finding exclusions from the beneficial coverage of this act, attempt should be made to find means of expanding its protection.

Respectfully submitted.

EARL WARREN, Governor

MESSAGES FROM THE GOVERNOR

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE

SACRAMENTO, June 1, 1945

*To the Honorable Members of the Senate, State of California
Sacramento, California*

GREETINGS: In my Biennial Message of January 8, 1945, I set forth some of the reasons which led me to recommend that action be taken at this session of the Legislature to bring adequate medical care more easily within the reach of average families by applying the prepayment principle contained in Assembly Bill No. 800.

This bill was tabled by the Public Health Committee of the Assembly, and on April 10th a motion to withdraw the bill from committee was lost by a vote of 39 to 38.

It is still my firm conviction that the rapid growth of our State, together with a proper concern for the improvement of the living conditions of our people in the postwar years, impose a responsibility for taking action now designed to correct as far as we possibly can one of the most serious defects in our modern life.

There is now in the Public Health Committee of the Assembly a proposal to provide a prepayment program limited to the field of hospitalization. Such a program affords an opportunity for substantial progress along these lines without the necessity for immediately resolving a great deal of the controversy raised by the more comprehensive features of Assembly Bill No. 800.

We know from experience that out of every 1,000 persons in the population about 105 will need and use a hospital in any given year. No family can tell from day to day whether or not, or when, or how often, some member of the family will fall within this group.

This unpredictability, coupled with the increasingly elaborate and expensive nature of hospital service, constitutes a real risk, and too often a real disaster, for ordinary families.

Legislation within the principle of pending Assembly Bill No. 2201 would spread this risk among more than 2,000,000 employed persons in the State by means of a pay roll contribution of one-half of 1 per cent and a similar contribution by their employers.

This would provide a prepayment system for these employees and their dependents—a total of more than 4,000,000 people—whereby they would be assured payment for hospitalization expenses for a period of 30 days for each disability, including maternity hospital care. This 30-day period of hospitalization would cover about 98 per cent of all hospital cases within the covered group.

Hospitalization would, of course, be on the direction of the beneficiary's own physician in a hospital of the beneficiary's own choice. Beneficiaries would have the right to make their own arrangements for more expensive hospital accommodations than those provided for in the act by payment of the difference in rates.

Not only the urban areas of California, but the rural areas as well, lack adequate facilities for the hospitalization needs of our people. This deficiency will be emphasized in the postwar years when our State will have a population increased by more than a million and a half, including about 800,000 California veterans of the armed forces.

A stimulus is needed for the development and expansion of our hospitals, and such stimulus can be provided by assuring our hospitals, particularly our splendid private hospitals, an income sufficient to justify not only the continuance but the enlargement of their important services.

These hospitals have already recognized the economic problem involved and have tried to solve it by such methods as the Blue Cross. Hospital prepayment legislation will eliminate most of the difficulties that have been encountered in these efforts and that have thus far prevented a comprehensive solution. Continued utilization of existing insurance plans is most desirable in any program.

Pending in the Congress at the present time is legislation to make millions of dollars in Federal money available on a matching basis for hospital planning and development on the State level. California should be prompt to place itself in a position to take advantage of this opportunity.

Unless steps are taken to break down the economic barrier between the family and the hospital, future expansion will undoubtedly be in the direction of public hospitals and staffs. This will tend to the growth of the very kind of State medicine we are trying to avoid.

Legislation of the kind to which I have referred can be made a means of encouraging high standards of hospitalization as well as a greater use of hospital facilities by our people.

It is my hope that the Legislature will be able without great difficulty to examine and, if necessary, improve the pending proposal in order to accomplish these objectives.

Sincerely,

EARL WARREN, Governor

Message read, and ordered printed in the Journal.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, OFFICE OF LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL

Legal Effect of Senate Bill No. 285, as Introduced and as Amended April 9, 1945—
No. 4781

DEAR SENATORS: You ask as to the legal effect of this bill as introduced and as amended April 9, 1945, what change it would effect in the existing law.

As introduced, it amended Section 4041.6 of the Political Code to delete the last sentence of subdivision (3), which purports to confer upon each county board of supervisors the jurisdiction and power:

"To appropriate a sum not exceeding two cents per one hundred dollars of the assessed valuation of their county in any one year, in addition to any sum which may be chargeable to the county for the repayment of money expended by the State for protection against fire in such county, for the purpose of protecting forest, brush and grass lands therein, against fire or other injury, and of aiding the State and Federal authorities in forestry work."

As introduced, it also proposed the addition of Section 4041.6a to the Political Code, expressly declaring that each county board of supervisors may organize, equip and maintain a fire department for the prevention and suppression of fires within the county, appoint and prescribe the duties of a fire warden, and cooperate with the Federal Government, the State, any city, fire district, person, association or corporation for the performance of any such functions.

The amendment of April 9, 1945, merely removed from the bill the proposed amendment to Section 4041.6, leaving intact the text of proposed new Section 4041.6a.

In my opinion, the only substantial legal effect of the bill as introduced was to remove from the code a "two cents per one hundred dollars of the assessed valuation" limitation upon the amount which the board may spend each year for protecting "forest, brush and grass lands" in the county "against fire or other injury" and in "aiding the State and Federal authorities in forestry work."

The amended bill appears to have no substantial legal effect. It leaves intact this two-cent limitation.

The proposed new Section 4041.6a appears to be nothing more than a statement in express terms of what the law already provides.

As heretofore indicated in my opinions of January 20, January 21, and February 8, 1944, the two cents per one hundred dollars feature is truly a limitation, not a grant; a limitation upon the amount expendable for the protection of "forest, brush and grass lands" against "fire or other injury." Such appears to be the clear intentment of the words used.

This interpretation is supported by the legislative history of the clause under consideration. It came into the law in 1905 (Chapter 337, Stats. 1905, page 394) as Section 33½ of the County Government Act of 1897, authorizing counties of the first and second classes to appropriate not exceeding $20,000 (other counties, $10,000) in any one year "to aid in and carry on the work of the preservation of forests upon public lands, the reforestation of forests upon public lands, and the protection of forests upon public lands from fire."

That was the year the first State Board of Forestry Act became law (Stats. 1905, Chapter 264, page 235). The State thereby assumed certain responsibilities in respect to the prevention and extinguishment of "forest, brush, and grass fires," provided for State cooperation with counties, imposed a duty upon counties to remove "brush, grass and inflammable material" from their rights of way "in forest or brush lands," and purported to authorize the counties to "appropriate money for purposes of forest protection, improvement and management."

Section 33½ of the County Government Act apparently was intended as a limitation upon that type of expenditure by the county. Its provisions went into Section 4041 of the Political Code, as subdivision 38 thereof, when the County Government Act was codified in 1907, modified to read as they now read in Section 4041.6.

This view is further borne out by the fact that the county is the recipient of a direct Constitutional grant of the police power, by Section 11 of Article XI:

"Any county * * * may make and enforce within its limits all such local, police, sanitary and other regulations as are not in conflict with general laws."

This confers upon the county, to exercise for the county, virtually all of the police power which the State Legislature itself may exercise for the State as a whole, subject only to general laws. (See 7 Cal. Jr. 534-539, and cases cited.)

As observed by the court when it held valid the appointment of a county health officer, Section 11 of Article XI "by necessary implication, if not by express terms, gives to the board of supervisors the authority to do just what they have done," adding:

"How is the board to look after the sanitary conditions of the county and the health of its people except through the assistance of paid expert agents? They have implied power to adopt any adequate and appropriate means to carry out their express powers." (Valle v. Shaffer, 1 Cal. App. 183, 184; hearing in Supreme Court denied.)

What the county may do for the protection of the health of its people, it must be able to for the protection of their persons and property from fire.

Consonant with this view are the following legislative expressions concerning the county and the board of supervisors:

The county is a political subdivision of the State having corporate powers (Pol. Code, Sec. 3901). It is a body corporate and politic and as such has the power specified in Sections 4000 to 4348 of the Political Code "and such other powers as are necessarily implied from those expressed" (Pol. Code, Sec. 4000).

The powers of a county are exercised by a board of supervisors or by agents and officers acting under authority of that board or under authority of law (Pol. Code, Sec. 4001).

The county has power "to levy and collect such taxes, for purposes under its exclusive jurisdiction as are authorized by law." (Pol. Code, Sec. 4003.) Section 4307 enumerates certain specific county charges including "the expenses necessarily incurred in the preparation of plans for meeting any emergency caused by a flood, fire, earthquake, pestilence, tornado, or other Act of God which might cause extraordinary loss of life or destruction of property and every other sum directed by law to be raised for any county purpose under the direction of the board of supervisors." I think that an expenditure directed by a legally effective ordinance would be considered an expense "directed by law."

All of these powers are supplemented by the authority conferred "to do and perform all other acts and things required by law in this title enumerated, or which shall be necessary to the full discharge of the duties of the legislative authority of the county government" (Pol. Code, Sec. 4041.25; formerly subd. (41) of Sec. 4041).

Consonant with the views here expressed are those expressed by the Attorney General in his opinion of January 28, 1944, interpreting Section 4041.6 of the Political Code (NS—5309).

In conclusion, it is my opinion that the two cents per one hundred dollars of assessed valuation feature is at most a limitation, that it applies only to "forest, brush and grass lands," does not otherwise limit the general power and duty of the counties to protect persons and property from fire or the hazard of fire.

In respect to cooperation with Federal, State and other agencies, the county appears to have ample authority under other provisions of law, including particularly the Joint Exercise of Powers Act of 1921, Deering Act 1801.

Yours very truly,

FRED B. WOOD, Legislative Counsel

In view of the opinion herein expressed I do not intend to press Senate Bill No. 285 as amended April 9, 1945, for passage.

COMMUNICATIONS

The following communication was received and read, and on motion of Senator Seawell, ordered printed in the Journal:

STATE BOARD OF EQUALIZATION, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

Senator W. P. Rich, State Capitol
Sacramento, California

DEAR SENATOR RICH: The 3 per cent Gross Receipts Tax is imposed upon for-hire carriers for the privilege of engaging in the transportation business upon the State and County rural highways. These highways represent a capital investment of over $1,000,000,000,000. This huge investment is used by for-hire carriers as their major business asset.

Since the highway system is exempt from property taxes, an extremely unfair advantage and subsidy would be extended by the State to highway carriers over rail, water, and air carriers if the 3 per cent tax were to be repealed.

In 1944 railroads alone paid over $10,000,000 in California property taxes on their rights-of-way and other private capital. In the same year, for-hire highway carriers paid, under the 3 per cent law, a property tax equivalent upon the value of the highways used in their business of approximately $6,000,000, while they enjoyed 66 per cent of the intrastate transportation, or more than twice the amount of all other types of carriers combined—rail, water, and air.

Repeal of this tax would not only cause an unfair discrimination in the overall tax treatment of competing forms of transportation, but would cause a loss of more than $10,000,000 a biennium of State revenue from highway taxes at a time when such revenue is sorely needed, as has been thoroughly demonstrated to the Members of this Legislature by the State Department of Public Works and representatives of the cities and counties.

In the last biennium $13,500,000 was transferred from the State General Fund to the State Highway Fund for expenditure for highways. There are now pending before this Legislature several proposals which would appropriate from the General Fund for highway purposes sums equal to, or greater than, the amount realized from this tax. (Senate Bill No. 608 and Senate Bill No. 625)

If this tax is repealed, the major source of General Fund revenue from highway taxes will be removed, thus causing the appropriations from the General Fund for highway purposes to be made from revenues derived from general taxes imposed upon the people of this State without regard to the benefits received; while the for-hire carriers, who enjoy a special benefit from the use of highways, would be relieved of their contributions to the General Fund for this special privilege. This would impose extremely unfair tax treatment upon the people of this State.

If tax revision is needed in our highway tax system, then such revision should only be made after a thorough study of the entire structure of California's highway tax system by a fact-finding committee. If additional funds are needed for highway purposes, as we believe they are, then certainly any existing highway tax should not at this time be repealed. The entire highway tax structure should be studied, as proposed by Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 27 by Senator Collier, with the view of making such changes in the tax system as will fairly distribute the burden of increased taxes for highway needs. We should not impose unfair tax treatment upon the people by asking taxpayers who pay sales and income taxes to the General Fund to bear the burden of the appropriations for highways and at the same time relieve the operators of heavy trucks and busses from the payment of their proper share of highway use taxes.

Very truly yours,

H. D. ABBOTT

State Transportation Tax Administrator

Senate Resolution No. 127

Relative to a Senate Committee on State and Local Taxation to make inquiry into every phase of taxation, creating the Committee and defining its powers and duties

WHEREAS, The economy of the State of California has during the past four years gone through a revolutionary change, so that industry has assumed an increased importance in relation to agriculture, mining, and commerce; and

WHEREAS, This change has resulted in bringing into the State industries and properties of large value which have not previously been considered in our tax structure, and has created new governmental problems; and

WHEREAS, The increased population incident to this change in our economy has also created new governmental problems and made new demands upon both local and State Government; and

WHEREAS, The war industries, though they have given rise to unprecedented revenues for the State, have created new problems requiring large expenditures of money both by the State and local governments, and the tax returns to local government have not been commensurate with the added costs of the services required; and

WHEREAS, The unprecedented growth of motor transportation and the change over to the use of diesel fuel in motor transportation during the war period, together with the added population of our State and the concentration in industrial centers, has materially changed the requirements for the support of highways, streets, and bridges; and

WHEREAS, The transition from war conditions to peace conditions will create particularly difficult problems for local and State Governments in California, drastically affected both by the demands upon Government and the revenue structure; and

WHEREAS, It appears that there may be large sums in the way of Federal subsidies granted both to the State and local governments, in the postwar period, which will directly affect the revenue structure and will require careful examination to coordinate the disposition of these subsidies equitably into the entire revenue program of both State and local government; and

WHEREAS, From the beginning of the State's History, the ad valorem tax has been and still is the fiscal mainstay of local government and has not been adjusted to meet the new conditions; and

WHEREAS, The administration of taxation by the State and by the local governments has not been modernized, in fact has not been materially changed to bring it into line with present or prospective needs; and

WHEREAS, The relative burden of our several taxes on the different classes of taxpayers and different classes of property has not been fully determined; and

WHEREAS, There are new classes of property and rights that have grown up in the State that are not subject to taxation; and

WHEREAS, The return to peacetime conditions will undoubtedly see the falling off in revenue from our present taxes and tax rates, coupled with a demand for increased and additional governmental services and the need for greater revenues to meet the cost of such services; and

WHEREAS, Neither the State nor local governments have available to their legislative bodies information concerning all the varied phases of this problem adequate to legislative consideration and action in the endeavor to find and effect a solution; and

WHEREAS, For many years the burdens of Government have been increasing both for the State and local governments, including many fixed charges not controllable by administrative bodies but brought about in answer to the demand of the people expressed in continuing legislation or in constitutional requirements, it is imperative that an appraisal be made so that revenues may be made adequate to meet the demands of Government, both local and State, and the burdens of taxation may be equitably distributed upon and among the several classes of property and of taxpayers; now, therefore, be it

1. The Senate Committee on State and Local Taxation is hereby created and appointed, and authorized and directed, to ascertain, study, and analyze all facts relating to or in any way bearing upon any of the subjects mentioned in the recitals of this resolution, particularly including but not limited to each phase of each and every tax (as herein defined) imposed in this State by any governmental agency (State, local, or Federal); the incidence and burden of each such tax upon property, business and the taxpayer and the ability of the latter to pay, also the productivity of each such tax in relation to its cost of administration and in relation to the purposes for which imposed, each of which factors of each tax the committee shall consider, weigh, appraise and evaluate with each such factor of every other tax; the present and prospective revenue needs of each agency of Government and the most equitable means of meeting each such need, taking into consideration all of the varied forms of tax now in use or that might be devised and put into use, and all existing sources of revenue and new sources of revenue that might be developed; administrative methods and procedures which now obtain in respect to each such tax and how they might be improved; present and prospective governmental expenditures of each governmental agency and the bearing thereof upon and relation to each and every form of tax now imposed or that might be devised and imposed; and the operation, effect, administration, enforcement, and needed revision of any and all laws in any way bearing upon or relating to the subjects of this resolution; and to report thereon to the Senate, including in the reports its recommendations for appropriate legislation.

2. The committee shall consist of five members of the Senate appointed by the Senate Committee on Rules. Vacancies occurring in the membership of the committee shall be filled by the appointing power.

3. The committee is authorized to act during this session of the Legislature, including any recess, and after final adjournment until the commencement of the next regular session, with authority to file its final report not later than the last legislative day of the next regular session.

- (d) Whether for revenue or for the purpose of regulation, an assessment made in the apportionment of benefits conferred by improvements made, or a charge for services or property rendered or delivered, or of any other nature or for any other purpose whatsoever;
- (e) Whether called a tax, an assessment, a fee, a license fee, a registration fee, a rental rate, a sales price, or designated by any other name whatsoever.

7. The sum of thirty-five thousand dollars ($35,000), or as much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby made available from the Contingent Fund of the Senate for the expenses of the committee and its members and for any charges, expenses or claims it may incur under this resolution, to be paid from said Contingent Fund and disbursed, after certification by the chairman of the committee, upon warrants drawn by the State Controller upon the State Treasurer.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

May 1, 1945

To the Members of the Legislature, State of California Fifty-sixth Session, 1945

Pursuant to Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 18, Chapter 21, Statutes of 1945, your Joint Committee on Rivers and Flood Control respectfully submits to you a report on its findings in connection with the proposed Klamath and Trinity River diversions and other related water problems of the Central Valley of California.

Your Joint Committee on Rivers and Flood Control held hearings in Sacramento and San Francisco during January and February, 1945, to ascertain and analyze all the facts relating to the proposed Klamath and Trinity River diversions. Although the committee was successful in collecting and reviewing a tremendous amount of useful information, it has not, in the limited time available, had an opportunity to fulfill, in its entirety, the appointed task of studying and analyzing all of the facts relating to the necessity or desirability of diverting the water of the rivers of California from one watershed to another.

Neither has the committee had sufficient time available to study the effect of these proposed diversions on flood control, irrigation, and recreational problems in these watersheds.

From the testimony given at the hearings and the data submitted, the committee was able to reach some very definite conclusions regarding investigations of proposed projects by the two Federal agencies which are presently engaged in this work in the State of California. Particularly was it evident that the investigation of the proposed Klamath Diversion by the Corps of Engineers is untimely and the feasibility of the project doubtful.

Both the Corps of Engineers, War Department and the Bureau of Reclamation, Interior Department, are formulating postwar construction programs for the State which need to be given serious and detailed review by proper State authorities. On the Legislature rests a heavy obligation to review these plans and programs so that the greatest public interest will be served by their construction.

Your committee has reached several conclusions and makes certain recommendations. However, uppermost in the minds of the members of this committee is the need for an over-all comprehensive plan for water development for the State of California, and particularly for the Central Valley. The best needs of the State can not be served if one particular problem in water development, such as flood control, is allowed to dominate the thinking of persons associated with the development of our water resources. Far more important, especially to the future generations of this State, is providing solutions for the controversial problems of beneficial use. These are the issues where the most conflict exists and are, therefore, usually avoided if possible. It is on issues such as these, water for power, irrigation, and other beneficial uses, that the future of California depends.

Respectfully submitted.

FOREWORD

As the agricultural, industrial, and commercial enterprises in the State of California expand, the conservation and utilization of the State's water resources becomes an even more pressing problem. The rapid expansion of these activities and the enormous increase in population due to the war makes this problem of greater concern to the people of the State.

While making every possible contribution to the successful conclusion of this war, the people of the State are realizing their serious obligation to a plan for the utilization of their precious natural resources to provide for a peacetime economy.

Prospects for the postwar period indicate there will be, more than ever in the past, opportunities for recreation making necessary the proper development and preservation of our fish and wildlife resources. Future plans for the State of California also indicate there will be a tremendous need for additional water and hydroelectric power for agriculture and industry.

These sharply conflicting needs for the limited water resources of Northern California were apparent in the public concern over the proposed diversion of water from the scenic and recreational area along the Klamath River into the vast agricultural and industrial area in the Central Valley of California. This report is a small contribution to a solution of a difficult problem that lies ahead of the Legislature of this State. Continuing and ever more detailed study must be made so that we may make proper use of our water resources and thereby insure from them the maximum benefits for all the people of the State.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The committee wishes to extend its thanks to the following agencies for their helpful cooperation:

Bureau of Reclamation, United States Department of the Interior
Corps of Engineers, United States War Department
Federal Power Commission
Fish and Wildlife Service, United States Department of the Interior
Klamath County Chamber of Commerce
Division of Water Resources, State of California
Division of Fish and Game, State of California

SUMMARY

Early in January, 1945, as a result of investigations by engineers employed by Corps of Engineers, War Department, Siskiyou County residents learned that public hearings would soon be held to consider the local viewpoint regarding the proposed diversion of water from the Klamath River to the Pit River watershed where it would then flow into the Central Valley of California.

Official notice of the public hearings was made by the U. S. Engineer's Office, War Department on January 23, 1945, in a statement signed by Colonel K. M. Moore, District Engineer, San Francisco Division.

As a result of the intense interest and unanimous opposition of Northern California residents, the proposed diversion was brought to the attention of the State Legislature. Senator Randolph Collier of Yreka and Senator Oliver J. Carter of Redding proposed resolutions in the State Senate asking that the Corps of Engineer's investigation be dropped until after the war. The resolution created a Joint Legislative Committee to gather all the facts to protect the interests of the residents of the State of California.

On January 19, 1945, the Senate adopted Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 18. The resolution was adopted in the Assembly on January 24. Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 18 created the Joint Committee on Rivers and Flood Control and empowered the committee to investigate fully the proposed Klamath River and Trinity River diversions which were being studied by the Corps of Engineers and also authorized the committee to investigate other proposed diversions of water from one watershed to another which were contemplated as a part of the State-wide water plan and comprehensive Central Valley Project.

The committee acted quickly and held meetings in Sacramento on January 27, January 29, February 5, and February 19, 1945 and in San Francisco February 6, 1945. The committee also attended and stated its views at public hearings engineered by the War Department in Klamath Falls, Oregon, on February 20th, Yreka, California, on February 21st and Eureka on February 23d.

During these meetings and hearings the members of the legislative committee gathered a considerable amount of data from State, Federal, and local agencies. Representatives of the Corps of Engineers, the United States Bureau of Reclamation, the Federal Power Commission, the State Engineer's office, the State Fish and Game Commission, United States Fish and Wildlife Service, and others were called upon to testify as to their activities and their opinions regarding the proposed Klamath and Trinity River diversions.

The committee submitted several questions of policy to both the Corps of Engineers and the United States Bureau of Reclamation and in reply thereto the committee received some valuable information regarding the conflicting policies of these two Federal agencies which are active in planning, constructing, and operating water development projects in California.

In connection with securing information from Federal agencies, the committee wishes to comment upon the difficulty of obtaining information concerning reports which had not yet been released by the Chief of Engineers in Washington. During the course of the investigation, it was discovered that a report had been made by the Office of the District Engineer of the San Francisco District, and that report had been forwarded to the Office of the Chief of Engineers. A request was made to the District Engineer for the information disclosed in this report and the committee was informed that this report and the information therein could not be given to the committee until the report had been released by the Chief of Engineers in Washington. The committee feels that its power of investigation has been limited to the extent that the information in this report was not made available to the committee. The committee suggests to the agencies of the Federal Government, particularly the Corps of Army Engineers, that this information should be made available to the official investigating body of one of the States of the United States so that the committee could be fully advised of all of the facts involved in the subject of the investigation.

As a result of the information collected and reviewed by your Joint Committee on Rivers and Flood Control, it has come to some definite conclusions and recommendations. It is evident that water conservation and development should be the subject of serious study by all members of the Legislature of the State of California.

Since this committee has been called into being and has made most of the investigations, the State Legislature has enacted into law Senate Bill No. 981 (Quinn), which was signed and approved by the Governor on May 12, 1945. The bill amended Section 10000 of the Water Code "by excepting the project known as the 'Trinity River Diversion,' which is not approved." And further amending Section 10001 of the Water Code as follows: "Except the project known as the 'Trinity River Diversion' constitutes no part of the State Water Plan."

The effect of this act is to take the Trinity River out of the State Water Plan insofar as the State is concerned, it is no part of the State Water Plan, and this has been declared the policy of the State. In other words, the Trinity River should no longer be considered by any Federal or State agency as part of the State Water Plan.

CONCLUSIONS

As a result of the testimony presented and the studies made by the members of the committee, the committee hereby concludes that:

The investigations being conducted in regard to the Klamath River diversions by the Corps of Engineers, War Department, are untimely and uncalled for and are not supported by any local interests whatsoever.

No investigation either by the Corps of Engineers or by the Bureau of Reclamation has shown that the water resources of the Central Valley have been so exhaustively developed that there is a need for diversion of water from the Klamath Basin, now or as far into the future as man can foresee.

Studies and official statements by the Bureau of Reclamation indicate it is doubtful if there ever will be need for diversion of water from the Klamath River Basin.

Preliminary studies indicate that further water requirements of the upper Klamath Basin will make it necessary to develop practically all existing water supply within the Klamath River Basin.

The Bureau of Reclamation studies relative to the Trinity River diversion were expedited because of local interest and the possibility that the Trinity Project could be developed to provide additional war electricity. This need is no longer existent. The enactment of Senate Bill No. 981 (Quinn) has taken the "Trinity River Diversion" out of the State Water Plan.

The amount of water available for diversion from the Trinity River Watershed is considerably less than was shown in early reports by the State Engineer's Office if water requirements in the Trinity River Watershed are to be given priority of use, which must be legislative policy.

The feasibility of the proposed Klamath River Diversions and the proposed Trinity River Diversion are not directly connected with the proposed water development projects within the Central Valley Basin, but can only be diverted into that basin at a tremendous cost, a great economic loss, and the upsetting of the natural conditions of a great water system.

A thorough study of all of the proposed water projects in the Central Valley and their possibilities, is necessary to fully understand whether there is any need or ever will be, to divert any water from other watersheds, and particularly from the Klamath and Trinity Rivers into the Central Valley basin. The full development of waters within the Central Valley should precede any diversion of waters from other watersheds to the Central Valley.

From the studies and investigations made by this committee it is apparent that similar problems which caused the investigation are present in some portions of the Central Valley Project, and no laws should be enacted at this time which would hinder or retard the full and proper development and conservation of the water resources of the State.

RECOMMENDATIONS

After a full review of testimony presented and deliberations among the Members of the Joint Legislative Committee on Rivers and Flood Control, the committee makes the following recommendations:

The present Corps of Engineers' investigations of the proposed Klamath River Diversion should be discontinued without further unnecessary expenditure of public funds.

The Bureau of Reclamation should be requested by local residents to investigate water requirements of the entire Klamath River Basin giving full consideration to the irrigation, power, fish and wildlife, recreational, and other beneficial uses for water.

The bureau studies should include investigation of the possibility of lifting water from the Klamath River for irrigation, of the 60,000 acres of irrigable land in Butte Valley and the possibility of diverting water for the irrigation of another 60,000 acres of irrigable land in Shasta Valley. Plans should be formulated so that any seepage water from the proposed irrigation project should be returned to the Klamath River.

The Trinity River Diversion investigations by the Bureau of Reclamation should be concluded as rapidly as possible and with the least additional expenditure of public funds necessary to make full use of the data collected by the Bureau of Reclamation during the past three years. The Bureau of Reclamation should make no recommendation for the construction of projects on the Trinity River.

Legislation should be introduced to strengthen the principles of the "County of Origin" law, now Section 11460 of the State Water Code.

Legislation should be introduced in the State Legislature making it necessary for Federal agencies to show a ratio of costs against benefits for future water development and that such ratio shall include values for fish and wildlife and recreational purposes.

Legislation should be introduced in the State Legislature extending the Klamath River Fish and Game District upstream to the mouth of Little Bogus Creek and provisions should be made for an even and constant flow of water to properly conserve fish life.

That the Joint Legislative Committee on Rivers and Flood Control should be continued as an interim committee of the Legislature to report again at the 1947 Session of the Legislature on other proposed diversions of water from one watershed to another in the State of California.

MEETING OF THE COMMITTEE, SACRAMENTO, JANUARY 27, 1945

The committee met on January 27, 1945, 2.30 p.m., at the State Capitol, Sacramento, California, and the following were present:

Senators: Carter
Collier
Kuchel
Quinn

Assemblymen: Burns
Call
Denny
Heisinger

The meeting was called to order by Senator Collier, the author of Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 18.

Senator Collier announced that the organization of the Joint Legislative Committee on Rivers and Flood Control was to be the order of business.

Senator Kuchel moved that Senator Collier be named chairman of the committee. Assemblyman Call seconded the motion, and then moved that the nominations be closed. The motion was carried, and Senator Collier was unanimously elected chairman.

Assemblyman Call moved that Assemblyman Denny be named vice chairman. Senator Carter seconded the motion, and then moved that the nominations be closed. The motion was carried and Assemblyman Denny was unanimously elected vice chairman.

A discussion was had concerning a proposed diversion of waters of the Klamath River Watershed into the Sacramento Valley. Chairman Collier announced that he desired to hold a meeting of the committee on Monday, January 29, 1945, in order to hear statements by public officials of the State of California, by representatives of the United States Army Corps of Engineers.

The chairman announced that Assemblyman Call would act in the capacity of secretary of the committee, and that Senator Kuchel would assist him.

It was moved, seconded and carried that the chairman be authorized to engage the services of a court reporter to report the proceedings of the meeting of the committee and to assist in the preparation of minutes and reports of such meetings.

The meeting then adjourned to convene Monday, January 29, 1945, at 10 a.m., in Room 415, State Capitol, Sacramento, California.

MEETING OF THE COMMITTEE, SACRAMENTO, JANUARY 29, 1945

The next meeting of the committee was in Room 415, State Capitol, Sacramento, California, Monday, January 29, 1945.

The meeting was called to order at 10.15 a.m., by the chairman, who announced that the meeting was called to hear informally statements of various State and Federal officials concerning the proposal of a branch of the Federal Government to divert the waters of the Klamath River Watershed into the Sacramento Valley.

Senator Carter suggested that the committee hear from Mr. A. D. Edmonston, Deputy Engineer, State Division of Water Resources. Mr. Edmonston addressed the committee upon the subject of the proposed diversion of water from the Klamath River Watershed into the Sacramento River Basin.

Mr. R. S. Calland, Assistant Regional Director, Region II, Federal Bureau of Reclamation, and Mr. S. A. Kerr, Regional Planning Engineer of the Bureau addressed the committee. A summary of their statements is hereto appended.

As a result of discussion by all members of the committee, it was agreed that inasmuch as in 1924, the people of the State, by their enactment of an initiative proposal, created the Klamath River Fish and Game District, consisting of the Klamath River, and the waters thereof, following its meanderings from the confluence of the Klamath River and the Shasta River in Siskiyou County to the mouth of the Klamath River in Del Norte County, and that the people had thereby prohibited any dam or other artificial obstruction in any of the water of such Fish and Game District, and that it was provided further, that any artificial obstruction so constructed or placed or maintained in that district was a public nuisance. The placing of any obstructions on the Klamath River, such as the erection of any dam thereon, if accomplished on such portions of the river as lie outside the boundaries of the district, would violate the spirit of the aforesaid initiative of the people, if not the initiative itself. See Exhibit C hereto appended.

It was pointed out that since 1924, the Klamath River Fish and Game District has been of tremendous recreational value to countless thousands of sports-loving Californians each year, and that the diversion of water from the Klamath River would not merely constitute a crime, but would emasculate the river's use for recreational purposes.

Mr. H. L. Ricks, President of the Fish and Game Commission of the State of California, and Mr. A. C. Taft, Chief of the Bureau of Fish Conservation, Division of Fish and Game, expressed to the committee their opinions of the effect of such a diversion and that it could conceivably dry up the river in seasons of low water and deprive sports-minded people of the State of this great recreational area. See the memorandum submitted to the committee by the Division of Water Resources, State Department of Public Works, concerning the proposed diversion of water from the Klamath River Watershed into the Sacramento River Basin. (Exhibit A.)

As a result of testimony by representatives of the Federal Bureau of Reclamation, the fact was presented that the bureau recognizes and respects water rights under State law. It was the opinion of the members of the committee, that the Bureau of Reclamation would not, under the Federal statutes governing its duties, enter into any diversion of the water of the Klamath River. It was developed that the Trinity River, one of the main tributaries of the Klamath River, has no present diversion of water, although there is some gold dredging intermittently done on parts of it, and that there is presently some investigation on the part of the Bureau of Reclamation on the proposal to divert the waters of the Trinity River into the Sacramento. There are, however, no present plans on the part of the bureau to divert waters of the Klamath into the Sacramento Basin.

In its investigations of proposed projects, the Bureau of Reclamation considers all relevant data bearing upon the question of economic feasibility of the project or plan. Such data include questions of the potential effect on fish and game. The Fish and Wildlife Service is called upon for factual information on this point. Questions of salinity repulsion, flood control and irrigation all enter into consideration. This, it was believed, is not the case in projects proposed and investigated by the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers, whose major, if not sole, consideration, is that of flood control.

The committee was of the opinion, after listening to the statements of various witnesses, that there was absolutely no requirement for flood control in the proposed diversion of the waters from either the Klamath River or the Trinity River; but that it was possible for such a diversion to assist in the development of hydroelectric power. However, the need for additional power which would result from any Klamath diversion, was not demonstrated as a result of the testimony of witnesses present.

It was believed that any diversion on the Klamath River would have a widespread effect, not alone on its recreational value, but also on industry and the future economic development of the land through which it flows. As an example of this, it was pointed out that seven new lumber mills have been started in Humboldt County in the past year, and that they utilize the Klamath River for lumber floating, which would be impossible were any appreciable quantity of water diverted.

So far as the Bureau of Reclamation is concerned, the committee was specifically informed that no project, actual or contemplated, for the Klamath, was under consideration, but that at the request of some local organizations including the Trinity County Board of Supervisors, an inquiry was being conducted as to the feasibility of diversion of waters from the Trinity. The testimony of Bureau of Reclamation representatives is summarized in the appendix.

The committee was of the opinion that, if possible, representatives of the Army Corps of Engineers should be heard from, as respects the proposed plans for Klamath Diversion, and the reasons advanced therefor.

The committee read portions of the report to Congress (H. R. Documents No. 181, 1933) by the War Department, which, as of the time of the report, looked with disfavor on any diversion of the waters of Klamath River, and the committee raised the question as to what had now motivated a reconsideration of the subject.

The chairman announced that a meeting would be held in the State Building at San Francisco, Tuesday, February 6, 1945, at 10 a.m., to hear from representatives of the Corps of Engineers, if it were possible, to arrange for their presence. He further announced that he had delegated to Senator Kuchel the task of accumulating some data for the committee, and to Assemblyman Call the duty of inviting the representatives of the Army Corps of Engineers to be present at the next meeting.

The meeting was then adjourned.

MEETING OF THE COMMITTEE, SACRAMENTO, FEBRUARY 5, 1945

The committee met at the State Capitol, Sacramento, California, on February 5, 1945. The meeting was called to order by the chairman, who explained that the meeting originally scheduled for this day in San Francisco was postponed until February 6th at San Francisco at 10 a.m.

This change was effected in order that members of the committee would have the opportunity to meet informally with the Deputy Chief of the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers, Major General Robbins, who is in Sacramento for today only.

All members present received statistical and informative material on the question of diversion of the waters of the Klamath River. The meeting was adjourned, the chairman announcing that any member of the committee was invited to attend the informal conference with Major General Robbins.

An informal meeting was held later in the day between Major General Robbins, Deputy Chief of the Army Corps of Engineers, and members of the legislative interim committee on the proposed diversion of waters of the Klamath River. Attending were: Senator Randolph Collier, Chairman; Senators Oliver Carter and Thomas H. Kuchel; Assemblymen Paul Denny and S. L. Heisinger.

General Thomas M. Robbins informed the committee that the reinvestigation of the Klamath River was authorized by Congress in 1937, Section 5, Publication No. 406, Seventy-fifth Congress, H. R. 7646, approved August 28, 1937; and that the people of those sections concerned would be given ample opportunity to be heard. He stated that the will of the people would prevail in arriving at any decision, and that if the people opposed diversion of Klamath River waters, no diversion would be made.

Senator Collier, spokesman for the committee, stated that in his opinion, the people of the northern counties were unanimously opposed to diversion of the Klamath, and that the State of California has spoken against such a program since 1924, when the Klamath Fish and Game District was voted and all types of obstruction on the Klamath, within that district, were prohibited.

Under the new law, recently enacted, all Army Engineer investigations, authorized by Congress, must be cleared through the authorities of the State in question, before being finally forwarded to Congress for approval.

MEETING OF THE COMMITTEE, SAN FRANCISCO, FEBRUARY 6, 1945

Chairman Collier called the meeting to order at 10.30 a.m.

After some preliminary remarks regarding the purposes of the meeting and the purposes of the committee, he called upon Col. K. M. Moore to explain the purpose and nature of the investigations on the proposed Klamath River Diversion. Col. Moore was assisted in his testimony by Mr. Otto Von Seggern, Civil Engineer for the Corps of Engineers. The greater part of the day was taken up with testimony by Col. Moore and Mr. Von Seggern.

In the afternoon a brief testimony was given by Dr. Richard Van Cleve, California State Fish and Game Commission, Mr. Walter Bradley, State Mineralogist, State Division of Fish and Game, and Mr. Leslie F. Hubbard, representative of the Northern California fish industry.

Toward the conclusion of the hearing on February 6th, Senator Carter proposed a number of questions regarding the Klamath River and Trinity River diversions. He suggested that these questions be submitted to both the Corps of Engineers and the U. S. Bureau of Reclamation for reply so that the committee could have the benefit of written statements by each of these two investigating Federal agencies.

MEETING OF THE COMMITTEE, SACRAMENTO, FEBRUARY 19, 1945

The next meeting of the committee was at the State Capitol, Sacramento, February 19, 1945, 10 a.m.

The hearing was called to order by Senator Collier, Chairman, at 10.15 a.m., who announced that the hearing was called to hear, informally, statements of various State officials concerning the proposal of a branch of the Federal Government to divert the waters of the Klamath River Watershed into the Sacramento Valley Watershed.

Senator Collier suggested that the committee hear from Mr. John C. Beebe, Regional Administrator, Federal Power Commission. Testimony of Mr. Beebe appended hereto and marked Appendix IX.

Senator Collier then suggested that the committee hear from Mr. Raymond Matthew, State Engineer's Office. Testimony of Mr. Matthew appended hereto and marked Appendix X.

Senator Collier next suggested that the committee hear from Lt. Colonel Frank E. Bonner, 100 Manor, Piedmont, who is Consulting Engineer for the Eureka Chamber of Commerce. Testimony of Lt. Colonel Bonner appended hereto and marked Appendix XI.

There being no further business to come before the committee, it was adjourned at 3.40 p.m. to meet at the call of the chairman.

PUBLIC HEARINGS, CORPS OF ENGINEERS, KLAMATH FALLS, OREGON, FEBRUARY 20, 1945

The first of three public hearings conducted by the U. S. Army Engineers on the proposed Klamath and Trinity River diversions opened in Klamath Falls, Oregon, February 20, 1945. The Klamath Chamber of Commerce, representing 30 organizations in the upper Klamath Basin, and other basin interests, testified that the Klamath Basin has an ultimate need for all of its water and forcibly opposed any diversion of the water from that area.

William Wales, civil engineer and State Watermaster, who made the engineering study for the Chamber of Commerce, pointed out that the Klamath Basin will need all of its water for maximum irrigation expansion. County Agricultural Agent C. A. Henderson told of the agricultural history of the basin and showed that changing crop conditions demanded more water.

As the hearing progressed, it was pointed out repeatedly by Klamath interests that there would be an ultimate need for the so-called "surplus" water in the Klamath Basin and, if such water is diverted before this area reaches its maximum development, the Klamath Basin has no guarantee to a prior right to the water once it has been diverted into the Central Valleys. Consideration must also be given to the present need for such water during periods of drought.

It developed that the U. S. fish and wildlife agents have made little study thus far of the effect of any of the proposed diversion schemes on fish and wildlife in the Klamath Area. Surveys would be required over a period of years to complete information on this aspect of the investigation.

Dr. P. R. Needham, scientist for the Oregon Game Commission, appeared at the hearing and warned that the drying up of the Klamath River to Keno would ruin a fine rainbow trout stream, thus endangering recreational facilities on the Klamath River.

Numerous organizations, both those on the chamber brief and others, made antidiversion representations at the hearing. Among others appearing were the Klamath Indians, opposing the proposed Sprague River Reservoir which they find threatens to deprive them of their land the government agreed to protect, the Klamath unit of the International Woodworkers of America, CIO, and F. F. McCready, who pointed out the proposed diversion of water would inundate much of the region's valuable cattle land. Appended hereto under Appendix XII is a brief presented by Klamath Chamber of Commerce including organizations, agencies, and individuals concurring in brief by Klamath Chamber of Commerce and tables on agricultural production addressed to U. S. Engineers Office.

PUBLIC HEARINGS, CORPS OF ENGINEERS, YREKA, CALIFORNIA,
FEBRUARY 21, 1945

At the second public hearing conducted by the U. S. Army Engineers in Yreka, California, on February 21, 1945, Superior Judge James M. Allen of Siskiyou County testified that any taking of water from the Klamath River Watershed would harm the area's recreational, agricultural, mineral, navigation, timber, and power resources. Judge Allen represented the northern California resources protection committee vigorously opposing any proposed diversion of water from the Klamath area.

Others testifying at the Yreka hearing were Senators Randolph Collier, Yreka, Oliver J. Carter of Redding, and Assemblyman Paul Denny of Etna.

Appended hereto is the brief submitted by Hon. James M. Allen, Chairman, Northern California Natural Resources Protective Committee under Appendix XIII and the Statement by Senator Oliver J. Carter at Yreka February 21, 1945, under Appendix XVII.

PUBLIC HEARINGS, CORPS OF ENGINEERS, EUREKA, CALIFORNIA,
FEBRUARY 23, 1945

At the third public hearing held in Eureka, California, on February 23, 1945, the U. S. Army Engineers were told that any alternative proposal to divert water from the Klamath and Trinity Rivers would depreciate Indian rights and seriously endanger commercial fishing.

O. M. Boggus, Superintendent of the Hoopah Indian agency, testified that the 1500 Indians along the Klamath River had been guaranteed their water and fishing rights by the Federal Government and that any diversion of this water would depreciate, if not entirely destroy their fishing.

Lloyd Byrne of Crescent City, California, testified that 1100 commercial fishermen along the north coast would be virtually put out of business and that the diversion would destroy the Klamath River spawning beds.

State Senator Irwin T. Quinn, of Eureka, objected to any diversion from the Klamath or Trinity Rivers and stated that in his opinion the Central Valleys do not need water from the upper Klamath River.

Judge C. A. Paulsen, representing the Supervisors of Trinity County, stated that this area was not concerned with matters relating to the main Klamath River. He added that he was not in a position to state whether or not the proposed Trinity River Diversion would be beneficial to the area in the vicinity of Weaverville. He suggested that a decision in this regard should await submission of plans. He stated that the supervisors of Trinity County had endorsed the Bureau of Reclamation's plan to investigate the Trinity River Diversion. "That endorsement," he stated "is still good."

Notice of Public Hearings to Be Held at Klamath Falls, Oregon, and at Yreka and Eureka, California, on Comprehensive Report on Klamath River and Tributaries, Oregon and California

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

A comprehensive survey report of the entire Klamath River System in Oregon and California is in preparation by the Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army, with a view to preparing a general, overall plan for the most beneficial development, conservation, and use of the waters of the entire river system. The investigation was authorized by the Flood Control Act approved August 28, 1937 (Public No. 406, Seventy-fifth Congress, First Session) and also is being made as a review of the report entitled "Klamath River, Oregon and California," contained in House of Representatives Document No. 181, Seventy-third Congress, Second Session, which itself was made under the provisions of House Document

No. 308, Sixty-ninth Congress, First Session in 1933. The present investigation embraces flood control, navigation, irrigation, reclamation, hydroelectric power, fish and wildlife, recreation, and otherwater-use features, and is being made in close cooperation with the Department of Agriculture, the Bureau of Reclamation and the Fish and Wildlife Service of the Department of the Interior and the Federal Power Commission.

In order that the views and desires of all interested parties may be known, and to obtain all additional information and data possible bearing on the subject, public hearings will be held by the undersigned on this matter as follows:

At 10 a.m., Tuesday, February 20, 1945, in the American Legion Hall, Klamath Falls, Oregon, to consider matters related to the Upper Klamath River System, including the existing power installations at Copeco;

At 10 a.m., Wednesday, February 21, 1945, in the Chambers of the Board of Supervisors, Court House, Yreka, California, to consider matters related to the Klamath River;

At 10 a.m., Friday, February 23, 1945, in the Chambers of the Board of Supervisors, Courthouse, Eureka, California, to consider matters related to the Lower Klamath River and its tributaries, including the entire Trinity River.

All interested parties are invited to be present or to be represented at any of the above times and places, particularly the officials of any State, county, city, town, or local association whose interests may be affected by the plans under consideration for development of the river system. They will be given an opportunity to express their views and to present any pertinent information and data and to suggest changes considered desirable and to discuss the plans under consideration. All pertinent matters so presented will be given consideration in the final preparation of the report. Reasons should be advanced to justify statements presented and the text should be confined to the subject under consideration. Oral statements will be heard, but for accuracy of record, all important facts and arguments should be submitted in writing as the reports of the hearings will be forwarded for consideration by the reviewing authorities. Written statements (six copies) may be handed to the undersigned at the hearing or mailed to him beforehand. Legible reduced copies of maps and prints are acceptable when their substitution for the originals will reduce the bulk of the submitted material.

The plans tentatively being studied at this time contemplate the storage of flood waters in new reservoirs in the upper Klamath and the Trinity River basins and the diversion of the developed surplus waters to the Central Valley Project of California for future hydroelectric power and irrigation use.

It has been found that the construction of a large reservoir on the Sprague River to supplement the existing storage on Upper Klamath Lake would develop an adequate and dependable supply for all the ultimate water needs in the basin above Keno and would also provide additional surplus water for diversion via the Klamath-Pit Route. In this scheme of development, the controlled waters would flow through existing natural channels to Lake Ewauna at Klamath Falls. From this point, a portion of the surplus waters would be routed through a main conduit following the existing waterways to Tule Lake and thence through diversion works into the Pit River Basin. Other surplus waters would be routed in improved natural channels through Klamath Straits near Holland of Ady to permanent wildlife refuges on Lower Klamath Lake and thence through the existing drainage tunnel into Tule Lake, where they would join the other waters in the main conduit.

Consideration has been given to the Trinity-Sacramento Diversion for supplying additional irrigation water to the Central Valley Project and for developing hydroelectric power as contemplated in the California State Water Plan. The utilization of conservation reservoirs on headwater streams of the Trinity basin and on other tributaries of the lower Klamath, primarily for improving the propagating migratory fish life in the lower basin, together with the wildlife problems of the Upper Klamath Basin, are under joint study with the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service and are considered as very important elements that need to be properly evaluated before any final conclusion and recommendations are reached on plans of development for the entire watershed.

It appears that the Klamath-Pit and the Trinity-Sacramento diversions would be economically feasible when the need for additional irrigation water supplies develops in the Central Valley Project of California. Hence, the primary purpose of this investigation is to set forth and properly evaluate all of the important elements, with a view to formulating a program of efficient conservation of the diverse water resources of the entire Klamath watershed. It is hoped that a useful report can be prepared that will serve as a guide in project planning and for future action so as to foster an orderly development of the Klamath Basin and its great potentialities to the benefit of all the various interests.

APPENDIX II

Statement by Deputy State Engineer, A. D. Edmonston (Exhibit A)

The Klamath River System drains an area of approximately 15,500 square miles in Northern California and in Southeastern Oregon. The mean seasonal run-off of the system is about 11,200,000 acre-feet. The maximum seasonal run-off of record (1911-1926) was 16,800,000 acre-feet in 1920-1921. The minimum seasonal run-off of record was 3,740,000 acre-feet in 1923-24.

The Trinity River, a tributary of the Klamath River, drains an area of 2,965 square miles entirely in California. The mean seasonal run-off of the Trinity River measured at Weitchpec, at its junction with the Klamath River, is estimated to be about 4,400,000 acre-feet. The maximum seasonal run-off of record (1932-1944), near Hoopa, 11 miles above the mouth of the Trinity River was 7,601,000 acre-feet in 1938 and the minimum seasonal run-off of record was 1,900,000 acre-feet in 1934.

The water resources of the Klamath River have been investigated and reported upon by Federal and State departments and private concerns.

The following reports are on file in the office of the Division of Water Resources:

1. Report on Survey of Canal from Klamath River to Shasta Valley, Siskiyou County, California, by Symmes, Means and Chandler, August, 1913

This report finds that the most feasible location of a canal from Klamath River to Shasta Valley in Siskiyou County would divert from Klamath River at elevation about 4,080 feet, just below Keno. Based upon a capacity of 600 second-feet, the cost of the canal is estimated at $4,274,000. The conclusion of the report is as follows:

"Assuming an area of 75,000 acres irrigable from this canal, the cost of main canal will be $57 per acre. The cost of distribution system should not exceed $15 per acre, if the laterals are built to each quarter section. The total cost would, therefore, approximate $72 per acre of land."

2. Report of Major P. M. Norboe, February 27, 1920

Report to W. F. McClure, State Engineer of California, on investigation of a project for an irrigation district in Siskiyou County, located in Shasta Valley, ten to eighteen miles southeast of Yreka. Petition—15,600 acres.

Source of supply—Shasta River.

Conclusion—If the area be reduced so as to contain, say, 4,300 acres of irrigable land, the 40 second-feet will then irrigate it at the rate of 106 acres a foot, and when the full claim of 63 second-feet is realized, duty will be 68 acres to the foot.

3. Report of Homer J. Gault and Foster Towle on Klamath-Shasta Valley Reclamation Project—California, April, 1923

SYNOPSIS

"1. The object of this investigation is to determine the feasibility of reclamation of certain lands in the Shasta Valley, Siskiyou County, California, by diverting the water of Klamath River. The plans involve the development of a large amount of hydro-electric power. The investigation has been made by the Reclamation Service under an agreement with the State of California and the Klamath-Shasta Valley Irrigation District.

"2. The irrigable area is about 65,000 acres. Agricultural land in the valley is worth $5 to $20 per acre without irrigation, and irrigated land is valued at $75 to $100 per acre, not including the value of improvements. The land is practically all in private ownership, and about 38 per cent of it is now in cultivation by dry farming.

"3. Four plans are presented, differing in the area to be reclaimed and the arrangements for power development. Under each plan 2,584 acres would be served by pumping. The cost of the irrigation project is so inseparably involved with power development that the cost for irrigation alone can not be estimated on present information. The California-Oregon Power Company owns and operates two hydro-electric power plants on Klamath River between Klamath Falls and Shasta Valley, and it has made application to the Federal Power Commission for further developments on this section of the river. Any diversion of water for irrigation would result in reduced power possibilities from water of the Klamath River between Keno and Willow Creek, and also would involve power rights of the California-Oregon Power Co., both at their existing plants and in relation to their prospective developments. On account of the vested rights held by the power company it is suggested that in order to arrive at more definite conclusion regarding cost for irrigation the district should take up negotiations with the California-Oregon Power Company concerning the diversion of water for the project and the development and marketing of power incidental to the irrigation plans herein outlined. Whether the irrigation project is feasible will depend upon the terms of such an agreement as can be reached with the power company, since without certain financial credits from power developed the project is too costly to be feasible at present."

SUMMARY OF COST OF VARIOUS PLANS

Plan	Acres irrigated	Total cost	Cost per acre
I -----	65,000 acres	$29,674,465 <sup>a</sup>	$456
II -----	65,000 acres	21,392,640 <sup>b</sup>	329
III -----	32,000 acres	11,014,198 <sup>b</sup>	344

4. Klamath River and Its Utilization, by E. C. LaRue, 1923

The purpose and scope of the report are given in the preface as follows:

"Information relating to the water resources of the Klamath River Basin has been collected by many agencies but these data have never been brought together so that a broad view of the possible utilization of the whole river could be obtained. The principal facts relating to this subject have been assembled and studies have been made of the possibility of controlling the flow of the river by means of storage. It is the purpose of this report to call attention to the possibilities for development of the water resources of the basin. It is hoped that the data here presented will form the basis for a comprehensive plan of development, and that future development in the basin will not be inconsistent with this plan."

No conclusions are reached or recommendations are made in the report.

"The last noted is the only plant in the above list which is constructed at present. Other existing plants in the Trinity Basin are the Carrville plant on Coffee Creek and the small development of Trinity Dredging Co. at Fairview, neither of which are in service at present. The aggregate capacity of the three existing plants in the drainage basin is 2,775 kilowatts and the average output capability about 7,000,000 kilowatt-hours (800 kilowatts)."

The following is quoted from pages 41 and 42 of the report:

"Klamath River below Scott River has fall of only 13 feet to the mile, but on account of the excellent dam sites and large water supply it is very favorable for power development. At present, however, development is blocked by an initiative measure sponsored by the State Fish and Game Commission and adopted in 1924. The text of the act follows:

"SECTION 1. The Klamath River Fish and Game District is hereby created and shall consist of the Klamath River and the waters thereof, following its meanderings from the confluence of the Klamath River and the Shasta River in the County of Siskiyou to the mouth of the Klamath River in Del Norte County.

"SEC. 2. Every person, firm, corporation, or company who constructs or maintains any dam or other artificial obstruction in any of the waters of said Klamath River Fish and Game District is guilty of misdemeanor and upon conviction must be fined not less than five hundred dollars ($500) or be imprisoned in the county jail of the county in which the conviction shall be had not less than 100 days, or by both such fine and imprisonment, and any artificial obstruction constructed, placed or maintained in said district is hereby declared to be a public nuisance.

"It is reasonable to anticipate that as the need for water power expands and the problem of passing fish over high dams is satisfactorily solved, the present State prohibition of dams may be dissolved by the repeal of the act. The water-power resources involved are much too valuable to the people of the State to remain unutilized indefinitely. In anticipation, therefore, of the ultimate repeal of the law the plan of development shown in Plate 15, is presented. The relation of the various dam sites will permit almost the entire available head to be used down to a point 30 miles from the ocean, at elevation 47 feet."

5a. Report to the Federal Power Commission on the Uses of the Trinity River, California, by Board of Engineers, D. C. Henny, U. S. Grant, III, W. F. McClure and E. W. Kramer, February 18, 1924

The conclusions of the report are:

"a. The full use of Trinity River water makes essential large storage at its headwaters where required storage facilities exist.

"b. Potential power of Trinity River water regulated by available storage is slightly greater if flowing down its natural course than if partially diverted.

"c. Irrigation possibilities in the Trinity Basin are relatively small and will not be adversely affected by diversion.

"d. Sacramento River water supply and potential means of regulating it are sufficient for the irrigation of the entire Sacramento Valley.

"e. The joint water supply of the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers, and means of regulating it, are insufficient for the irrigation of both valleys.

"f. Diversion of Trinity River water will permit more complete irrigation development in the joint valleys than is otherwise possible, involving a potential addition of at least 160,000 acres of irrigated land.

"g. Trinity River water, if diverted, is likely to be used on the west side of the Sacramento Valley; thereby permitting later Sacramento storage development to supply a portion of the lower San Joaquin Valley.

"h. The only important industrial use made of Trinity River water is in connection with gold dredging. Diversion will not interfere with this industry. Storage above diversion may flood prospective dredging lands in the reservoir site; which fact does not justify delay in reservoir construction.

"i. Navigation is confined to Klamath River below the mouth of Trinity. It may be interfered with to a small extent by diversion, which on the other hand may benefit Sacramento navigation.

"j. The advantages of diversion greatly outweigh its disadvantages."

The recommendations of the report are:

"In harmony with the above it is recommended:

"a. That no power rights be granted to prospective Trinity River water users which will interfere with ultimate diversion of Trinity water to the Sacramento Valley.

"b. That any permission to divert water from the Trinity River to the Sacramento Valley provide for the maintenance of a flow of at least 20 second-feet in the Trinity River below the point of diversion."

6. Bulletin No. 25 "Report to Legislature of 1931 on State Water Plan," Division of Water Resources, State Department of Public Works, 1930, and Bulletin No. 26 "Sacramento River Basin," Division of Water Resources, State Department of Public Works, 1931

The foregoing reports were prepared pursuant to Chapter 832, Statutes of 1929. The coordinated State Water Plan as presented in the reports prepared pursuant to that were adopted by the Legislature in 1941. (Statutes 1941, Chapter 1185.)

The following is quoted from pages 213 and 214 of Bulletin No. 26.

"In addition to the waters of the Sacramento River Basin which may be regulated for all uses by means of reservoirs, other waters could be imported into the basin from watersheds in which there is a surplus over the ultimate future water requirements in those watersheds. The streams from which it is physically possible to divert a part of the flow into the Sacramento River Basin are the Eel River; the upper Klamath River; and the Trinity River, a branch of the Klamath River.

"The Eel River water could be diverted into Clear Lake which is on Cache Creek, a Sacramento River Basin stream. Two plans for this diversion are physically feasible. One plan would be to convey surplus water to the Snow Mountain Water and Power Company power plant in Potter Valley by means of existing works and to construct a canal and tunnel to convey it from the power house to Clear Lake. The other plan would be to develop a larger supply by diverting some of the run-offs of the Middle Fork of Eel River, Black Butte River, and numerous small creeks into Lake Pillsbury by means of a collecting canal and tunnel to Salmon Creek. From Lake Pillsbury a tunnel would convey the water to Middle Creek, a tributary of Clear Lake. The water from either diversion could be stored in Clear Lake or in the Capay reservoir of the State Water Plan.

"There are three possible routes for the diversion of the Klamath River water to the Sacramento River Basin. Under two of the plans water could be diverted from the river just below Upper Klamath Lake which would be used as a storage reservoir. One route for the diversion would be by way of Tule Lake and the Modoc Lava Beds with a discharge into Fall River in the Sacramento River Watershed. The other route for the diversion would be by way of the rim of Shasta Valley and through a tunnel into the headwaters of the Sacramento River near Mount Shasta. Under the third plan of diversion, water would be diverted from the Klamath River about seven miles upstream from Fall Creek at an elevation about 1,000 feet lower than with the first two plans. The route of this conduit also would be by way of the rim of Shasta Valley and thence through a tunnel into the headwaters of the upper Sacramento River. The conduit for each plan would have considerable length and several miles would be in tunnel.

"The Trinity River Diversion is the most feasible of all the diversions into the Sacramento River Basin and water from it will be required to furnish a supply to lands on the western side of the upper Sacramento Valley which it is not feasible to serve from any other source."

"It, therefore, was adopted as one of the major units of the State Water Plan. These lands comprise an area 12 miles wide extending from a point 6 miles northwesterly of Red Bluff to Stony Creek. The total gross agricultural area is about 300,000 acres with a net irrigable area of 171,000 acres. About 440,000 acre-feet annually would be diverted from Clear Creek for irrigation of these lands which lie at a maximum elevation of 1,000 feet. This diversion, in addition to furnishing a large and dependable supply of new water which may, with adequate storage on the Trinity River, be drawn upon as desired, has large power possibilities."

"Fairview Reservoir -----	$37,000,000
Power Plant No. 1 at Fairview Dam -----	3,500,000
Lewiston Diversion Dam and Reservoir -----	900,000
Conduit from Lewiston Diversion Dam to Power Plant No. 2, and Power Plant No. 2 -----	10,700,000
Conduit from Power Plant No. 2 to Power Plant No. 3, and Power Plant No. 3 -----	2,400,000
Conduit from Power Plant No. 3 to Power Plant No. 4, and Power Plant No. 4 -----	7,500,000
Total cost of Trinity River Diversion -----	62,000,000"

The average annual output of the entire system in hydro-electric energy is estimated at 1,064,000,000 kwh.

The annual amount of water which could be diverted would be 800,000 acre-feet.

7. Water Resources of the Klamath Basin, Oregon and California; E. W. Kramer, John C. Beebe, and Ralph R. Randall, June 20, 1932

This report presents three plans of electric power development on the Klamath River and its tributaries; namely, (a) development without diversion to Sacramento River Basin; (b) development with diversion from Trinity River to Sacramento River Basin; and (c) development with diversion to Pit River.

With respect to the diversion to the Pit River the following is quoted from report beginning on page 74:

"ECONOMIC CONSIDERATIONS

"The Klamath River below Klamath Lake flows through a wild, mountainous, sparsely inhabited region throughout substantially its entire course. The amount of arable land within its watershed is small compared to the quantity of irrigation water which the river could supply. It appears, therefore, that in its present location the Klamath must ever continue to flow in large measure unused, and waste into the ocean.

"To the south of the Klamath River lies the great interior basin of California. In this basin are thousands of square miles of fine agricultural land, favorably situated climatically and topographically, for which the development of water supply within the basin will become increasingly expensive as the more desirable reservoirs are constructed.

"The investigations incident to the preparation of this report have disclosed that it is physically possible and may be economically desirable, to divert the surplus waters of the upper Klamath River together with those of Lost River, southeastward through Tule Lake and the Modoc Lava Beds to Pit River, and this to the Sacramento Valley. Such a development, if constructed, would augment the water supply available for power development above and along the Pit and Sacramento Rivers, for irrigation in the great interior basin of California, for navigation on the Sacramento River and for the control of salt water encroachments in the Sacramento-San Joaquin delta.

"This diversion would materially increase and supplement the benefits to be obtained by the construction of the proposed Kennett Reservoir on the Sacramento River near Redding, since the completely regulated flow from the Klamath Diversion would flow through the Kennett power plant and then be available for irrigation, navigation and salt invasion control in the great interior basin. The diversion may therefore serve to considerably lessen the magnitude and cost of the initial Kennett development which would be required to accomplish any given beneficial result. One of its greatest ultimate benefits would be to postpone the development of other more expensive storage projects within the basin.

"The proposed diversion will make possible the use of the diverted water for power development through approximately the entire usable head from Keno to the sea whereas otherwise the approximately 1,800 feet of head below the mouth of the Shasta River could not be developed unless and until the hereinbefore mentioned legal bar is removed." Mr. Beebe says that these statements no longer hold good as times have changed.

8. H. R. Document No. 181, Seventy-third Congress, Second Session, 1933. Report on Klamath River, Oregon and California

This report was made under the provisions of House Document No. 308, Sixty-ninth Congress, First Session, which was enacted into law with modifications in Section 1 of the River and Harbor Act of June 21, 1927.

In the letter of the Acting Chief of Engineers to the Secretary of War, dated October 14, 1933, it is stated:

"14. The division engineer concurs in the views of the district engineer.

"15. The reports of the district and division engineers have been referred, as required by law, to the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors and its report, agreeing in general in their conclusions, is submitted herewith.

"16. After due consideration of the above-mentioned reports, I concur in the views of the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors. Improvement of the Klamath River for navigation is not warranted. Flood damages are small and works primarily for their prevention would not be economically justified. Incidental benefits would probably be secured from storage reservoirs constructed for other purposes. It appears that the production of hydroelectric power, with due regard to irrigation needs, is of primary consideration in the formulation of plans for water conservation in this basin. Investigations indicate that sites exist for a system of power plants having a total installed capacity of about 2,000,000 kilowatts. However, markets for the bulk of this power will not be available for many years to come, and the construction of dams on the main stream below the mouth of the Shasta River is now prohibited by State law in the interest of fish propagation. Diversion of the upper Trinity River into the Sacramento Valley, as contemplated by the California State water plan, is considered advisable. Diversion of water from the upper Klamath into the Pit River Basin should not be considered unless it were certain that all irrigation needs could be satisfied and that there was no possibility of the repeal or modification of the law prohibiting dams below the Shasta. Irrigation development is already under the jurisdiction of the United States Reclamation Bureau. Power development should be left to the initiative of private interests under the provisions of the Federal Water Power Act. I therefore report that the improvement of the Klamath River for navigation, either alone or in connection with power development, flood control or irrigation, or any combination thereof, should not be undertaken by the United States at the present time."

The proposed power developments considered in the foregoing report are summarized as follows:

	Number of plants	Installation in kilowatts
Link River -----	1	7,460
Klamath River, above mouth of Shasta River-----	8	(600 constructed) 263,487
Klamath River, below mouth of Shasta River-----	7	(47,000 constructed) 968,308
Scott River -----	1	64,156
Salmon River -----	3	45,506
Trinity River and tributaries-----	10	653,496
Total -----	30	2,002,413

The total head developed would be 9,376 feet with an output of 12,000,000,000 kwh. of electric energy in a median year and 4,422,000,000 kwh. in a dry year.

Outlook in Regard to Electric Power Demands and Supply in Northern California Market

The following information and data with respect to electric power demands and supply in Northern California have been compiled in response to certain questions raised during the testimony before the committee at its hearing held in Sacramento on January 29, 1945.

Present Electric Facilities Serving Northern California Market

The present electric facilities serving the northern California power market which comprises the entire region of northern California from the northern boundary of the State to the Tehachapi Divide are owned and operated by several electric utilities, chief of which is the Pacific Gas and Electric Company. The generating facilities now comprise in round figures 1,320,000 kilovolt amperes in hydroelectric plants and 645,000 kilovolt amperes in steam-electric plants or a combined total of 1,965,000 kilovolt amperes. The Pacific Gas and Electric Company owns and operates about 82 per cent of the hydroelectric facilities and about 97 per cent of the steam-electric (including internal combustion) facilities, and about 88 per cent of all production facilities.

The Pacific Gas and Electric Company is interconnected with and purchases power from the California-Oregon Power Company in the north and from the Southern California Edison Company in the south. It is also interconnected with the Sierra Pacific Power Company on the east and normally furnishes power to the latter company. In addition the Pacific Gas and Electric Company is interconnected with the production facilities of other utilities and purchases power from a large number.

The foregoing figures as to installed capacity do not include the installations in the Shasta and Keswick power plants of the Central Valley Project which when completed will add 450,000 kilovolt amperes of installed capacity to the electric production facilities of northern California. At present, two units with a total capacity of 150,000 kilovolt amperes are installed and in operation in Shasta Power Plant.

Dependable Output Capacity of Production Facilities

With the addition of the complete installation of the Shasta and Keswick power plants, the combined electric generating facilities serving the northern California market are estimated to have a dependable output capability under dry year conditions, if fully coordinated, sufficient to serve a total load of 1,670,000 kilowatts measured in annual peak demand and about 9,000,000,000 kwh. measured in annual energy output.

Present Load in Northern California

The present load in the northern California market is about 9.5 billion kwh. annually. Of this total the Pacific Gas and Electric Company supplies about 92 per cent, with power produced by its own facilities and power purchased or consigned from other sources.

Estimated Future Load

The present load reflects abnormal power demands brought about by the war, and is above the trend of growth in load that might be expected under more normal conditions. It appears probable that with the cessation of the war there may be a reduction in load demands temporarily. However, under the normal trend of growth in this State and in northern California in particular the power demands may be expected to increase in future years.

Based upon preliminary studies by this office and consideration of estimates made by others, the load demands for the years 1950 and 1960 in accordance with a predicted normal trend of growth are estimated as follows:

Year	Annual load in million kwh.	Maximum annual demand in kilowatts
1950 -----	9,500	1,770,000
1960 -----	12,700	2,400,000

It should be noted that these are preliminary figures based upon normal predicted trend of growth and are subject to the uncertainties inherent in any prediction into the future. However, it is believed that the estimates may be considered to be on the conservative side if the State grows and develops as is expected.

Additional Power Supply Needed

The foregoing figures indicate that an additional capacity, over and above the dependable capability of the production facilities now installed and definitely under way, of at least 100,000 kilowatts should be provided to assure meeting power demands in 1950; and that to meet the growth in load up to 1960 over 700,000 kilowatts of additional capacity will be needed. In addition a certain amount of obsolete production equipment will have to be replaced.

Sources of Additional Power Supply

The potential power resources for furnishing additional power demands in Northern California are relatively abundant. There is a large amount of undeveloped hydroelectric power remaining to be developed including numerous single purpose power projects and the multiple purpose projects of the State Water Plan. The Pacific Gas and Electric Company has plans for a number of additional single purpose hydroelectric power developments including plants on the Feather River, the Pit River and other streams. In addition fuel is available in the form of oil and natural gas for the generation of electric power by steam-electric or internal combustion plants.

A number of the multiple purpose storage reservoir projects of the State Water Plan contemplate the production of hydroelectric power as an incidental feature to the primary objectives of furnishing water supplies for irrigation and controlling floods. Preliminary estimates by this office indicate that the proposed hydroelectric developments of these projects will be capable of producing over 5,000,000,000 kwh. of energy on the average annually and about 700,000 to 800,000 kilowatts of dependable capacity over and above that to be made available from the Shasta and Keswick plants of the initial Central Valley Project of the State Water Plan is the proposed Trinity River Diversion which preliminary estimates by this office indicate will have an output capability of about 135,000 kilowatts and about 1,000,000,000 kwh. in average annual energy output.

Details as to the electric power potentialities of the units of the State Water Plan are contained in a report entitled "Electric Power Features of the State Water Plan in the Great Central Valley Basin of California," August 1941, prepared by the Division of Water Resources for the Water Project Authority. Copies of this report have been furnished to the committee.

The order or priority in which the potential power resources will be developed in Northern California will depend upon many factors and can not be definitely set up at this time. It appears, however, that it would be desirable and profitable to meet the additional capacity requirements by new hydroelectric power installations insofar as practicable, perhaps to the extent of at least 75 per cent of the total additional capacity requirements.

A large part of the additional capacity requirements can be met by power produced from the multiple purpose storage projects of the State Water Plan. In view of the fact that many of these projects are needed now or will be soon to provide necessary flood control and additional water supplies, it would be desirable to build such projects and develop and utilize the hydroelectric power output to meet increased load demands.

The Water Project Authority of the State of California has taken the position that, insofar as practicable, the future power needs of Northern California should be met first from hydroelectric power developed by public multipurpose projects; and that in the programming of additional capacity to meet the load growth, preference should be given to such multipurpose projects in the best public interest. The foregoing estimates of future power demands indicate that most of the hydroelectric power that can be developed by the multiple purpose units of the State Water Plan could be utilized in meeting increased power demands in Northern California during the next 15 years. Therefore, considering the immediate or impending need of these projects for flood control and irrigation and other water supply purposes, the construction of such projects for the additional purpose of furnishing hydroelectric power during the next 15 years would appear to be desirable and advantageous in the public interest.

The project for the Trinity River Diversion is one of the units of the State Water Plan which might be justified for construction during this period. The exact time that it might be found to be justified for construction can not be foretold at this time. However, it appears at this time that other storage units of the State Water Plan may receive preference chiefly because of flood control benefits and that consequently the construction of the Trinity River Project may not occur until 10 years hence or possibly later.

APPENDIX III

Summary of Testimony by United States Bureau of Reclamation Representatives—January 29, 1945 (Exhibit B)

"The Bureau of Reclamation has no plan for the diversion of water from Upper Klamath River under consideration at this time. The bureau has been aiding the Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army, in their studies of the proposed diversion by furnishing data which the Bureau of Reclamation has on hand. This assistance and cooperation is being given under a four-party agreement concerning investigation of water resources by the Corps of Engineers, Federal Power Commission, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, and the Bureau of Reclamation. This agreement was made for the purpose of preventing duplication of effort. Under it the four agencies provide on another with basic data which each may have collected.

"In 1923 the Bureau of Reclamation made a study of the possibility of diverting water from the Klamath River into Shasta Valley. This investigation was made in cooperation with the Shasta Irrigation District and the State of California. A copy of the report is on file with the State Engineer.

"The immediate problem in the Central Valley of California is the control and beneficial use of the water we now have available. This will be our vital and challenging problem for several years after the war. When we have controlled our streams flowing into the Sacramento-San Joaquin Basin and will have put them to their maximum beneficial use, then it may be necessary to import additional water into the basin from the Upper Klamath Basin.

"With this ultimate need in view, the Bureau of Reclamation is studying the possibilities of a diversion from the Trinity River as recommended by the State Engineer, Edward Hyatt, in his report of 1930 on the State Water Plan. If this committee is interested in the Bureau of Reclamation activities on that stream, we will be very pleased to furnish any information you desire."

Mr. Calland directed further questioning to Mr. Kerr. Mr. Kerr explained more in detail some of the early investigations on the Klamath River and Klamath Project by the Bureau of Reclamation, and stated the purpose of bureau investigations for diversion of Klamath River water was to find an adequate irrigation supply for the Shasta Irrigation District in the Shasta Valley which is a part of the Klamath River watershed. Mr. Kerr stated that the most recent report on this plan by the Bureau of Reclamation was made in 1923 by Engineers Galt and Towle.

The Bureau of Reclamation's activities in connection with Trinity River diversion were discussed at length. Mr. Kerr stated that the bureau was considering the feasibility of two plans on the Trinity River. One would require a dam at Fairview with a small diversion dam as Lewiston. The flood waters of the Trinity would be held in storage behind Fairview dam and later diverted by means of a seven- or eight-mile tunnel into Clear Creek Watershed which is part of the Sacramento Valley Watershed. The water will then be diverted from Clear Creek into Kesweck Reservoir, and the drop from the Trinity River to the Keswick Reservoir on the Sacramento River would be utilized in producing a considerable amount of hydroelectric energy. An alternate plan would call for an additional storage reservoir at Steiner Flat, a point which is below the confluence of Brown's Creek and the Trinity River. This has been proposed as the Brown's Creek Reservoir. Mr. Kerr explained that the geological drilling crews had examined the Brown's Creek site, the Lewiston site, and they were now engaged in drilling the Fairview site. It was estimated by Mr. Kerr that studies would continue for another year before the Bureau of Reclamation would be able to set forth a statement of costs and benefits, and thereby determine the economic feasibility of the two plans.

Mr. Kerr explained that the Bureau of Reclamation started the investigations of the Trinity River Project in 1942 as a part of their investigations of a comprehensive, overall plan of water resource development for the Sacramento-San Joaquin Valleys. Mr. Kerr called attention to the fact that the Trinity River Diversion was endorsed by the State Engineer in Bulletin 25, published in 1930, outlining to the State Legislature the component parts of the State Water Plan.

In addition to their general authority in the Reclamation Act of 1939, the bureau has been investigating the possibilities of the Trinity River under authority of Executive Order 9384 of the President which asked all Federal agencies directly connected with public works construction to prepare and keep up to date carefully-planned and realistic long-range programs of public works construction. This was recommended in order to provide a shelf of feasible projects which can be undertaken should it prove desirable to carry on a postwar public works program.

Later on in the hearing the Reclamation Bureau representatives submitted a copy of the following resolutions:

1. A resolution dated November 4, 1941, from the Trinity County Board of Supervisors requesting early construction of the Trinity River Diversion Project.
2. A resolution dated October 7, 1942 from the City of Redding, urging an appropriation to be used in further investigation of the Trinity River Project.
3. A resolution from the Redding Chamber of Commerce urging an appropriation to be used in further investigation of the Trinity River Project dated October 7, 1942.

Mr. Kerr stated that the first thing the Bureau of Reclamation engineers did when they started investigations of the Trinity Project was to request from the Fish and Wildlife Service a study of the water requirements on the Trinity River for preservation of fish life. Mr. Kerr stated that for the construction of the counting weir alone, the bureau had expended over $10,000.

Mr. Kerr stated that full consideration would be given to the water requirements for fish life, recreational facilities, and other activities on the Trinity River, prior to any recommendations in the Bureau of Reclamation report on the Trinity River Project.

From testimony of the Bureau of Reclamation witnesses it was learned that additional storage would be required at the proposed Table Mountain Dam if full use is to be made of the water diverted from either the Trinity River or Klamath River or both. A member of the committee called attention to the fact that diversion of water from the Upper Klamath Basin into the Sacramento Valley via the Pit River would benefit all of the present and future power plants of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company on Pit River by "firming up" their water supply.

It appeared that the economic feasibility of the Trinity River diversion and the Klamath River diversion was inextricably connected with the need for water in the entire Central Valley, and especially with those features of the Central Valley Project located in the Sacramento Valley. In response to questioning as to the need of the Trinity Diversion, the Bureau of Reclamation engineers testified that such a study was necessary to determine the overall plan for the development of the Central Valley Project. It was their opinion that the comprehensive plan should be developed and then additional features of the Central Valley Project should be constructed in accordance with that plan, so the maximum benefits from the development of our water resources would not be jeopardized by construction of individual, unrelated and uncoordinated projects.

This statement prompted questioning by the committee concerning the apparent conflict over work between the Bureau of Reclamation and the Corps of Engineers, United States Army. Mr. Kerr explained that the Bureau of Reclamation in its early stages, after it was created in 1902, confined its activities largely to projects which had the single purpose of irrigation development. Known early as the Reclamation Service, it had as its objective the reclaiming of fertile land from the desert. It was pointed out that as larger projects were required, the purposes of irrigation, flood control, navigation, recreation with municipal water supply, and other multiple-purposes of storage dams were involved in any of the larger projects. Boulder Dam, constructed by the Bureau of Reclamation, is a notable example.

For many years the Corps of Engineers confined their activities to the construction of levees and later navigation locks and dams required for flood control and navigation purposes. As development of the larger streams progressed, this agency, too, became interested in multiple-purpose projects. From the discussion it appeared that there was need for clarification of the responsibilities of these government agencies, and as stated by one member of the committee, it called for a declaration of policy by Congress itself.

Considerable attention was devoted to a discussion of the method by which the Bureau of Reclamation acquires water rights necessary for the operation of its projects. Mr. Calland stated that the Bureau of Reclamation recognizes and respects existing vested water rights which have been perfected under State laws. He said the Bureau of Reclamation has been required to do so by Section 8 of the Reclamation Act of 1902, which has been a basic part of the Reclamation Law ever since the inception of the reclamation program which is being administered by the Bureau of Reclamation. Mr. Calland stated that ample demonstration of the effect of this law has been given in connection with the Central Valley Project. Water findings made by the State have been obtained by assignment from the State Department of Finance, and the vested water rights have been acquired by the United States by the expenditure of millions of dollars. Other water rights, Mr. Calland stated, which may be affected by the operations of the project are being acquired and appropriate adjustments will be made in full recognition of the rights of the land owners.

Supplementing Mr. Calland's remarks, Mr. Kerr stated that in studies of future projects proposed by the Bureau of Reclamation, full recognition was being given to the needs of the watersheds before any diversion of water was proposed. Mr. Kerr stated that the bureau recognized the Counties of Origin Law, which may be more specifically described as Section 11460 of the State Water Code. Section 11460 states:

"In the construction and operation by the authority of any project under the provisions of this part of watershed or area wherein water originates, or an area immediately adjacent thereto which can conveniently be supplied with water therefrom, shall not be deprived by the authority directly or indirectly of the prior right to all of the water reasonably required to adequately supply the beneficial needs of the watershed, area, or any of the inhabitants or property owners therein."

A discussion of the effect of this State law which is presumably recognized by the Bureau of Reclamation led to the suggestion that the present and future water requirements for all beneficial needs in the Trinity River Watershed would be adequately provided for under Bureau of Reclamation construction. A question was raised whether this would be true under construction of the project by the Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army.

Mr. Kerr, explaining the procedure for construction of projects by the Bureau of Reclamation, called attention to the fact that the cost of reclamation projects constructed under the Reclamation Law must be repaid to the Federal Treasury. He stated the irrigation features of these projects could use Federal money without interest charges. The allocation of costs for the power features of these projects had to bear an interest rate of three per cent. He mentioned that flood control and navigation costs were usually borne by the national taxpayer. Mr. Calland in the later statement indicated that legislation had been introduced which might result in adding fish and wildlife conservation, recreational use, salinity control, excessive costs due to war, and other charges to the list of non-reimbursable items.

IX. Policy

- (1) Does the Bureau of Reclamation recognize and respect existing water rights which have been initiated and perfected or in the state of being perfected under State laws?

The Bureau of Reclamation has been required to do so by Section 8 of the Reclamation Act of 1902 ever since the inception of the reclamation program administered by the Bureau of Reclamation. The Bureau of Reclamation has never proposed modification of that requirement of Federal law; and on the contrary, the Bureau of Reclamation and the Secretary of the Interior have consistently, through the 42 years since the 1902 act, been zealous in maintaining compliance with Section 8 of the 1902 act. They are proud of the historic fact that the reclamation program includes as one of its basic tenets that the irrigation development in the West by the Federal Government under the Federal Reclamation Laws is carried forward in conformity with State water laws. Ample demonstration of the effect of this law and policy of administration, in action, has been given in connection with the Central Valley Project. Water filings made by the State have been obtained by the Bureau of Reclamation by assignment, and vested water rights have been acquired by the United States by purchase, the considerations amounting to millions of dollars and being agreeable to vendor—all in conformity with State laws. Further, other water rights of landowners which will or may be affected by the operations of the project are being analyzed and appropriated adjustments, giving full recognition of the rights of the landowners, are in the process of being worked out.

Report on Klamath River by Secretary of War—House Document No. 181
Seventy-third Congress, Second Session

OREGON AND CALIFORNIA)

(From Page 2)

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF ENGINEERS

WASHINGTON, October 14, 1935

SUBJECT: Report on Klamath River, Oregon and California.

To: The Secretary of War.

1. I submit for transmission to Congress my report, with accompanying papers and illustrations, on the Klamath River, Oregon and California, made under the provisions of House Document No. 308, Sixty-ninth Congress, First Session, which was enacted into law with modifications in Section 1 of the River and Harbor Act of January 21, 1927.

2. The Klamath River Watershed lies in south central Oregon and northwestern California. It has an area of about 15,500 square miles. Klamath River proper rises in Lake Ewauna in the vicinity of Klamath Falls, Oregon, and flows southwesterly about 263 miles to the Pacific Ocean, 30 miles south of the Oregon-California State line. The upper part of the watershed, with an area of about 8,000 square miles, consists of a series of volcanic plateaus ranging in elevation from 4,000 to 5,000 feet. The main stem of the river is joined through Lake Ewauna and Link River (about one mile long) to Upper Klamath Lake, into which empty several streams draining the northern part of the plateau area. Of these the Williamson River is the largest. Lost River drains most of the southern part of the plateau section and under natural conditions flowed into Tule Lake, which has no surface outlet. The excess flood flow is now diverted into Klamath River. Below Keno, Oregon, 25 miles by river above the Oregon-California State line, the Klamath River flows through a rugged winding canyon. The fall through this section varies from 10 to 80 feet per mile. The principal tributaries in the lower section are the Shasta, Scott, Salmon, and Trinity Rivers.

3. The mean annual precipitation in the basin varies from about 100 inches on the western side of the coast ranges to less than 20 inches on the upper plateaus. About 75 per cent of the precipitation occurs during the period from November to March, inclusive. The run-off from the basin above Keno, Oregon, is well regulated due to extensive marsh lands and storage at Upper Klamath Lake. The mean annual run-off in the entire river basin varies from 0.23 to 2.03 cubic feet per second per square mile. The maximum flood is estimated to have been 400,000 cubic feet per second at the mouth.

4. The population of the watershed in 1930 was about 60,000, of which about 16,000 were in Klamath Falls, Oregon. The principal occupations are lumbering and agriculture. In the past hydraulic mining on a large scale was carried on in the upper reaches of the Trinity River.

5. No railway parallels the main axis of the valley. The upper basin is traversed by two main line railroads and the lower basin is crossed in two places by improved highways. An improved road parallels the main stream for the greater part of its length. Much of the mountainous area is accessible only by trails.

6. Salmon spawn in the Klamath River and its tributaries in sufficient numbers to be of commercial importance. In 1918 the salmon catch in the State was about 6,500 tons but since 1920 it has been on the decline. In 1928 it was 2,200 tons. To combat this depletion the State Division of Fish and Game has instituted a policy of conserving the natural spawning grounds, and in 1924 the construction of dams or artificial obstructions below the mouth of Shasta River (mile 186) was prohibited by law.

7. IRRIGATION: Considerable areas in the upper basin have been developed by irrigation. The Klamath project of the United States Bureau of Reclamation, which is the largest, includes lands in Langell, Yonna, and Pow Valleys on Lost River, Klamath Valley, the bed of former Tule Lake and the bed of Lower Klamath Lake. Water for Langell, Yonna, and Pow Valleys is supplied from reservoirs on the headwaters of Lost River, and for the balance of the project from Upper Klamath Lake. Surplus water from this lake is also used for power production. The total area irrigated in 1931 was about 63,000 acres. Above the Upper Klamath Lake there are irrigation projects in Wood River Valley, the upper Sprague River east of Klamath Indian Reservation and on the reservation. A small amount of water has also been diverted from this basin to the Rogue River Valley for irrigation. Other irrigation projects have been constructed on the tributary streams below Keno, the principal ones being on Bear Creek, Cottonwood Creek, and Shasta and Scott Rivers. The district engineer investigated possible additional development and reached the conclusion that below Keno the situation is probably stabilized but that further development is probable above that point. Since this would be mainly in the areas now under the jurisdiction of the Reclamation Bureau, he confined his investigation largely to a determination of the probable water consumption, as this was essential in determining the potential power below Keno.

8. POWER: Eight commercial hydroelectric plants have been constructed in the Klamath River Basin, having an aggregate installed capacity of 56,690 kilowatts. The two largest, having a total capacity of about 47,000 kilowatts, are located on the main stem below Keno, Oregon. Studies of the potential waterpower and storage have been made by the United States Forest Service in cooperation with the district engineer. Under present conditions of irrigation use, it was found that the regulated flow at Keno, Oregon, was 1,696 continuous second-feet for the median year, and 534 second-feet during a dry year. The main features of the plan proposed for an ultimate development for power without further diversion from the watershed and inclusive of 47,600 kilowatt capacity already constructed, are summarized in the table below. The locations of reservoirs and power plants are shown on plate No. 1. Estimates of cost were not made.

9. In view of the present legal restriction against dams below the Shasta River, a plan was studied for the diversion of the surplus waters of the Upper Klamath and Lost Rivers not now required for irrigation south through Tule Lake into the Pit River in Sacramento Valley. While the investigations were not sufficiently complete to warrant definite conclusions, it appears that the water supply, after allowing for future expansion of irrigation, might be too uncertain to justify this plan and the legal complications might also prevent its adoption.

10. The comprehensive water plan of the State of California for the Great Central Valley includes the construction of a reservoir on the Trinity River and the annual diversion of about 800,000 acre-feet of water into the Sacramento Valley, with incidental generation of about 1,065 million kwh. of power annually through a drop of about 1,700 feet. An alternate diversion plan suggested in the present report would make available about 970,000 acre-feet of water annually. This diversion would reduce the power output as given in paragraph 8 by about 13 per cent but this would be largely offset by the power developed under the diversion plan.

11. The district engineer states that it is not probable that the Klamath Basin will ever absorb more than a small part of its potential energy and that due to the large prospective hydro developments nearer the available market any extensive development of the Klamath River power is not probable in the near future.

12. NAVIGATION: This river has not been improved for navigation. A limited number of logs are rafted to mills on the upper lakes and the river above Keno, Oregon, and there is a small amount of commerce consisting of passengers and miscellaneous freight carried on light-draft motor boats on the lower 33 miles of the river. One boat also plies occasionally between Requa and Eureka on the Humboldt Bay, carrying annually about 500 tons of commerce, chiefly cans and canned salmon. The possibility of constructing a harbor at the mouth has been several times investigated and adversely reported upon. The district engineer states that the cost would evidently be disproportionate to the benefits. Power developments, if properly regulated, might benefit the light draft navigation in the lower.

13. FLOODS: No works of importance primarily for flood protection have been constructed in the basin. Flood damages on the Klamath have been confined largely to the overflow of the lowlands near the mouth and are small in amount. The district engineer is of the opinion that the most practical method of protection would be by the construction of works to hold the mouth of the river and the building of levees, but that the cost of such work could not be economically justified. Storage reservoirs constructed in connection with power developments in the lower reaches of the main stream and in the Trinity would probably give partial protection.

14. The division engineer concurs in the views of the district engineer.

15. After due consideration of the above-mentioned reports, I concur in the views of the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors. Improvement of the Klamath River for navigation is not warranted. Flood damages are small and works primarily for their prevention would not be economically justified. Incidental benefits would probably be secured from storage reservoirs constructed for other purposes. It appears that the production of hydroelectric power, with due regard to irrigation needs, is of primary consideration in the formulation of plans for water conservation in this basin. Investigations indicate that sites exist for a system of power plants having a total installed capacity of about 2,000,000 kilowatts. However, markets for the bulk of this power will not be available for many years to come, and the construction of dams on the main stream below the mouth of the Shasta River is now prohibited by State law in the interest of fish propagation. Diversion of the upper Trinity River into the Sacramento Valley, as contemplated by the California State Water Plan, is considered advisable. Diversion of water from the upper Klamath into the Pit River Basin should not be considered unless it were certain that all irrigation needs could be satisfied and that there was no possibility of the repeal or the modification of the law prohibiting dams below the Shasta. Irrigation development is already under the jurisdiction of the United States Reclamation Bureau. Power development should be left to the initiative of private interests under the provisions of the Federal Water Power Act. I therefore report that the improvement of the Klamath River for navigation, either alone or in connection with power development, flood control or irrigation, or any other combination thereof, should not be undertaken by the United States at the present time.

Brigadier General, United States Army,
Acting Chief of Engineers.

SENATOR THOMAS H. KUCHEL, California State Legislature
Capitol Building, Sacramento, California

DEAR SENATOR KUCHEL: Reference is made to attached letter dated February 8, 1945, from Senator Oliver J. Carter to this office requesting written statements to certain questions for the Joint Interim Committee of the California Legislature investigating the Klamath River problem. In view of the fact that the Klamath River investigation under way by this department are being carried on under the direction and supervision of Colonel Kenneth M. Moore, District Engineer, U. S. Engineer Office 74 New Montgomery Street, San Francisco, California, that office has been requested to furnish you directly the information desired under items 1, 2, 5, 6, 7, and 8. Answers to the questions raised by Senator Carter, dealing with the projects and investigations under way in this office, are answered as follows:

QUESTION 3. As you no doubt know, the Flood Control Act approved December 22, 1944, authorized a low dam, multiple-purpose, storage development at the Table Mountain site on the upper Sacramento River. Such a dam was recommended by this department in a report printed in House Document No. 205, Seventy-seventh Congress, First Session, after a thorough study of a number of alternate methods of accomplishing the same flood control benefits as will result from that project. The alternate studies included both a series of smaller reservoirs on the upper tributaries of the Sacramento River as well as a leveed bypass channel through Butte Basin. A comparison of the relative costs and benefits of the various alternate schemes investigated led this office to conclude that the public interests would best and most economically be served by construction of multiple-purpose storage on the Sacramento River at or in the vicinity of the Table Mountain site. None of the alternates investigated included consideration of diversion of Klamath or Trinity River waters in the Sacramento River Basin. Such diversions, if made, might increase the potential hydroelectric power available at the low Table Mountain Dam by as much as 145,000,000 kwh.

QUESTION 4. No authorized flood control project in the Sacramento-San Joaquin River Valleys includes facilities for the transfer of conserved stored flood waters from one major watershed to another, although certain such projects include local diversion works, in the interest of flood control, to make possible the protection of areas now subject to flood damage. Furthermore, no such conveyance units, for the transfer of conserved flood waters from one major watershed to another, is being studied or considered by this office.

QUESTION 9. In answering this question, attention is invited to the fact that this department is primarily concerned with improvements relating to flood control and has studied and considered only such reservoir projects in the Sacramento-San Joaquin River Basins as are considered ultimately desirable from a flood control standpoint. In connection with the planning for such reservoirs, however, this department is required by law to consider all related water uses such as irrigation. Such studies by this office indicate that the construction of nine multiple-purpose reservoirs on the tributaries of the Sacramento River, in addition to the Shasta Reservoir, having a combined gross storage capacity of 7,179,000 acre-feet, would make available a new irrigation yield of 2,245,000 acre-feet annually; that the ultimate construction of five similar multiple-purpose reservoirs on the tributaries of the San Joaquin River, in addition to the Friant Reservoir, having a combined gross storage capacity of 2,169,000 acre-feet would make available a new irrigation yield of 355,000 acre-feet annually; and that the construction of four multiple-purpose reservoirs on the streams flowing into Tulare Lake, having a combined gross capacity of 1,810,000 acre-feet, would make available a new irrigation yield of 226,000 acre-feet annually.

Very truly yours,
(Signed)

H. M. RICH, Head Engineer
Acting District Engineer

APPENDIX IX

Letter From K. M. Moore, District Engineer, Corps of Engineers, San Francisco, in Reply to Questions Submitted With Letter of February 8th
by Senator Oliver J. Carter

THE HONORABLE THOMAS H. KUCHEL, State Senator,
State Capitol, Sacramento, California

DEAR SIR: A letter, dated February 8, has been received from the Honorable Oliver J. Carter conveying certain questions with the request that the replies thereto be addressed to you. Some of the questions are relative to Corps of Engineers' policy and can only be answered authoritatively by the Chief of Engineers in Washington. However, his standing instructions in their regard are expressed in the answer herein. Other questions pertain to the Sacramento District and should be referred to the District Engineer, Sacramento, California, or to the Division Engineer, Pacific Division, as I have later indicated.

Subject to the above comments, the following are replies to Mr. Carter's questions:

1. A statement of the Corps of Engineers' position in regard to a diversion of Klamath River water into the headwaters of the Sacramento River. In connection with the survey of the entire Klamath River Watershed, the District Engineer is making a study to determine whether it is physically and economically feasible to divert surplus waters from the Upper Klamath River into the Sacramento River Watershed, and if so, whether such diversion is a part of the best and most advantageous plan for the future development of the Klamath River. The Corps of Engineers' final recommendations will be made by the Chief of Engineers after review of the District Engineer's findings by the Division Engineer and the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors, and after he has received the comments of the Governors of the States of Oregon and California as described in the answer to Question 6 herein.

2. A description of your activities and possible plans for diversion of Trinity River water into the Sacramento Valley. The answer to this question is the same as to Question 1, with the Trinity River substituted for Upper Klamath River.

3. A description of your studies in connection with the proposed Table Mountain Dam and the alternate plan for dams on tributaries, and their relation to the Klamath, Trinity, and other proposed developments in the Sacramento Valley. The Central Valley of California, including Table Mountain Dam, is in the Sacramento District, not the San Francisco District. This question is one that will be considered by the Division Engineer, who has supervision over and coordinates various West Coast Districts, when reviewing the findings of the District Engineer as described in Answer 1 above.

4. Other possible transfers from one major watershed to another in your plans for the full development of the water resources of the Central Valley. See answer to Question 3 above.

5. A statement of the Corps of Engineers' policy in connection with use of water for preservation of fish life and development of recreational opportunities. The Corps of Engineers' policy is to take into full consideration all matters pertaining to fish and wildlife in connection with stream investigation. If there are any fish and wildlife features connected with an examination of a locality, the Federal Fish and Wildlife Service is requested to make a full report thereon, in order that this phase of the general problem may be given full consideration along with other phases. Recreational opportunities of the locality are given like careful consideration.

6. The policy of the Corps of Engineers concerning State water laws. This question is not clear. It is the general policy of the Corps of Engineers to accede to all State and local laws. Specifically, insofar as flood-control surveys are concerned, the preparation thereof is made in cooperation with the State water authorities, and the final report is submitted to the Governor or Governors of the State or States involved for their review and comments before being transmitted to the Congress. State authorities are, therefore, kept cognizant continually of any contemplated plans which might involve State water laws.

7. Your policy in connection with the amount of water that can be diverted from one watershed to another in proposed diversions. This question is too indefinite to permit a reply.

8. Does the Corps of Engineers give an opportunity for expression of local viewpoint in connection with proposed projects? Yes, as an example, the forthcoming hearings at Klamath Falls, Yreka, and Eureka on February 20, 21, and 23, are for that purpose.

9. A description of the future development of the water resources in the Central Valleys from the Sacramento-San Joaquin Watersheds, showing the quantities of water that can be developed for use in said watersheds. This question should be addressed to the District Engineer, Sacramento, California, or to the Division Engineer of the Pacific Division.

Very truly yours,

K. H. MOORE, Colonel, Corps of Engineers,
District Engineer.

Answers to Questions Submitted to U. S. Bureau of Reclamation for Joint Legislative Committee on Rivers and Flood Control Relative to the Central Valley Project

I. Position of the Bureau Concerning the Proposed Klamath River Diversion

1. "A statement of the Bureau of Reclamation's position in regard to a diversion of Klamath River water into the headwaters of the Sacramento River."

The Bureau of Reclamation has no plan, nor is the Bureau investigating any plan for the diversion of Klamath River water into the headwaters of the Sacramento Valley Watershed. The bureau would not propose a study of such a diversion unless and until further irrigation development in the Sacramento and San Joaquin Valleys discloses that there is an actual need for water in excess of the supplies which can be made available by all practicable conservation measures from the streams of the two valleys and reasonable Trinity River Diversions.

Should the future needs of the two valleys prove to be in excess of the presently planned supplies, as discussed above, the bureau would not advocate diversions from the Upper Klamath River unless a thorough study made at that time disclosed that such diversions could be made without injury to either the Upper or Lower Klamath Basin. In any studies consideration would be given to the needs of the entire Klamath River Basin including those for domestic and industrial water supplies, irrigation, fish and wildlife, recreation, and power.

II. Plans Concerning the Proposed Trinity River Diversion

2. "A description of your activities and possible plans for diversion of Trinity River water into the Sacramento Valley."

Under the authority of the Reclamation Act of 1902 and Executive Order 9384 from the President, the Bureau of Reclamation is studying possible water development projects in California. Among these is the proposed Trinity River Diversion, a part of the State Water Plan as outlined by State Engineer Edward Hyatt in 1930. Investigations on this project were expedited at the request of the Trinity County Board of Supervisors, the Redding City Council, and the Redding Chamber of Commerce. (Copies of resolutions are attached.)

Water would be diverted from Trinity River in the vicinity of Lewiston to the Sacramento River north of Redding. Basically, the plan would be much the same as that proposed by the State Engineer in Bulletin 26 of the Division of Water Resources, which plan included a large storage reservoir at the Fairview site, a diversion dam at Lewiston and tunnels and conduits to the Sacramento River. In addition, the bureau is investigating a second storage site on Trinity River at the Browns Creek or Steiners Flat site near Douglas City. A reservoir at this location might be an alternate to Fairview Reservoir or supplemental thereto.

The foundations have been explored by diamond drilling at Browns Creek and Lewiston sites and drilling is in progress at the Fairview site.

When the investigation was first started, the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service was requested to make a study of the fish problem and recommend the proper procedure for its solution. The service, in cooperation with the State Fish and Game Commission, has been working on the problem for the past year and a half, utilizing funds provided by the bureau.

As soon as the report is received from the Fish and Wildlife Service and the diamond drilling is finished at the dam sites, estimates of cost will be made and a preliminary report will be prepared outlining the possibilities of the diversion by various plans. The report will suggest the best plan for accomplishing a diversion taking into account costs and benefits.

In estimating the quantities of water that may be diverted from Trinity River account will be taken of the water needs of the Trinity and main Klamath Valleys for domestic and industrial purposes, irrigation, mining, fish and wildlife, recreation, and power. Upon completion of the tentative report the suggested plan would be submitted to local interests, the State, and other Federal agencies prior to submission of a final report to Congress in which recommendations would be made. Such recommendations would take into account all pertinent suggestions and weigh the costs and benefits, keeping in mind the necessity and maximum beneficial development and utilization of the natural resources of the area as a whole.

III. Relation of Table Mountain Dam to Proposed Trinity and Klamath Projects

3. "A description of your studies in connection with the proposed Table Mountain dam, and the alternate plan for dams on tributaries and their relation to the Klamath, Trinity, and other proposed developments in the Sacramento Valley."

The proposed Table Mountain Dam is a feature of the entire Central Valley Project being studied by this office as a part of a comprehensive reclamation program for the Central Valley of California. The objective of the program is the maximum conservation and utilization of water resources of the State of California to produce the optimum benefits for irrigation, navigation, generation of electric energy, and other uses. Storage facilities for these purposes will also serve to minimize flood damage.

Studies indicate that in order to make full beneficial use of the water resources of the Central Valley Basin, it will probably some day be necessary to provide additional storage in the Upper Sacramento Valley. This storage might be found either in a reservoir from a dam in the Table Mountain site, or in an alternative plan of reservoirs on the streams tributary to the Upper Sacramento River, or from a combination of those plans. The Bureau of Reclamation is investigating those possibilities to the extent that funds and manpower are available. In addition to irrigation, power, fishing, and recreational development, the dam or dams would provide adequate flood control.

Should our studies show that it is necessary to construct a dam at the Table Mountain site, the Bureau of Reclamation will recommend construction only when the agricultural, industrial, and other water requirements in the Central Valley Basin reach a point that would justify flooding existing irrigated lands and would offset other damages that might result from the construction of a dam at the Table Mountain site. It is the opinion of the Bureau of Reclamation, in view of preliminary studies, that construction of Table Mountain Dam should be deferred. It is also the bureau's opinion that the Table Mountain site should not now be preempted by an inadequate low dam.

To make full use of the water diverted by either a proposed Trinity River Diversion or Klamath River Diversion, additional storage will be required in the proposed Table Mountain Reservoir. Studies are not sufficiently completed to estimate what this required storage capacity would be.

To make full beneficial use of any future Upper Klamath River Diversion additional conservation storage would be required in Shasta Reservoir or in the proposed Table Mountain Reservoir. Otherwise, diversions would detract from the usefulness of those reservoirs for flood control purposes as presently planned.

Other proposed reservoirs on streams in the Sacramento Valley such as Stony Creek, Deer Creek, the Feather River, are directly connected with the Table Mountain, Trinity, and Klamath projects and their possible construction and operation will be considered in our studies.

IV. Possible Diversions—Entire Central Valley Project

4. "Other possible transfers from one major watershed to the other, and your plans for the full development of the water resources of the Central Valley."

Full development of water resources in the Central Valley will require numerous transfers of water from one watershed to another. Surplus water from Sacramento River and its tributaries, after storage in multiple-purpose reservoirs, would, in general, be diverted southward to adjacent lands or would be released to flow in natural channels to the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta. Transfers would be made across the delta in natural and improved channels and the water would be pumped to the San Joaquin Valley through Delta-Mendota Canal and similar conduits. San Joaquin River water would be transferred north across Fresno River to Chowchilla River by the Madera Canal and south across Kings, Kaweah, and Tule Rivers to Kern River by Friant-Kern Canal. In addition, such water as may prove to be in excess of requirements in Sierra Nevada streams from American River to Merced River, inclusive, would be transferred to the South San Joaquin Valley.

The transfers described above are necessary to the success of the State Plan for the development of water resources in the Central Valley, the initial units of which have been approved by California voters and are now under construction by the Bureau of Reclamation. Without such transfers further irrigation development in the San Joaquin Valley would be very limited.

V. Policy Concerning Fish Life, and Development of Recreational Opportunities

5. "A statement of your Bureau's policy in connection with use of water for preservation of fish life and development of recreational opportunities."

In planning developments on western streams for multiple uses, the Bureau of Reclamation gives full consideration to the water required for preservation of fish and wildlife and the natural beauties of the respective areas. In this connection, we work very closely with the Fish and Wildlife Service, and the California Fish and Game Commission. It has been our policy to ask these agencies for their recommendations concerning the water requirements necessary for the preservation and development of the fishing industry, and the creation of recreational opportunities for sportsmen.

The overall basin development of the Sacramento and San Joaquin Rivers and their tributaries now being studied by the Bureau of Reclamation requires a comprehensive approach to the fish problem in order to obtain satisfactory results. The Fish and Wildlife Service and the California State Fish and Game Commission are preparing a report on this subject.

The Bureau of Reclamation recognizes the possibilities of recreational development on multiple-purpose reservoirs. On the two reservoirs included in the initial features of the Central Valley Project the Bureau of Reclamation asked a committee to submit their recommendations for recreational development. This committee was composed of representatives from Federal, State, and local agencies. The recommendations of this committee are now being considered.

In order that the recreational opportunities of those reservoirs can be put to beneficial use as early as possible, the Bureau of Reclamation is now cooperating with local people in the vicinity of Redding to establish an interim program of administration of the reservoir areas pending final decision on the administration of the area. Local viewpoints will be given the fullest consideration.

VI. Policy on State Water Laws

6. "The policy of the Bureau of Reclamation concerning State water laws."

The Bureau of Reclamation recognizes and respects existing water rights which have been initiated and perfected or which are in the state of being perfected under State laws. The Bureau of Reclamation has been required to do so by Section 8 of the Reclamation Act of 1902, ever since the inception of the reclamation program administered by the Bureau of Reclamation. The Bureau of Reclamation has never proposed modification of that requirement of Federal law; and on the contrary, the Bureau of Reclamation and the Secretary of the Interior have consistently, through the 42 years since the 1902 act, been zealous in maintaining compliance with Section 8 of the 1902 act. They are proud of the historic fact that the reclamation program includes as one of its basic tenets that the irrigation development in the West by the Federal Government under the Federal Reclamation Laws is carried forward in conformity with State water laws. Ample demonstration of the effect of this law and policy of administration, in action, has been given in connection with the Central Valley Project. Water filings made by the State have been obtained by the Bureau of Reclamation by assignment, and vested water rights have been acquired by the United States by purchase, the considerations amounting to millions of dollars and being agreeable to the vendors—all in conformity with State laws. Further, other water rights of landowners which will or may be affected by the operations of the project are being analyzed and appropriate adjustments, giving full recognition of the rights of the landowners, are in the process of being worked out.

The future plans of the bureau with respect to the Central Valley Project do not contemplate any encroachment upon or interference with existing water rights other than such as can be adjusted with the owners of those water rights in the same manner as has been followed in the making of contracts for the acquisition or exchange of San Joaquin waters, full recognition being given the existing rights of landowners.

Should the United States, in connection with the development of the Central Valley Project, as now or as it may be in the future authorized, desire to obtain or develop additional water supply for the project, it is and will be the intention and the clear policy of the Bureau of Reclamation to obtain or develop the additional water supply by proceeding in conformity with the State law.

VII. Policy of Amount of Water That Can Be Diverted

7. "Your policy in connection with the amount of water that can be diverted from one watershed to another in proposed diversions."

Our policy in connection with this matter is to conform with the act generally known as the "County of Origin Act" which is contained in the State Water Code (Section 11460). This statute provides:

"In the construction and operation by the authority of any project under the provisions of this part a watershed or area wherein water originates, or an area immediately adjacent thereto which can conveniently be supplied with water therefrom, shall not be deprived by the authority directly or indirectly of the prior right to all of the water reasonably required to adequately supply the beneficial needs of the watershed, area, or any of the inhabitants or property owners therein."

As viewed by the bureau, it is the intent of this statute that no water shall be diverted from any watershed which is or will be needed for beneficial uses within that watershed. The Bureau of Reclamation in its studies for water resources development in the Central Valley consistently has given full recognition to the policy expressed in this statute by the Legislature and the people. The bureau has attempted to estimate in these studies, and will continue to do so in future studies, what the present and future beneficial needs of each watershed will be. The bureau will not divert from any watershed any water which is needed to satisfy the existing or potential needs within that watershed. For example, no water will be diverted which will be needed for the full development of all the irrigable lands within the watershed nor would there be diverted water needed for municipal and industrial purposes or future maintenance of fish and wildlife resources.

VIII. Expression of Local Viewpoint Regarding Proposed Projects

8. "Does your bureau give an opportunity for expression of local viewpoint in connection with proposed projects?"

During the earlier stages of its studies, the Bureau of Reclamation secures data from all possible sources, in which process it contacts affected irrigation districts and users of water in the area involved. As soon as an inventory of the water and land resources of the area has been secured and a tentative plan can be outlined, local interests are contacted and asked for comments and suggestions on the tentative plan. The final report is revised to comply with desires and suggestions of local interests where such revisions are feasible. The final report is then submitted to the landowners and prospective water users who are usually represented by the district empowered by law to contract with the United States for construction of the project. The projects are constructed for and in cooperation with the local water users.

IX. Future Development of Water Resources

9. "A description of the future development of the water resources in the Central Valleys from the Sacramento-San Joaquin Watersheds, showing the quantities of water that can be developed for use in said watersheds."

Present land classification surveys show about 9,200,000 acres of land in the Central Valleys suitable for irrigation farming. Approximately one-half of this acreage was under irrigation in 1944, utilizing approximately 8,500,000 acre-feet of water. Irrigation of the remaining acreage will require a comprehensive system of new reservoirs in the Central Valley, operated in coordination with existing reservoirs. Principal of these new reservoirs as now contemplated, on the basis of existing engineering information and studies,

Reservoir Site	Stream
Table Mountain	Sacramento River
Indian Valley	North Fork Cache Creek
Monticello	Putah Creek
Big Bend	North Fork Feather River
Bidwell Bar	South Fork Feather River
New Bullards Bar	North Fork Yuba River
Narrows	Yuba River
Garden Bar	Bear River
Folsom	American River
Coloma	South Fork American River
Nashville	Cosumnes River
Ione	Dry Creek
New Hogan	Calaveras River
New Melones	Stanislaus River
New Don Pedro	Tuolumne River
Cooperstown	Dry Creek
Snelling	Dry Creek
Buchanan	Chowchilla River
Hidden	Fresno River
Pine Flat	Kings River
Terminus	Kaweah River
Success	Tule River
Isabella	Kern River
Tulare Lake
San Luis	San Luis Creek
Avenal Gap	Avenal Creek

These reservoirs and numerous smaller reservoirs, mostly in the mountains, will make available approximately 9,000,000 acre-feet of useable new water annually. Based on present estimates of ultimate irrigated areas and assuming probably future stream run-off as in the past, this new supply, together with that now available and with reasonable diversions from Trinity River, should be sufficient for the prospective needs of the Central Valleys for irrigation, municipal and industrial purposes, recreation, fish and wildlife.

To attain the full development of the water supplies of the Central Valleys described above will require a thoroughly coordinated plan for construction and operation of all reservoirs and other features.

In general the reservoirs listed above are those proposed in the State Plan of 1931 for the Central Valley. Certain changes have been made, however, by reason of information which has become available since 1931 relative to dam sites, stream flow and the extent of irrigable lands.

APPENDIX XI

Letter From Hon. Clair Engle, M. C., to Senator Randolph Collier Regarding Activities of the Federal Power Commission

We have the following letter from Congressman Clair Engle referring to the Federal Power Commission, etc., as follows:

“First, the Federal Power Commission absolutely denies that the present activity of the Army Engineers on the Klamath Diversion is at their instigation or instance.

Second, The Bureau of Reclamation denies that there has been any miscalculation by their engineers in the water which will flow into Shasta Lake. The Shasta Dam Project is, of course, a Bureau of Reclamation project and the Army Engineers have nothing to do with it.

These two statements alone would seem to shoot the base out from under the representations of the Army Engineers as to why the proposed project is necessary. I feel sure that the Federal Power Commission has nothing to do with it and I am equally sure that the people best qualified to know (the Bureau of Reclamation Engineers) have confessed no shortage in water behind the Shasta Dam.”

APPENDIX XII

Testimony of John C. Beebe, Regional Administrator, Federal Power Commission, February 19, 1945

Senator Collier: Do you know, Mr. Beebe, what brought this matter about? Was it the announcement by the Corps of Army Engineers? This committee was created by Senate Joint Resolution No. 18 for the purpose of studying the Diversion of the Klamath River Watershed into the Sacramento River Watershed. It seems there are four (4) Federal Government agencies in this picture. The Corps of Army Engineers, The Bureau of Reclamation, The Federal Power Commission and the Federal Fish and Wildlife Service. It seems that when light and electric power comes into the picture it is referred to the Federal Power Commission for study. Have you had anything to do with this? Either you or your commission?

Mr. Beebe: I can speak for my self and somewhat for the commission. They have never taken any action in connection with Klamath River. As far as we are concerned, we are cooperating with the Army and other agencies placed in the Western States. We do that of our own volition.

Senator Collier: I imagine in that connection someone has called your attention to the agreement between the Federal Government agencies? Do you have a copy of that agreement?

Mr. Beebe: Yes, we have.

Senator Collier: In this proposal, have you been asked to do any work on this?

Mr. Beebe: Nothing has gone far enough yet to bring anything before us. It isn't an operating agency. It has, of course, judicial powers and some legislative function that have been given by the Congress. We have no survey crews.

Senator Collier: You don't do any field work?

Mr. Beebe: We depend upon other agencies for field work when studying a stream.

Senator Collier: Who does that work?

Mr. Beebe: The construction and operating agency. The Army Engineers and the bureau and others. They do the actual work.

Senator Collier: They find out the possibilities of power features? If they believe there are power features, what happens then?

Mr. Beebe: They usually refer the information to us for consideration. That is one of the last steps in the study.

Senator Collier: You haven't as yet been requested to make a study of the diversion of the Klamath River at this time?

Mr. Beebe: We haven't any of the final information. We understand they are doing the work.

Senator Collier: You haven't been requested to do any work on it yet?

Mr. Beebe: I don't know that "request" is the right word. We know they expect to do this and when the information is complete, that it will be referred to us.

Senator Collier: Did your commission in San Francisco or Washington have anything to do with the study of the diversion of the Klamath River?

Mr. Beebe: No.

Senator Collier: You don't know of anyone in your department who had anything to do with this study?

Mr. Beebe: No.

Senator Collier: Does the Federal Power Commission initiate the request that the Bureau of Corps of Army Engineers make study of any stream in power development?

Mr. Beebe: That is a rather hard question to answer because very often we have a report from the Army or other agencies to review and we then, if we think there will be some changes, we request them to give us an alternate location on different streams. I don't know of any that has originated in connection with the Army or bureau works, where we asked them to do that originally.

Senator Collier: In connection with the proposed diversion, did the Federal Power Commission request that the study be made?

Mr. Beebe: No, because nothing has gone far enough yet to have us start on. I think I would be safe in saying, that the Committees of Congress or Senate of Rivers and Harbors. We haven't been able to find where a re-survey has been asked for. I haven't kept track of everything they have done in the last three years.

Senator Collier: Did you ever make a study yourself?

Mr. Beebe: Yes, with the Forest Service.

Senator Collier: In 1932 you and others made a survey of the Klamath River?

Mr. Beebe: For the District Engineer's Office.

Senator Collier: What was your main idea in that study that you made in 1932?

Mr. Beebe: To measure the potentialities of the stream.

Senator Collier: Did you measure the potentialities of the Klamath River?

Mr. Beebe: Partly.

Senator Collier: What portion?

Mr. Beebe: We laid out a possible development of the stream.

Senator Collier: Did you take the whole river into consideration?

Mr. Beebe: All of it.

Senator Collier: What did your inventory show?

Mr. Beebe: I don't remember.

Senator Collier: Haven't you a copy of it? Who has copies of that inventory?

Mr. Beebe: It was made for the Army.

Senator Collier: The Corps of Army Engineers?

Mr. Beebe: Yes, I was working for the Forest Service at that time.

Senator Collier: In setting up the Federal Power Commission as an independent agency, did Congress in that act set up any policy as to duties and functions?

Mr. Beebe: Yes. I have a copy of the act.

Senator Collier: What were your functions, briefly?

Mr. Beebe: I might say, we just had some preliminary figures. Nothing final.

Senator Collier: Where did the preliminary figures originate?

Mr. Beebe: Well, just rough draft figures, yes. Nothing complete; nothing complete enough to get any conclusion from.

Senator Collier: You haven't reached any conclusions?

Mr. Beebe: No.

Senator Collier: You speak of this rough draft. Where did you get the figures from?

Mr. Beebe: Current material from the Army. Not any finals.

Senator Collier: Then, you are doing something on the Klamath River.

Mr. Beebe: As we are on every other State. In other words, as these figures and information develop, we take them and make inventories and catalog them. In two years, we hope to have something for you.

Senator Collier: Do you think the Federal Power Commission could have a study ready for the Corps of Engineers, if you are asked by August of 1945?

Mr. Beebe: Well, if they supply us with the information.

Senator Collier: You believe this could be accomplished?

Mr. Beebe: Yes.

Senator Collier: Are you making a survey on the Central Valley, Mr. Beebe?

Mr. Beebe: Only as subsequent to use the water for other purposes. Irrigation has the prior right to use the water, in the Western States.

Senator Quinn: Why make the surveys? You have to find out about the water first, don't you? Has anyone submitted to you—the, what uses are going to be made of the water if not used for irrigation and the other purposes come prior to power?

Mr. Beebe: Not on the Klamath.

Senator Quinn: Have they in the Central Valley?

Mr. Beebe: They have in some cases. In many cases.

Senator Quinn: Have they up through the northern part of the Sacramento Valley?

Senator Collier: We are also taking in the river, too. That is part of the watershed.

Assemblyman Burns: When you say you could make a final report in August of 1945, all other preliminaries and other things from other agencies would be submitted to you?

Mr. Beebe: Yes.

Assemblyman Burns: You could file your complete report then? Don't they deal a lot with the Federal Wildlife Commission?

Mr. Beebe: When we get the Army report, it should have that.

Assemblyman Burns: You would assume, if the Army couldn't get it for four years, you would also have to wait.

Mr. Beebe: Absolutely! We could base the report on the information the Army submitted, any time, but then it would be based on their assumptions.

Assemblyman Burns: Their conclusions would have to come before yours?

Mr. Beebe: Yes.

Senator Collier: What I am trying to find out is, has the Federal Power Commission, to your knowledge, in any way had anything to do with this proposal or any previous?

Mr. Beebe: No.

Senator Collier: The reason I ask the question is that it is prevalent that this study is, that the main features are for electric power?

Mr. Beebe: Yes.

Senator Collier: Did the Federal Power Commission in any way instigate this proposal?

Mr. Beebe: I know they didn't out here and I am sure I would have heard of it if it had been investigated in Washington. I would have received a copy of the letter.

Senator Quinn: I understood the reason the Army Engineers investigated this was to get material to put in your report?

Mr. Beebe: No, they, the Army, can make their own report.

Senator Quinn: You mean, after your report is in?

Mr. Beebe: No, before.

Senator Quinn: Have you now a survey of the power being developed in the Sacramento Valley or San Joaquin, that is now being developed? Do you have the figures on that?

Mr. Beebe: We have all the figures. We get monthly reports.

Senator Quinn: Do you have it in a form that it could be submitted to this committee? Our power supply arises not by basin lines, it covers the area the same as northern California and includes some of Nevada. You are carrying a certain load. Could you furnish the information on that?

Mr. Beebe: It is all in one pool. Added to that is what is the future possibilities for the development of power and point of origin. We can't do that yet.

Senator Quinn: Have you got now, any surveys on the power that you could develop on a river like the American River.

Mr. Beebe: Back in the 1920's the commission published a book on the water powers of the American River.

Senator Quinn: My point is this. We can probably get more than this. Before we want you to come messing around with our rivers, we want to know what you have done about development—what the possibilities for development of power are on all the other rivers running into the Sacramento River and Klamath River.

Mr. Beebe: The Army is going to change the figures materially.

Senator Quinn: The Army says it doesn't have anything to do with this.

Mr. Beebe: The Sacramento Division is doing some study on it. There is a planning program. Your planning is on a broad basis. No dates on it. When you come to build something, it is entirely different. These studies are on a broad plan.

Senator Quinn: Then, years later, they will say, we will do this job or another job? You don't know; planning is something you don't think there is going to be any need of?

Mr. Beebe: I think our philosophy is, we ought to know the maximum that can be obtained. We wouldn't want to have some power developed that is going to stop that development in irrigation. In planning comes down to building something that isn't going to conflict with some of the other things.

Senator Quinn: Are you making surveys?

Mr. Beebe: I am.

Senator Collier: What I want to find out now is, what are the power needs of California today? Do you have any figures?

Mr. Beebe: Yes.

Senator Collier: Have you made any estimates on the future needs of power in California? Let's say, in five (5), ten (10), fifteen (15) or twenty (20) years?

Mr. Beebe: We have made some estimates, yes.

Senator Collier: From the present sources of power in California, will you have to develop more hydroelectric places to take care of future needs?

Mr. Beebe: Yes. Unless you are going to stagnate in California, we must have more power.

Senator Collier: The power needs of California in five (5), ten (10), fifteen (15), or twenty-five (25) years—then from that, is it necessary to bring the waters of the Klamath down for purposes in order to take care of California for the next five (5), ten (10), fifteen (15) or twenty-five (25) years? Could you work that out for us? I am trying to find out when it will be necessary to divert the waters of the Klamath in order to meet the power needs.

Mr. Beebe: I don't think you can state that.

Senator Collier: Is it needed immediately?

Mr. Beebe: I don't think so.

Senator Collier: How many years would you say?

Mr. Beebe: I am no prophet. I don't believe in my life time.

Senator Collier: Then, you don't think it is possible to set out the power consumption in California today?

Mr. Beebe: Yes.

Senator Collier: Do you think it is possible to estimate future needs of power for California?

Mr. Beebe: Not accurately.

Senator Collier: Within a reasonable allowance of say five (5), or ten (10) years?

Mr. Beebe: Beyond that, yes.

Senator Collier: Taking this electric power feature of the State Water Plan showing maps on the reservoirs up and down Central Valley, would it be possible to determine from that when the power needs—when the water of the Klamath would have to be brought in to fulfill the needs of California?

Mr. Beebe: No.

Senator Collier: Would that be possible? You think it is far in the future?

Mr. Beebe: No, I don't think it far in the future. I will read to the committee part of an address of Honorable Leland Olds, at Seventeenth Annual Conference, Association of Western State Engineers, Denver, Colorado, delivered by him on November 14, 1944.

"I am in fundamental agreement with that regional outlook. I believe that a democratic civilization to remain healthy must be rooted in active local and regional democracy. And to me that means, among other things, the greatest possible local and regional participation in the development and use of our resources. I am convinced that cooperation between Federal, State and local agencies will be worked out with this end in view.

In this statement I express the sentiment of our entire Commission. It will actuate us as we play our part in the country's post-war development. And I trust that the States will come to look on the Federal Power Commission as a service agency, equipped with certain experience and data, which should enable it to be of assistance to you in your plans.

In this connection, let me interject a brief reference to the fact that the Federal Power Act, in many of its sections, accords the State and local interest in water resources a primary preferential status. In fact, I often wonder why the States have not taken advantage of what the act offers them, instead of so frequently treating its provisions, as interpreted by the courts, as an unwarranted invasion of State jurisdiction. Those who are hypersensitive to possible encroachment, it seems to me, have either failed to read the act or have been misled by those deliberately serving the interests of corporations subject to highly centralized financial control.

The provisions of the Federal Power Act, of special interest to the States, may be briefly summarized as follows:

In the first place, the act provides that the application of a State or political subdivision of a State to develop the power resources of a site or at a government dam, shall be accorded priority as compared with the application of any private interest.

In the second place, the act provides that licenses for the development of power by States and municipalities shall be issued and enjoyed without charge to the extent that the power is sold to the public without profit or used for State or municipal purposes.

In the third place, the act provides that, as a condition to receiving a license, an applicant must submit satisfactory evidence of compliance with the laws of the State or States within which the proposed project is to be located with respect, among other things, to the appropriation, diversion, and use of water for power purposes.

In the fourth place, in Section 27, the act contains the iron-clad provision "that nothing herein contained shall be construed as affecting or intending to affect or in any way to interfere with the laws of the respective States relating to the control, appropriation, use, or distribution of water used in irrigation or for municipal or other uses, or in any vested right acquired therein.

And, finally, the act provides for cooperation of Federal Power Commission with appropriate State agencies in the necessary surveys and investigations concerning the utilization of the water resources of any region to be developed, the waterpower industry and its relation to other industries, the relation of power sites to markets and other matters of importance in the exercise of its functions."

Mr. Beebe: Our commission has cooperated pretty fully with the State.

Senator Collier: If local people were against a proposal of the commission on something under investigation, to what extent would you take the local opinion? What consideration would you give it?

Mr. Beebe: We would give it very serious consideration.

Senator Collier: There are times some small local group doesn't affect the community as a whole? If you were positive it was the majority of people involved, what would the commission do about it?

Mr. Beebe: They would probably act according to the majority. You can't prophesy what five (5) men are going to do.

APPENDIX XIII

Testimony of Raymond Matthew, State Engineer's Office

Senator Collier: Mr. Matthew, have you made any studies or looked into the possibilities of power development on the Klamath River?

Mr. Matthew: No, we have never made or initiated any study on the power. We have reviewed the various studies of the Federal Power Commission and others.

Senator Collier: Has the Federal Power Commission made a study on the Klamath?

Mr. Matthew: The only report was put out in 1928 by Mr. Bonner.

Senator Collier: Who did he do that work for, Mr. Matthew?

Mr. Matthew: I think he did it for the Federal Power Commission or in connection with the United States Forest Service. He was District Engineer of the United States Forest Service at that time. The Forest Service, as I understand it, had certain duties and responsibilities in connection with the Federal Power Commission set-up. It was done through the District Engineer's Office of the Forest Service. Licenses and power potentialities on various streams. In Northern California, now, the load is about nine and one-half billion kwh.

Incidentally, the load in Southern California is about the same or a little less. About 18,000,000,000 kwh. in California. Of course, the load reflects very largely the abnormal use of power for war purposes and, when the war is over, it would be probable that there would be a temporary reduction in load.

Senator Collier: You wouldn't think there would be an increase?

Mr. Matthew: I think that there would be a reduction in power demands after the war, temporarily. If the State grows as I think most everyone thinks it is going to grow, the trend of industry will be upwards. We have made a preliminary estimate for 1950. The load in Northern California will be about the same as now, 9,500,000,000 kwh.

Senator Collier: How about Southern California? Have you made an estimate of that yet?

Mr. Matthew: No. I haven't a figure but I think it would be approximately the same. The figures I was about to give are for Northern California in 1960. That would be going quite a long way out on a limb. We made a preliminary estimate for 1960 of 12,700,000,000 kwh. in Northern California.

The maximum annual demand corresponding to these energy figures is somewhat of a guess. These are all approximate figures, of course, but in 1950 the maximum annual demand would, perhaps, be about 1,800,000 kilowatts. The demand in 1960, if the estimate is anywhere near right, would be about 2,400,000 kilowatts on a capacity basis. In other words, the power demands, as estimated, will grow from 1,800,000 to 2,400,000 kilowatts.

The present facilities serving this Northern California market as of last year consist of about 1,322,000 kva. in hydro and 644,000 kva. of steam-electric or a total of 1,966,000 kva. of installed capacity. The large proportion of hydro is notable.

Senator Collier: You say about two-thirds?

Mr. Matthew: Yes, sir. Most of that capacity is owned and operated by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company but nearly all of the plants are interconnected and the Pacific Gas and Electric Company obtains power by interchange from nearly all the generating capacity there is in the region. Those figures that I gave as to installed capacity do not include the Shasta and Keswick plants of the Central Valley Project, which will add 450,000 kva. of unallotted capacity; Shasta, 375,000 kva.; and Keswick, 75,000 kva. When those capacities are added it is estimated that all of the production facilities in Northern California area will have a dependable output capacity of about 1,700,000 kilowatts. That is about 100,000 kilowatts less than estimated demand in 1950.

Senator Collier: Mr. Matthew, referring to the table on page 26 of the report on electric power features of the State Water Plan in the Central Valley Basin, what would be the situation in 1950 if the American River Project had been constructed and placed in operation?

Mr. Matthew: Referring to this table, if the American River with 295,000 kilowatts of capacity were brought in before 1950, then in 1950 you would have an approximated excess of 195,000 kilowatts, depending upon the kind of power produced therefrom. That would take care of the shortage for 1950.

May I first make a general statement? If the load in 1960 reaches 2,400,000 kilowatts in demand, we will need some 600,000 to 800,000 kilowatts of additional capacity to take care of the load between now and that time. A large part of this potential power from these units of the State Water Plan could be used in meeting the market demands. The Water Project Authority has taken the position that, insofar as practicable, the increased power demands should be met from these projects that will be used and needed for flood control and other purposes.

Senator Collier: If all the nine (9) units are built, the power needs and other needs of California are taken care of many years in advance?

Mr. Matthew: I wouldn't say that. We think it would be in the public interest that these projects be utilized to take care of the increased power demands. The priority listed in this report is based upon their possible utility in meeting power demands and also consideration of their need for the other purposes to be served. I should point out this; there is a lot of other potential power—hydro-electric power that can be developed. The several agencies concerned, with State and Federal, will have to get together and decide, if any when these projects should be developed, and work out a program.

Along with hydro development there must be a lot of steam-electric power. You have to have steam along with hydro-power in order to provide an assured dependable power supply. It looks as though you would always have to have a minimum of from twenty-five per cent (25%) to thirty-three per cent (33%) of your total power capacity in steam plants.

Senator Collier: How long would the power in the Central Valley meet the needs?

Mr. Matthew: I don't think I can answer that question. However, I might say that if this anticipated growth that I have given you is correct, if that materializes, there is enough power in the Central Valley Area to take care of the increased demand without going to the Klamath, up to 1960.

The committee recessed to reconvene at the hour of 1.30 p.m. o'clock.

Mr. Beebe: Sometime this morning in discussing the work that the commission is doing in connection with the Army and the bureau, I made a statement for the authorization standpoint—the commission is required to cooperate with the Army and we are not required to cooperate with the bureau, but with an agreement with the bureau and our office to cooperate. It is not mandatory.

Senator Quinn: You made a statement regarding power. Of course, if there is no need for further power under present set up, according to your general trend of—that would apply to the Trinity River as well as the Klamath, would it not?

Mr. Beebe: It would to a certain extent. In all our estimates we would include the Trinity Diversion as set up and ready to go as soon as needed. No present need at this time. Sometime in the future.

Senator Quinn: Why do you designate between the Klamath and the Trinity?

Mr. Beebe: In the way you put the question. I don't think any one thing of the Klamath.

Senator Quinn: Why do they want to do it if there is no need for it now?

Mr. Beebe: It seems to me due to any sound plan in the future, that must be done.

Senator Quinn: They must estimate ahead of time? They must make an investigation and report, and the amount of water to be diverted? They haven't any final studies of the rock or know where the dam can be built?

Mr. Beebe: No excavation yet.

Senator Quinn: Are they doing that exploratory work now? I should think it would be a good thing.

Mr. Beebe: I don't know.

Senator Collier: Mr. Matthew, do your statements take in the Trinity Diversion?

Mr. Matthew: I think I clarified that this morning, Senator.

Senator Quinn: Then, if there is no immediate need for additional waters out of the Klamath in the Central Valley that would apply as well to the Trinity as it would to the Klamath, would it not?

Mr. Matthew: Yes, I think so.

Senator Quinn: Well, you wouldn't be diverting water unless there was some good reason for it other than water supply?

Mr. Matthew: I wouldn't think any of the statements I made make any difference between the two. I merely pointed out that the Trinity Diversion was part of the State Water Plan adopted by the Legislature.

APPENDIX XIV

Testimony of Frank E. Bonner, Consulting Engineer, Eureka Chamber of Commerce—February 19, 1945

Senator Collier: Colonel Bonner, what do you know of this study, for diversion of water from the Klamath and Trinity Rivers?

Lt. Col. Bonner: The Eureka Chamber of Commerce is representing this matter in joint interest of Del Norte, Trinity and Humboldt Counties.

Senator Collier: Please tell this committee your qualifications.

Lt. Col. Bonner: I have been in engineering work 35 years, I was in the Government service and before that in the ----- part of that in the Forest Service, Bureau of Reclamation and following that in private practice, mining projects, irrigation and power, principally in California and the last two and one-half ( $2\frac{1}{2}$ ) years I have been in the Army.

Senator Collier: When you say "Army," what do you mean?

Lt. Col. Bonner: In the Corps of the Army Engineers, one and one-half ( $1\frac{1}{2}$ ) years overseas commanding an engineering regiment in the Solomon Campaign. Here I would like to make it clear the objections of the lower basin county people in regard to the various objections they have against this plan based on its adverse affect on recreation, fishing, etc.; they are not my particular concern but my direction is to simply present to your committee what is in my jurisdiction which affects the power engineering, etc. On that I can only say that the people of the lower basin are very much opposed to the plan. The power that can be developed with the water down the Pit River will be more expensive than if developed down the Klamath. There will be an actual loss of power by bringing it over the Pit than there will be from bringing it down the Klamath. We are opposed to any power being developed below the Shasta River. While a diversion is suggested it would have a very serious effect on the lower developments. We are willing to stand on the agreement but we think when the development by the Pit is appraised in the proper way, it will be found that there is an actual loss bringing it in that way. Something in the amount of \$4,-200,000 loss by the State. You could get 400,000,000 kwh. more by developing power from Keno to Klamath than you would get if you brought it down the Pit river. Develop the power in the channel. It would make more power. I will give you some rough figures. I believe the Engineers estimate that aqueduct out of Klamath beyond 900 second-feet—to limit the size to—in other words, their diversion will have a capacity of 900 second-feet. Appraising the power for several demands—until irrigation, that aqueduct might be kept full. That, probably, would require the reservoir and Sprague River now under investigation. A report made by the Army Engineers in 1933 tentatively lines up the diversion of the Klamath River. They show the head loss required to get the water from Tule Lake, and we feel that that is not near enough. Lighting of power across the construction cost will require a lot more drop along that ninety-five (95) miles of aqueduct. I think the drop is 200 feet in elevation where actually we feel that is going to be more than doubled so that the first power plant they plan to have near Pitville will be reduced to about 270 feet. Also, that plant won't be capable of producing very high quality of power. It will have to be in flat load. No drop between tail water of that plant and the diversion works of Pit No. 1 and Pit No. 3. Pit No. 3 and Pit No. 5, the developments are pretty well proposed to water supply now available. It is estimated that the two (2) plants will have to be paralleled. I don't believe any consideration has been given heretofore of loss through that tunnel. There is thirty-nine (39) miles of tunnel. Far above the water table. An enormous leakage. We have estimated that they would lose about 100 second-feet. You would have to line every foot of the tunnel. There would be no replacement along the aqueduct. The Pacific Gas and Electric Company brings in local water from smaller streams. The actual new capital to utilize the same would be about \$30,000,000. The cost of operating, maintaining, pay interest charges on those power facilities would be about \$3,000,000. The value of that power is just about equal to the cost of carrying the power plant investment alone, if you could get the power dumped into Fall River. The power won't return any investment level that could be applied against the \$50,000,000 or more. If you get the water free, the power produced would be just about the cost of carrying that through. The billion and one-third k.w.h. that you get out of that and whereby the Army Report of 1933, and I believe these figures are totaled from Mr. Beebe's report, it shows that developing the Klamath along its natural course from Keno and including the Bluff Creek site from Keno on, there may be produced about one billion, three hundred thousand k.w.h., so, therefore, the difference between that figure and the billion and one-third of the Klamath would be a perpetual loss of public output. An enormous compensating advantage that they don't take into account either the power along the lower part of the Klamath. There are enormous power resources which I think sometimes—it might be a long way off. It would, of course, raise the cost of the power produced in amount of one-third until you get into the jurisdiction of the Trinity River. Coming to the point of need for this water. I don't believe it has been mentioned where it would be used or if Table Mountain was used.

Senator Collier: Colonel Moore stated they didn't know where it could be used.

Lt. Col. Bonner: To support that statement, I would like to read just a few passages from the State Report of the San Joaquin River Basin, Bulletin No. 29 (1931). By utilization of the proposed ultimate physical loss of the State Water Plan—of the State water including the Trinity River Basin—

Our people feel the same way about the Trinity as the Klamath. The power is hopelessly uneconomical.

"It has been demonstrated in analysis presented in another report* that by the utilization of the proposed ultimate physical works of the State Water Plan in the Sacramento River Basin including the Trinity River Diversion, regulated supplies, without deficiency in amount and dependable in time, could have been made available in the principal streams during the dry period 1918-1929, to irrigate all of the net irrigable area in the Sacramento Valley, after allowing gross diversions for the irrigation of all of the irrigable foothill and mountain valley lands in the Sacramento River Basin. The analysis also shows that there would have been a large surplus of water in every year, over and above all needs in the basin above the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta."

Lt. Col. Bonner: That means, before you could ever have secured the approval of Sacramento Valley people to permitting the appropriation to any water to San Joaquin, you would have to show you proposed to irrigate every kind of land that they had left.

Senator Quinn: The waters they deeded there, would there be enough waters left in the watershed?

Lt. Col. Bonner: I don't know if that was deeded.

Senator Quinn: I mean, were they getting any other water from the Klamath or Trinity?

Lt. Col. Bonner: No sir, from their own local supply.

Senator Quinn: Would it be sufficient water?

Lt. Col. Bonner: I will read other passages from the State Report of the San Joaquin River Basin, Bulletin No. 29, (1931).

"The total ultimate average annual requirement for the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta, including salinity control, would amount to about 3,590,000 acre-feet. A portion of this would be contributed by water from the San Joaquin Valley streams. However, if the entire amount had been obtained from Sacramento Valley waters during the 11-year period 1918-1929, there still would have been surpluses in the maximum and minimum years or 11,399,000 and 2,164,000 acre-feet, respectively, and an average annual surplus for the period of 6,702,000 acre-feet.

"The ultimate development of the San Joaquin River Basin will require the importation of available surplus water supplies from the Sacramento River Basin.

* Bulletin No. 26, "Sacramento River Basin," Division of Water Resources, 1931.

"In the lower San Joaquin Valley, a region wherein water supplies are adequate if conserved, all classes of irrigable land have been included in estimating the required irrigation supply.

"For the upper San Joaquin Valley, where supplies from outside sources will be required, the cost of such importation would be relatively high and in general would exceed that of developing local sources of supply. Therefore, it has been assumed that, under conditions of ultimate development the maximum practicable utilization of all local sources of supply will be made and service will be justified only for the better lands. In evolving that portion of the State Water Plan pertaining to the furnishing of a water supply to the upper San Joaquin Valley, the area of service was taken to include only lands in Classes 1 and 2.

"The average seasonal amount of water that would have been required to be imported from the Sacramento River Basin would have been about 2,000,000 acre-feet, exclusive of an average seasonal amount of about 1,000,000 acre-feet of return flow and surplus water from the lower San Joaquin Valley intercepted by the San Joaquin River Pumping System and utilized in the areas served by the San Joaquin River and Mendota-West Side Pumping Systems, which would be replaced in the delta by Sacramento River water.

"The ultimate State Water Plan would furnish * * * a supply of 1,570,000 acre-feet per season, with a maximum seasonal deficiency of 35 per cent in an exceptionally dry year, for the irrigation of all of the net irrigable area of 772,000 acres of Classes 1 and 2 lands lying on the western slope of the upper San Joaquin Valley.

"The proposed Mendota-West Side Pumping System departs from the Mendota Pool at elevation 159 feet, with a constructed canal extending southerly along the most favorable topography. Height of lift in feet: totals 150; average weighted lift, 116.

"The location of the Mendota-West Side Pumping System is in general along the lower edge of the lands to be served. The utilization of most of the water supplies delivered through this conduit would require the construction and operation of local pumping projects having total lifts varying from 250 to 500 feet."

Lt. Col. Bonner: The charge would be about $8 for alfalfa; $6 for cotton; no crop higher than $8, except oranges which might stand $30. It would be reasonable, gentlemen, to believe, that all that 772,000 acres is not going into oranges.

Senator Quinn: You estimate that it would be charged—$22 per acre overall for the water?

Lt. Col. Bonner: That isn't paying interest on the $50,000,000 to get it from the Klamath.

Senator Quinn: That would be the cost from the delta on down?

Lt. Col. Bonner: Yes sir. That would apply to normal and not wartime conditions as we have now. One other point. This is a passage from Bulletin No. 25, Report to Legislature of 1931 on State Water Plan (1930), page 112:

"Investigations have been made of other reservoir sites in the Sacramento River Basin upstream from the major reservoirs, and on streams on which no major reservoirs are proposed, to determine the possibilities of obtaining additional regulated flows. It is found that the yield from the Yuba River probably as much as 170,000 acre-feet per year by the use of other known reservoir sites.

"A relatively small additional yield also could be obtained from the American River and some of the small streams entering the Sacramento Valley from the east and west side foothills. If it should be demonstrated that a safe dam could be constructed in the lower canyon of the Sacramento River, near Red Bluff, to create a reservoir with a capacity of about 1,000,000 acre-feet, an additional regulated supply of over 600,000 acre-feet could be obtained from this river. A still further increase in yield could be obtained with a greater storage capacity.

"A preliminary study indicates that it would be physically feasible to divert 500,000 acre-feet annually from Eel River into the Sacramento River Basin without impairment of the present uses on the upper reaches of the stream."

Lt. Col. Bonner: I would judge beyond the State Water Plan you might get at least 100,000 acre-feet from other reservoirs to be built within the immediate future.

The amount planned to be given from the Trinity was something like 900,000 acre-feet which about one-half ( $\frac{1}{2}$ ) was to be used for irrigation and the rest to run down into the delta. In ordinary years to the Golden Gate and wasted.

We submit, Mr. Chairman, absolutely no need of bringing this water here for irrigation. If so, it would be too expensive to use. Loss of power. Power would not be valuable enough to pay for more than the power plants themselves. The Trinity works out the same way.

If the Army Engineers can work out the reservoir it would be very desirable, not only for fishing down the river but also for eventual development for power. I think that part of the investigation should be very desirable. That part where there is use of the river body and that part affected by fluctuations, they have put in a small afterbay. I doubt if there would be very much power. The best knowledge I have from the report is, that there is plenty of water to meet—no need of diverting water from the Klamath River Watershed for power or irrigation. I don't see any excuse for it.

Assemblyman Heisinger: You would recommend to the committee that there should be a diversion? Or, that there should never be a diversion from the Klamath River or the basin?

Lt. Col. Bonner: I would put the Trinity diversion in the same class. You could never make the power pay bringing it out of the Klamath River or Basin.

Assemblyman Heisinger: Would there be a great loss of power in connection with the diversion from the Trinity?

Lt. Col. Bonner: Yes. If you divert that water away from the Klamath Channel between Keno and Klamath, you will have robbed the whole of Southern Oregon and Northern California of its one source of power. There wouldn't be enough water left in the channel to run the two plants there.

Assemblyman Burns: What would the Trinity Diversion cost? What are the power features?

Lt. Col. Bonner: State Bulletins estimate the total cost at $62,000,000; annual charge $4,000,000. Power value if the project is in operation primarily for irrigation net $1,900,000 per year, after taking full credit for power. That is the part that would have to be paid for by irrigation. The cost per acre for land irrigated, $125 per acre at powerhouse tail water. Cost of getting water to land about $225 to $250—mostly Class 3 land; very poor type of land.

Assemblyman Burns: I have worked a lot with it in the last years. Statements have been made that if these dams were put up that there would be a certain amount of miles along that river from the dam on and 25 miles up to 85 miles, that the bed in the dry summers would be dry. What would you say?

Lt. Col. Bonner: I wouldn't say it would. I would say as the project is proposed, the conditions from Copco down to about Scott River would be about the same as the dry time part of the driest season which was 1931.

Senator Collier: Would that be the condition?

Lt. Col. Bonner: Yes, except during the very wet period of the year.

Senator Collier: You recognize that that was very harmful?

Lt. Col. Bonner: When dry seasons occur, they are harmful.

Senator Collier: Is there an assurance that even that much would go through there?

Lt. Col. Bonner: Yes, to assure you, two-thirds ( $\frac{2}{3}$ ) would go through there.

Senator Collier: Another thing—would it be your opinion that they would have sufficient water in storage to be able to give a continuous electric flow and still let that amount of water go down?

Lt. Col. Bonner: We can't tell exactly what the ultimate requirements of electricity on the Klamath Project may be.

Senator Collier: Let's assume it would take it all. They might get pressed for the power and unless guaranteed by the contract—

Assemblyman Burns: What I conclude from your statements is, that you couldn't have this Pit minimum flow and constant unit flow of electricity at the same time in a dry season. Could you?

Lt. Col. Bonner: Yes, sir. Under the conditions of immediate future, diversion of 900 second-feet; the 200 second-feet would go to the dam. It would pick up a little more at Keno.

Assemblyman Burns: They are providing for sufficient storage?

Lt. Col. Bonner: Yes, sir. Additional regulation of the Sprague Reservoir.

Senator Quinn: How about the Trinity?

Lt. Col. Bonner: The Trinity—the last study of the Trinity was, they just contemplated release of about 200 second-feet.

Assemblyman Burns: That would be about a dry bed. It gets very low. You would think it would affect the small beds on the Trinity?

Lt. Col. Bonner: It would probably uncover them.

APPENDIX XV

Brief Presented by Klamath Chamber of Commerce Including Organizations, Agencies, and Individuals Concurring in Brief by Klamath County Chamber of Commerce and Tables on Agricultural Production

(Addressed to U. S. Engineers Office)

We come face to face with this project, involving diversion of some of the water which we have always regarded as wholly our own, to be applied wholly to our own development, at a time when the economy of the Klamath Basin is facing a fundamental change. Hitherto industrial operations, based upon a large stand of pine timber, have provided the bulk of our basic income, with agriculture merely a growing sideline. Due largely to the war, with its immense demand for lumber for military purposes, we face at a much earlier date than anticipated a reversal of this situation, with agriculture providing the bulk of our basic income.

For example: At the peak of war production, the lumber out of the basin was approximately 800,000,000 board feet—roughly double the 1929 cut. Our timber stand will not permit continuation of cutting operations at anything like this level beyond the period of acute war need. The best sustained yield figures available indicate that the cut will stabilize at approximately 300,000,000 board feet, less than half of our present war-demand cut and only three-fourths of the 1929 level.

Obviously this will bring about a fundamental change in the economy of the basin. Unless profitable agriculture can be expanded greatly, we must face a sharp decline in our prosperity. This impending change, because of the war, is coming upon us before we have had time to survey fully and accurately our future agricultural resources. Hence our necessity in this brief to use estimates and trends. Hence also the acuteness of some of our fears.

We know that agricultural acreage must increase sharply in order to bring about the new economic balance we must strive for. Any increase in agricultural acreage calls for an increase in the amount of water needed. But that isn't all. As our tonnage per acre increases as a result of more intensive cultivation and new crops, our consumptive use of water will increase. When we apply these two factors—increased acreage and increased tonnage per acre causing increased consumptive use of water—we are convinced that at some time in the future we will need ALL of the minimum rainfall of the basin for agricultural purposes.

In order to protect adequately this area's agricultural future, it will not be sufficient to insure merely enough water for the years of good rainfall or even the years of average rainfall. We must have water enough to carry us through the years of minimum rainfall. Tree ring evidence submitted at this hearing indicates that in the past there have been long intervals of extreme drouth. This evidence is confirmed by facts based upon historical knowledge—such as the known fact that somewhere in the 1850's Goose Lake was wholly dry and was traversed by emigrant wagons whose tracks were still clearly visible when Goose Lake again went dry in the late 1920's. There is similar evidence in the case of Tule Lake. These known records correspond strikingly with the tree ring record introduced in this hearing—so strikingly as to confirm and justify our fears of future drouth periods. They confirm and justify our belief that in order to protect the agricultural future of the Klamath Basin we must have all of the minimum rainfall for our own use.

We are assured repeatedly that we need have no fears as to our future water supply—that no needed part of what we have will ever be taken away from us. But we have before our eyes the example of Owens Valley, in Southern California, where the greater need of the greater number ultimately prevailed and the water of Owens Valley was taken to supply the needs of the City of Los Angeles and its adjacent agricultural areas. True, the farmers of Owens Valley were paid for the water that was taken from them, but no mere cash payment can compensate for the ruin of a region into whose making men and women have put their lives. Furthermore, we recall all too clearly that the townspeople and businessmen dependent on the trade of Owens Valley farmers received no compensation. Their businesses were drained away as completely as the water diverted from the farms of their trading area.

Here in the Klamath Basin we see building up below us the same pressures that resulted in the taking of the Owens Valley's water. Residents of the great Central Valley of California have insufficient water and are looking around already for every drop of moisture they can lay their hands on. They have back of them all the powerful arguments of the greatest good to the greatest number. They have vast areas of rich soil, long growing season, proximity to markets and transportation. They will always be able to make a strong case. We of the Klamath Basin don't want to be another Owens Valley. We want protection now against such a possibility.

While it is true that Paragraph 1, Part "A", Appendix VI of the report states that it is a basic consideration that all agricultural land within the Klamath Basin above Keno which can be classified as suitable for ultimate development should be considered as possessing a prior right to any available water-supply source within the basin, regardless of the present status of development of either the land or the water supply, we submit that in view of the law this "basic consideration" can not be sustained.

"Water being of a fugitive nature, the corpus is susceptible of use for irrigation only when controlled: and the only property rights which exist in water in its natural state are rights of use. Besides the land, it is this trinity of water, physical structures to control it and the right to use it which constitute the dominant facts in western agricultural economy. It has been repeatedly said that water is the 'life blood' of the arid and semi-arid west, but it is the 'right to use' which gives it life.

"These considerations created early customs in many western States which ripened into a system of water law. This law abrogated the the riparian water rights of the humid east and adopted the doctrine of prior appropriation under which he who first applies water to a beneficial use either upon riparian or nonriparian land acquires a vested right to such use superior to the claim of all subsequent users. The laws of these (Western) States provide an elaborate system of administration of these rights." (National Reclamation Association Report of Proceedings of Ninth Annual Convention, p. 115.)

We accordingly submit that if the plan as outlined in the U. S. Engineer Office Report should be adopted the waters would undoubtedly be appropriated and applied to a beneficial use in the Central Valley of California long prior to the time additional lands in the Klamath Basin could be developed, and this being true further development could not be had within the Klamath Basin above Keno. Under the law there would be no water left for appropriation for these lands.

For the past several years irrigationists in the western States have viewed with alarm claims asserted by the federal government that it owns all unappropriated waters of non-navigable streams and that the return flow resulting from irrigation of Federal reclamation projects is the property of the Federal Government and therefore free of the sovereign control and supervision of the States in which such waters and projects are located. These claims are contrary to the fundamental principles of water laws in the several western States. Resolutions of protest have been adopted at the meeting of the National Reclamation Association. In Senate Joint Memorial No. 7 the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Oregon, in legislative session in 1943, adopted the following Resolutions:

"Be it resolved by the Senate of the State of Oregon, the House of Representatives jointly concurring therein: That it is the determined policy of this State of Oregon to maintain its jurisdiction and control over the rights to the use of the waters in this state, and to protect such rights as have been established under the laws thereof; and be it further

Resolved, That it is the determined policy of this State to protect rights to the beneficial use of water within this State as against threatened Federal usurpation; and be it further

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States, by appropriate legislation, renounce forever the threatened usurpation, and confirm to the State of Oregon the sovereign control over the waters of this state, except the control over navigation; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be sent by the Secretary of State of the State of Oregon, to the President of the United States and to each member of the Oregon delegation in the Congress of the United States."

The plan under consideration, if adopted, will forever place exclusive control over all Klamath Basin waters in the Federal Government.

In presenting our case, we want it understood, and have the facts to prove it, that we are not a martinal agricultural area, in any sense. Much of our land is among the richest in the world. Our crops are basic agricultural commodities, which will always be in demand. If the time comes when people are fed with capsules or tablets, it will be our basic agricultural commodities from which the capsules or tablets will be made.

The Klamath Basin is a young man's country. Its immense undeveloped opportunities have attracted here an unusual type of people—people with courage, enterprise, initiative and an unusual equipment of technical knowledge. It is not a marginal area. A nation-wide cross-section survey made by the U. S. Department of Agriculture in the late 1930's brought out the startling fact that average family income in Klamath County, Oregon, is the highest in the United States. If permitted to use all of its resources through the future years it will remain a great, independent economic unit contributing its full share to the future development of the Pacific Coast. But if its resources, especially its basic resource of water, are diverted from it, it must of necessity decline and fall away.

If, for example, it should become reasonable apparent that our water resources are to be diverted from us, for the benefit of some other region, the kind of people who have made and are making the Klamath Basin the outstanding American region it now is will lose confidence in the area's future and will sell their holdings now, while the market for them is good, and will get away. The vim and courage and enthusiasm, the confidence in the future and the willingness to take chances on it, that are now so much a part of the spirit of this basin, will depart, and will have left only a hollow shell.

We are assured on every hand that we are not going to be harmed. There is talk of guarantees. What guarantee? How can we guarantee now what Congress may or may not enact in the future? How can we be guaranteed against what the Supreme Court may or may not rule in the future? How can we of the Klamath Basin be given guarantees that a vital part of our water supply may not be taken from us at some time in the future under the pressure of the argument of the greatest good to the greatest number?

Because of all this, we fear the construction of any facilities that may commit at any time in the future any part of our water resources to any other area.

The following engineer's report is made a part of this brief, offering a technical basis for our opposition to any diversion of water from the Klamath Basin.

*Klamath County Chamber of Commerce
Klamath Falls, Oregon*

GENTLEMEN: At your request I have considered at some length the report of the U. S. Engineers Office of San Francisco entitled "Appendix VI—Irrigation and Hydroelectric Power—Klamath River and Its Tributaries, Oregon and California," and desire to submit at this time my preliminary report on such consideration. Due to the short time allowed for this study, at a time when much other work was pressing, I have not been able to cover all details as carefully as I would like, and further have not been able to make any investigations in the field. All data used have been taken either from my files or from knowledge of the areas involved.

I have accepted from this report the figures on acreage for the acres included, the estimates on consumptive use of water, runoff, etc., as correct, as I believe them to be, and will base my report entirely upon the use and consideration of those figures. I shall refer to the above report as the "Engineers' Report."

I have not had the time to make any check on the estimates of the water available, evaporation losses, etc., and must leave them to a more comprehensive study of the whole problem.

It shall be the purpose of my report to show :

1. That areas other than those included by the Engineers' Report must depend on the Klamath Basin for their water supply.
2. That the average consumptive use of water in that report, while probably correct for the period shown, and the conditions existing at that time, can not be accepted for the future for the following reasons:
  - (a) The crops grown in the areas checked are changing to types which require more water.
  - (b) The average consumptive use shown can not be used in basing an estimate of the amount of water required due to long periods of subnormal precipitation during which time the maximum use must be used, at a time when minimum supply is available.
3. That the Klamath Area like many portions of the Great Basin, is subject to long continuous periods of subnormal precipitation over which it is impractical to carry supplies of stored water from periods of above-normal precipitation.

Possible Acreage

The Engineers' Report shows a possible area to be irrigated of 535,000 acres (Table XIV), but does not include such areas as Butte Valley and the "JF" and "D" Ranches in Siskiyou County; Weed Valley, Boles Meadows, Steele Swamp, Huffman Ranch and other areas in Modoc County; areas on Miller Creek in Klamath and Lake Counties and the lower areas of the Swan Lake Valley in Klamath County.

New and larger equipment for construction purposes, more efficient and cheaper pumping equipment and especially lower power changes which undoubtedly will be available in the future, will make possible the development of such areas as Butte Valley and Swan Lake. Water for Butte Valley would have to be raised about 150 feet, probably from Klamath River, in order to cover some 60,000 acres, and water for Swan Lake would only have to be raised about 70 feet from Upper Klamath Lake to cover not only the land included in the Engineers' Report but 7,000 acres in the lower areas of the lake, which were left out of that report.

A maximum lift of 66 feet and an average lift of 45 feet would irrigate 4,000 acres on the "JF" and "D" Ranches, about seven or eight miles southeast of Dorris, California, on the southwesterly side of Lower Klamath Lake and Willow Creek.

In Modoc County such areas as Weed Valley (600 acres), Huffman Ranch (1,600 acres), Boles Meadows (5,000 acres), and Steele Swamp (1,800 acres), have not been included. The original plans of the Bureau of Reclamation for the Klamath Project included some 8,000 acres of irrigable land lying easterly and southeasterly from Tule Lake, and in addition to the above there is in operation a diversion from the upper reaches of Fletcher Creek, a tributary of Willow Creek and Lost River, into Goose Lake Valley, with a right of 1,058 acre-feet for 320 acres. These specific instances, together with probably another 1,000 acres of miscellaneous rights on Willow Creek, make a total of 18,300 acres in Modoc County.

On Miller Creek and Barnes Valley Creek above the Gerber Reservoir between the Horsefly Ranch and Barnes Valley and including both, there is in the neighborhood of 4,000 acres of irrigable land. This area extends from Klamath County into Lake County.

A total of all of the above tracts which were not included is 93,000 acres or approximately 17 per cent of the amount shown in the Engineers' Report, and if added to the amount shown in Table XIV would make a grand total of 628,000 acres requiring irrigation water from the Klamath Basin. Further investigations would undoubtedly disclose other areas.

In Table IX of the Engineers' Report the consumptive use of water is developed, showing an average of 1.59 acre-feet for the lands of the Klamath Project draining into the Tule Lake Sump, which checks closely with the Iakisch Report as prepared by the U. S. Bureau of Reclamation, for the seasons beginning with 1933-34 and ending with 1941-42. I do not take any exception to these figures for these seasons but I do take exception to the acceptance of the average of these figures, or even the 1.65 acre-feet of the Iakisch Report, as the basis of consumptive use to develop the water supply necessary for the irrigation of the Klamath Area, for the following reasons:

1. The crops grown in the Klamath Basin are becoming more intensive and producing more tonnage of crop each year. The more tonnage is developed the more water is required. This increase is shown by the four attached curves which show the increase of agricultural income of the Klamath Basin; acreage, yield per acre, and earloads of potatoes grown in the Klamath Basin; acres of small seed grown and tons produced in the Klamath Basin, and onion production in the Klamath Basin. All of these show a decided upswing, which will undoubtedly continue far into the future.

Good engineering requires that an allowance be made for such increase in intensive crops. It is not unreasonable to expect this increase in consumptive use to be at least 25 per cent and an allowance for that much of an increase in use should be allowed.

2. Consumptive use is the difference between the amount of water applied and the return flow, and varies from season to season, depending on precipitation, average temperatures, and similar factors. The consumptive use for any season plus the precipitation for that season give a figure that will not vary greatly from season to season. From this it is seen that dry seasons will show a higher consumptive use than will wet seasons.

In order to properly estimate the required supply for an irrigated area the consumptive use for dry periods must be balanced against water supply available during these periods. In this engineers' report the consumptive use has been developed for a period having precipitation averaging  $7\frac{1}{2}$  per cent higher than the average for the Klamath Records, and with a record net inflow into Upper Klamath Lake 28 per cent greater than for the period including the seasons 1928-29 to 1934-35, and precipitation at Klamath Falls 38 per cent higher than the same period.

To insure an adequate irrigation supply for the Klamath Basin during periods of drouth the average consumptive use for the seasons between 1928-29 and 1934-35, inclusive, a seven year period, should be taken as the average maximum. The precipitation, inflow to Upper Klamath Lake and consumptive use for the seasons between 1928-29 to 1941-42 are shown in Table 5.

During the period of 1928-29 to 1941-42 the precipitation averaged 10.21 inches or .85 feet at Klamath Falls which, if deducted from the average total of precipitation and consumptive use between 1933-34 and 1941-42 of 2.77 (Table 5), would give 1.92 feet. To this should be added 25 per cent or .48 feet to allow of a reasonable margin of safety to provide for more intensive cropping, or a total of 2.40 feet. This would give a proper consumptive use on which to base the requirements of this area.

Periods of Subnormal Precipitation

Any study of the requirements for irrigation water in the Klamath Basin and the supply of such water, must take into consideration the long periods of flow precipitation which occur. That these periods are severe and sustained is indicated by the drying up of deep lakes, bands of narrow tree rings, and other natural features.

The desiccation of the lakes in this area already indicates that it is subject to long periods of subnormal precipitation, and as an instance I desire to call your attention to both Goose Lake and Tule Lake.

Goose Lake, with an area of 186 square miles and a depth when full of 26 feet, lying astride the Oregon-California Line, has been dry twice in the memory of white people (about 100 years), and has overflowed four times. This drying up must have followed many years of low inflow, as with a gross evaporation loss of about 3.0 feet per annum, it would have taken at least 8 years of no rainfall and no inflow. When the lake was dry the last time, wagon tracks were found in the bed of the lake at what would be at a depth of 20 feet below normal water surface. These tracks had probably been made when the lake was dry in the early 1850's during the Oregon Emigration.

The fact that wagon tracks were found across the bed of Goose Lake is also substantiated by the finding of wagon tracks across about the deepest parts of Tule Lake. Tule Lake originally had an area of about 160 square miles and a depth of 24 feet. Mr. John Liskey of Klamath Falls states that in 1924, after the lake had been drained, he found old wagon tracks from a point near Hotel Rock on the West shore Southeasterly toward a point South of the Cinder Cone. These had probably been made by emigrant wagons in about 1850, which would indicate that Tule Lake had also dried up at about the same time as Goose Lake, in spite of the fact that under natural conditions Tule Lake received water from Klamath River during flood stages of that stream.

Antevs study of the tree rings in the Lakeview area in the "Rainfall and Tree Growth in the Great Basin" (American Geographical Society) clearly shows these periods, each of about 15 years duration.

A copy of his curves showing widths of tree rings, which in turn indicate relative precipitation, or water-supply for the trees studied, is attached hereto.

Conclusions

From Table XIV, Section "g," the total acreage to be irrigated is shown to be 535,000 with a consumptive use of 761,000 Acre-Feet, an allowance for system loss of 157,000 acre-feet, and a total ultimate requirement for irrigation water of 918,000 acre-feet, or 1.72 acre-feet per acre. After this total requirement has been met it is stated in Paragraph 59, that 392,000 acre-feet would be available for diversion. This gives a total of 1,310,000 acre-feet.

I have shown that at least 93,000 acres additional must receive their irrigation supply from the Klamath Basin or go dry, making a total of 628,000 acres, and that the consumptive use should be increased to 2.40 feet to allow for dry periods and more intensive cropping which can be expected. This would mean a 50 per cent increase of the allowance per acre, bringing the requirement to 2.58 acre-feet, average maximum consumptive use, or 1,620,000 acre-feet.

Yours very truly,

WILLIAM L. WALES

Guest Editorial

Herald and News, Klamath Falls, Oregon, February 17, 1945

A letter by R. S. Calland, Assistant Regional Director,
U. S. Bureau of Reclamation

Your article in the February 5, 1945, issue of the Herald and News regarding the proposed Klamath River Diversion has been called to my attention. Since reports concerning the activities of different Federal agencies appear to present a confusing picture, I would like to clarify the position of the Bureau of Reclamation in this matter for the benefit of the local people who are so vitally interested.

As stated by me in Sacramento recently, the Bureau of Reclamation has no plan and is not making an investigation to develop a plan to divert Upper Klamath River water to another watershed. Although as you point out in your article, I did not "eliminate the possibility for all time," our studies show that the need for diversion of water from the Upper Klamath River to the Central Valley of California is extremely remote; especially if the Trinity River Diversion, as outlined in the California State water plan, is constructed.

Irrespective of the needs of the Central Valley of California the Bureau of Reclamation would not recommend the diversion of any except surplus waters from the Klamath River Basin. Surplus waters are defined as those above and beyond the amounts needed for present and potential beneficial uses of any character in the Klamath River Watershed. For example, no water needed for the full development of all the irrigable lands would be considered as surplus for diversion nor would water needed for municipal and industrial purposes or for the maintenance of fish and wildlife be regarded as surplus.

As you know the Bureau of Reclamation has a substantial investment as well as a vital interest, in the development of the Klamath River Basin. The Klamath Project, one of the earliest undertaken by the bureau, has been progressively expanded in step with the need for additional irrigated land around Klamath Falls. Several years ago the bureau investigated a proposal to transport Upper Klamath River water to the Shasta Valley in the Klamath River Watershed for irrigation purposes but at that time this was found to be infeasible. Conditions change, and it is entirely possible that such a plan will be found feasible in future under different economic conditions.

Statements to the effect that the bureau is cooperating with the Army engineers in the latter's investigation of the proposal to divert Upper Klamath River water into the Sacramento River Watershed require explanation. During the many years of its activity around Klamath Falls the bureau has collected a vast amount of data and factual information regarding the Klamath River and the natural resources within its watershed. Some of these data were needed by the Army engineers in making their investigation and were supplied by the bureau. Had the Army engineers been required to secure their own data, duplication of effort and needless waste of public funds would have resulted. We have cooperated willingly in this manner but any inference that the bureau is participating in, or making a joint study with the Army engineers of the proposed diversion, is misleading. We are interested in this proposal because of its possible effects on bureau developments, present and potential, and expect to participate in the hearings as appropriate to bring the facts to light.

The Bureau of Reclamation is a conservation agency interested primarily in natural resource development of the 17 Western States, while the primary interest of the Army engineers is in flood control and the improvement of rivers and harbors. The bureau holds as one of its most valued assets the respect and confidence of the people in the areas affected by its operations, including the Klamath River area. The bureau will continue to work closely with the people in the solution of their problems relating to maximum development and beneficial use of the natural resources.

Very truly yours,

R. S. CALLAND
Assistant Regional Director

APPENDIX XVII

Brief Submitted by Hon. James M. Allen, Chairman, Northern California
Natural Resources Protective Committee

To the United States Army Engineers:

GENTLEMEN: The undersigned are members of and represent the Northern California Natural Resources Protection Committee, which is composed of representatives from various organizations of Siskiyou County, and the membership of these organizations comprise the greater portion of the population of Siskiyou County within the Klamath Basin.

We appear here today in opposition to the tentative proposal to divert water from the Klamath Basin to the Sacramento River Basin, and respectfully submit that we believe that a comprehensive survey of the Klamath River System, and of the most beneficial use of the waters of this river system, in order to be fair, impartial and complete should not be limited to one objective, as seems to be your purpose now, but the scope of your investigation should be broadened and it should be diligently pursued by you, with facilities you have at your disposal, to cover every ramification of this subject which is of so much importance to us, who inhabit this basin, and to all that will come after us, and wish to enjoy this river system, which we believe to be our greatest natural resource. You should, before you touch a drop of this water to take to another watershed, make a careful, complete and independent survey and investigation of all present and prospective uses of this water in this basin, and of all the present benefits derived therefrom, and of all the potential and possible benefits that might accrue to us, and those that come after us, from the use of these waters. This is our natural resource and we feel that we are entitled to every priority of consideration. The burden of proof is not upon us to show our damage, but the burden of proof is upon those who wish to take it to show that we will not be damaged, or that their needs are so urgent and benefits so great that they far exceed our damage. That is, in considering this matter, all doubts and uncertainties should be resolved in our favor.

The discussion of the benefits of this river to us, naturally falls under different heads or topics of consideration, each of which we will discuss separately:

Recreational Value

The Klamath River Basin is one of the greatest recreational areas in the Western States. Combined with the gigantic forest of the Redwood Empire, and natural beauties of Crater Lake, and majestic Mount Shasta, this river makes this area a Wonderland and a playground known all over the world. This beautiful living stream, the Klamath River, winding its way to the sea through these forest covered mountains is a component part of this wonderland. Words can hardly express the beauties of this great river, the poet Lord Byron, speaking of the Rhine more nearly expresses the thought.

"The river nobly foams and flows,
The charm of this enchanted ground,
And all its thousand turns disclose
Some fresher beauty varying round;
The haughtiest breast its wish might bound
Through life to dwell delighted here;
Nor could on earth a spot be found
To nature and to me so dear."

During seasonal periods, myriads of salmon and steelhead pass up this river to the spawning grounds at its headwaters, making it the greatest sport fishing stream in the West. It is estimated that in normal times well over 100,000 people come to the Klamath River to fish each season. These spend at least $10 each, if not much more, in this area, and here we have $1,000,000 flowing in. This means bread and butter to a lot of people in this basin. We have the commercial salmon take outside, but near the mouth of the river which would not exist, except for this river and its spawning grounds. It is difficult to make a segregation of value of this industry, but it is estimated that about 2,000 persons are employed in it with equipment valued at $5,000,000 and with about $250,000 annual income. This does not include the vast quantities of fish taken by the sport fisherman which have a great food value. These spawning grounds are of inestimable value and must be preserved at all costs. But the greatest value of all of the water of this river cannot be valued in dollars and cents. The value to man regenerated by a vacation in this wonderland. Can a dollar and cents value be put on Yellowstone, or on Yosemite, or Glacier Park? Neither can it be put on the Klamath area as a land of recreation. Would anyone think of destroying Yellowstone, or Yosemite by water diversion? Why the Klamath? The State of California spent several hundred thousand dollars in purchasing the canneries at the mouth of the Klamath River, and equipment of the fishermen engaged in fishing inside the river, to preserve this stream as a sport fishing stream.

The people of the State of California fully realize the importance of this area as a recreational area, and in 1924 by a special initiative measure, adopted by an overwhelming majority of over 200,000, voted to create a special Fish and Game District of this area from Shasta River to the sea, and prohibited dams and particularly power dams in this river. Had it not been for this measure we believe that the great power possibilities of this Klamath River would have been utilized long before this. The imminent danger was apparent as one big eastern company, the Electro Metals Company, had spent several hundred thousand dollars already in power development and contemplated much more. It contemplated big industrial development of some of our great natural metal resources, but its hand was stayed and the industrial progress in this area was stopped dead still. The people of the State of California dug down in their pockets willingly and paid this power company several hundred thousand dollars for its rights and improvements. Over 600,000 kwh. of electricity was locked up by this measure, but we of this region took it cheerfully. We realized we had a Sportsman's paradise, that all the people in the State and in the Nation had an interest in this great recreational area. But it seems unfair to us now, for anyone to take this water away from us on the ground we have not used it, when it would have been all used and this proposed diversion never dreamed of, if we had been left alone. We believe that the recreational values of this region far outweigh this 600,000 kwh. of electricity, and we venture to say that it is ten times as much as can be developed by this diversion now. This proposal would destroy our recreational values and also rob us of our potential power possibilities and all they might mean to us. We heard Dr. Taft of the State Fish and Game Commission say the salmon and steelhead fishing would be done for, in the Klamath, if this diversion went through, and if you take out water, of course, our power potentialities are also gone. We say that the value of this water to this area for recreational purposes alone should forever check this contemplated diversion. We believe the recreational values are the first and foremost of consideration in this matter, and all else is subservient to them.

Potential Power

As we understand it, one of the objectives for spending this upward of $100,000,000 on this proposed project is the use of the water to develop hydroelectric energy. If so, it would seem to be much cheaper to build power dams in the Klamath River between Shasta River and Keno, and utilize the fall of over 2,000 feet between these two points to generate power. Frank E. Bonner, District Engineer for the United States Forest Service, made a report for the Federal Power Commission in 1928 and found that approximately 274,750 kwh. of electricity could be developed between Keno and Shasta River, not including the 47,000 kwh. already developed at Copco and about 36,000 kwh. already developed above Keno. This would not interfere with the 1924 initiative measure as there would be no power dams below Brush Creek, and by putting in a regulating dam at or near the mouth of Shasta River would perhaps benefit the fishing facilities in the stream. We believe such a utilization of this flow would develop much more electrical energy than could be expected by this proposed diversion, and at much less expense, and would leave the water in its own proper watershed with all its attendant benefits. Why not investigate this before any attempted diversion is made?

Navigation

It might interest you to know that the Klamath River, by Section 103 of the Harbors and Navigation Code, has been declared to be a navigable stream from its mouth in Del Norte County to its confluence with the Klamath River. Whether or not it is in fact a navigable stream we realize, of course, is another question. It has been repeatedly held that a river capable of floating logs is a navigable stream (No-Bo-Shone Assn. vs. Hogarth, 7 Fed. Supp. 885; in re Southern Wisconsin Power Co., 122 NW 801; Stevens Point Boom Co. vs. Reily, 44 Wis. 245; State vs. Wright, 208 SW 149; Collins vs. Gerhardt, 211 NW 115), and numerous other State and Federal decisions support this doctrine. The lower reaches of this river are now being used extensively for floating logs to mills at or near the City of Klamath. No doubt, these operations will be extended. One of the finest bodies of virgin timber in the West lies in the lower Klamath Basin. The value of this timber and its marketability will be greatly decreased if this cheap means of water transportation is taken away. The potential values of this river for this purpose are difficult to estimate. How far up the river these operations will extend in the future, no one can tell. This vast timber growth is being protected for future generations, and no doubt, future generations will utilize it. Except for a few reefs and bars, the Klamath, no doubt, is navigable, in fact, far inland, and these reefs and bars are no unsurmountable barriers to navigation. Should we subtract these waters from this basin and perhaps lock up these great timber resources, and decrease their marketability?

Mineral Resources

It is a known fact that cheap hydroelectric power attracts industries near to the source of that power for reduction of minerals and chemicals. The great chemical plants and other reduction works below Niagara Falls in Canada and the United States are potent evidence of this fact. It is almost a universal rule that the development of these industries follows the power, especially where the supply of raw materials for these industries is close at hand. The Electro Metals Company, which was put out of business by the initiative measure, planned to develop some of these resources of which they had made a survey, which would, in their opinion, justify a large investment. Edward Morris, Mining and Civil Engineer for Alta California made a report in 1944 and in regard to Siskiyou County's mineral resources made this statement: "The wide expanses of this great subdivision of the State of California can only be properly appreciated by contact with its vast natural resources which to date have been partially explored in a limited way * * *. Little is known of the potential resources of mineral wealth in this region." We do know, however, that we have large deposits of copper, iron, manganese, quartz, crystals, tin, tungsten, asbestos, chrome, mercury, graphite, nickel, zinc, arsenic, mica, bauxite, marble, cobalt and many other deposits of minerals and chemicals that will be needed by this nation in time to come, and the utilization of the waters of the Klamath for their development and reduction will be the cheapest and most feasible manner of their exploitation. To take these waters away reduces the market value of these great deposits. As evidence of some of these deposits we refer you to Mr. Morris' report, and also to a report made by the Industrial West Foundation, Inc., in 1944.

Irrigation

The possibilities of the use of the waters of the Klamath River for irrigation naturally divides into two heads. The use of the waters on the arable land along the banks of the Klamath within its own slopes, from Keno to the Sea. Some of these lands are now being irrigated by use of these waters, but we must remember that this region is sparsely settled, as yet, and mining has been the chief concern of the settlers along its banks. There has been no intensive study of these irrigation uses, but in time to come, and when this empire of the West settles up, and it will inevitably, the large acreages around Hot Springs, Hornbrook, Jenny Creek, Seiad, Walker, Oak Bar, Beaver Creek, Horse Creek, Grider Creek, Happy Camp, Dillon and elsewhere down the river will be put in production if they have the water. The waters in this river have an equalizing influence on the climate, and the soil is fertile, and frosts are rare in most of this area as it is protected by the mountains and the air moderated by the water in the river. A brief appraisal of the possibilities of this area as a fruit growing region is made in the 1911 Blue Book of California at 827. Quoting, "Apple orchards thrive in the mountain and valley regions. The fruit is crisp, sweet, juicy and large in size and beautiful in color. Some apples average nine ounces each, and trees bear as much as 2,000 pounds and the most of luscious fruit." "It has been demonstrated that apricots can be grown profitably in the mountain regions along the Klamath River, the trees bringing good crops of fruit * * * all varieties of plums and prunes thrive." Of cherries, Professor Wickson, an agriculturalist and horticulturalist says: "In the mountain valleys cherries thrive on suitable soils; exposures for the cherry are chosen both with reference to protection from frost injury and to early ripening of fruit; these conditions are met here. The trees bear heavy crops of large, glossy fruit that is firm and sweet and of delicious flavor." We might add to this that conditions are ideal for producing pears, peaches, walnuts, almonds, pecans and nuts of almost all kinds; also fine strawberries and other berries of all varieties. The principal obstacle that has held back the planting of these crops in this area is the lack of adequate transportation facilities. We firmly believe that a good highway will some day be built down the Klamath River to the coast, and then, no doubt, this region will come to its own as one of the great horticultural regions of the West. Canneries will spring up, and this region will provide homes and sustenance for thousands of people. Do not destroy these future possibilities by taking this water away.

The other possible use of these waters is by diversion and use in the tributary valleys. Large areas of fine, productive agricultural land, with water, lies in Shasta Valley. For more than 35 years men of foresight have seen the possibility of diverting waters from the Klamath to Shasta Valley for irrigation and the development of electric power.

County Surveyor Davidson made the first survey some time in 1890, however, the data obtained from this survey is lost and is not available. Then there is an old U. S. R. S. made sometime prior to 1911, but these surveys, we believe, contemplated a diversion far below Klamath Hot Springs on the Klamath River. Then in 1911 an engineer by the name of J. E. Luddy made a survey which proposed taking the water out of the Klamath River at an elevation of about 2,900 feet, six miles above Hot Springs. The estimated cost of the main canal under this plan, which would have been 20 miles long, was $743,000. It proposed a syphon one mile in length, and tunnel one mile in length and three short tunnels and it was estimated that 60,000 or more acres could be irrigated under this plan.

In 1905 T. H. Humphreys made a reconnaissance survey of a project to irrigate Shasta Valley from the Klamath River. The proposed diversion was 16 miles below Keno and it was estimated it could be applied to irrigate 58,100 acres. The elevation of the diversion being about 3,000 feet; the main canal 20 miles long; a series of long tunnels and cement lined canals and two siphons. The estimated cost of this was $3,784,238.00 or $65.13 per acre. We might add that the proposed canal would carry 656 c.s.f. of water.

In 1921 an irrigation district was formed in Shasta Valley called Klamath-Shasta Valley Irrigation District. This district included 287,000 acres within its boundaries. State Chief Assistant Engineer made a survey of the project at that time and reported that the project was feasible. Prior to this time Messrs. Symmons and Means in 1912 made a survey of a diversion from the Klamath River near Keno at an elevation of 4,081 feet, and a canal 42 miles long coming into Shasta Valley at an elevation of 3,940 feet. Here it was proposed to drop the water 800 feet for power. No survey of the valley was made at that time by Symmes and Means, but it was estimated that 75,000 acres could be irrigated in the valley and the estimated cost was $4,000,000.

The State Engineer commenced from the Symmes and Means survey. He estimated the Summer flow in the Klamath River to be 350 c.a.f. It states that by the California-Oregon Power Company's contract with the Reclamation Service there will be about 1,600,000 acre-feet of regulated flow. The California-Oregon Power Company required about 2,500 second-feet regulated flow over its dam at Keno. It proposed to leave enough water go down to take care of the Copco plant, but carry it around in the canal and use the drop of this plant to generate power. It was estimated a flow of 1,400 second-feet going down the river to Copco would be three times the needs of the power company, and the remainder of 1,100 cubic second-feet be carried into the valley for irrigation, and it was estimated that there would be at least 118,000 acres of irrigable land in the valley. It was estimated that this project would develop at least 37,000 kwh. of hydroelectricity or 324,120,000 kwh. annually, and this would have a commercial value of perhaps .001 a kwh. at the powerhouse, or $324,120,000 annual income from electricity alone. Bulletin No. 26 page 204, Table 58 of State Water Plan places the value of electricity if Kennet Dam at the switchboard at .002700. That is more than twice as much as we have estimated, but if built this annual return would go a long way toward financing this project.

If there are this many acres irrigable and we believe we can prove definitely there is, it will provide homes for 2,000 families. This is a project our government should be interested in in view of the needs for our returning soldiers. Here also, is the town of Yreka, seriously in need of water, and it would be under this project. Water in this town would be worth many thousand dollars. The ditch could go around the valley on approximately the 3,000 foot level and we have a map of the acreage under that level and we submit that we who live here know that the acreage is here. All we want is a fair investigation.

We do not wished to be brushed off, with the Gault and Towle Report of 1923. We believe that we can give you something of the background of that report, made under discredited Secretary of the Interior Albert Fall. We know that powerful adverse interests, we refer to the power interests on the Klamath River, fought this project at every turn, and we believe, if given time and money, we can show it fallacious in many particulars. We note that you have seen fit to make a view of the report and findings made by Thomas M. Robins, Lt. Col., Eng. Corps., in document 181, Seventy-third Congress, Second Session, where he said at page 6, "Diversion of the Upper Klamath River into Pit River does not appear advisable in view of the needs and possibility that utilization of the head of the lower river may some day become feasible." This statement was made even after the Gault and Towle report, but this statement does not appear to have stopped you from making this review. We say the Gault and Towle survey should not only be reviewed, but cast aside entirely, and an independent and new survey made before any attempted diversion is made. Why do we say this? We will tell you why. Look at this map showing over 100,000 acres under the 3,000 foot level in Shasta Valley. Gault and Towle found only 65,000 acres. A tract approximately 10 miles square. Look at a tract 10 miles square and compare it with the area under 3,000 feet. Symmes and Means estimated 75,000 acres and took in none of the west side. Humphreys found nearly 60,000 acres and was at a much lower level and did not take in the west side. The State engineer estimated 118,000 acres. Could it be possible that these engineers missed it by nearly one-half? Find out from the farmers in this valley who know their land and what can be irrigated under the 3,000 foot level and what it will raise with water. They know this, and it would not cost much for you to get out such a questionnaire and we believe you will find that it is upwards of 150,000 acres. The cost that Gault and Towle estimated was about $30,000,000. Symmes and Means said $4,000,000.00. They must have been competent engineers to miss the cost by 26,000,000. We can only make comparisons to show the fallacy of this report. The mammoth dam at Kennett, perhaps 20 times larger than this project was estimated at $117,000,000. This Pit River Diversion has an open canal of approximately 18 miles, a tunnel of 36 miles; a side-hill canal of 14 miles and this construction would be through the worst possible country to construct a diversion works because this is a lava flow, loose and pourous and it is known that there are many subterranean caves because Captain Jack and his Indians lived in these caves and stood off the United States Army. It is almost certain that every foot of this canal and tunnel would have to be of concrete and the estimate set forth in Document 141, page 40 was only $38,000,000 for 800 second-foot canal. A comparison of these figures should show that Gault and Towle's estimate is incorrect or that there other estimates are far from being correct. Is the Gault and Towle survey made under the direction of a man and an administration proven to be corrupt, to be an everlasting barrier to a further investigation of this matter? Engineer Henshaw and many others very close to this matter, by Letter, intimated even after the Gault and Towle report, that some day this project may be feasible. We ask you not to let this Gault and Towle report stand in our way.

East Side Shasta Valley Diversion

If a diversion must be made even over all these possible injuries to our future, why from the headwaters to the Pit, with a 40-mile tunnel and a canal through a lava flow that would perhaps have to have every foot cemented; costing over $100,000,000 and then dumped into the Pit where a private power company, the P. G. & E. would be the principal beneficiary of this vast expenditure of public money? This augmented flow must pass through its turbines at Pit No. 1 and Pit No. 3 and it could and no doubt, would be glad to use it, when as an alternative plan, a canal could be taken out at Keno; brought into this valley; dropped to generate power, and carried along the east side of this valley and used with little effort to irrigate many thousand acres, and then the winter flow and flood waters could be stored behind Shasta Dam. Why not investigate this project and its costs and benefits? Why give P. G. & E. all this gravy at the taxpayers' expense?

Before passing on, we believe that irrigation of Shasta Valley as planned will not injure the fishing features of the Klamath, but will greatly inure to their benefit because the water is not taken out of the watershed, and a greater portion, except that which is lost by transpiration and evaporation, would find its way back into the stream and tend to equalize the flow.

Sacramento Basin Has an Ample Supply of Water and Potential Power

Before any step is taken to rob this watershed of any of its water, the entire potentialities of the Sacramento Basin should be exhausted, and the urgent needs for this diversion should outweigh any other consideration.

We have it from the most competent engineers made after an examination of records kept for over a period of 40 years, from 1889 to 1929, and after a complete and careful survey of the entire situation, that the Sacramento Basin has an ample supply of water for all its needs. We refer to page 62 of Bulletin 26, the State Water Plan, where the following finding is made.

"With all of the major units of the State Water Plan in the Sacramento River Basin, including the Trinity River Diversion, in operation and with stream flows equivalent in character and amount to those of the dry period 1918-1929, there would be average surpluses from the Sacramento River Basin, over and above the full requirements of the 3,874,000 acres of net irrigable land in the basin excluding the delta area, varying from 5,800,000 acre-feet in the driest year to 15,000,000 acre-feet in the year of greatest run-off. These surpluses would be sufficient to provide the water required for the ultimate irrigation of the entire Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta, and the water required for salinity control and still leave surpluses varying from 2,000,000 to 11,400,000 acre-feet per year for exporting to the San Joaquin Valley and the San Francisco Bay Basin."

What better evidence could there be that this water is not needed in the Sacramento Valley for irrigation or salinity control?

We have the same proof with regard to the surplus power potentialities in this basin. It is estimated that nearly forty million kwh. of hydroelectric energy could be developed annually in this area; enough to supply the needs until the population of the State reached 30,000,000, which would be near the saturation point and perhaps not attained for the next 100 years. This is according to the report of Frank E. Bonner to the Federal Power Commission. It is true, that the greater part of this power is below the Shasta Dam, and perhaps this is why it is not sought. This Shasta Dam Project was designed as a flood and salinity control project; it was planned to allow approximately 5,000 second-feet of water flow down in the river in an equalized flow, and this flow would incidentally be used to generate power and for irrigation. Now, for some reason, it, no doubt is planned, to convert this into a power project, with flood control and irrigation incidental.

According to Frank E. Bonner, and referring to pages 103, 83, and 94 of his report, by utilizing the fall and the flow in the American River, with 546,000 kwh., and the Feather River and Yuba River, one with 1,065,800 kwh. and the other with 389,675 kwh., a total of nearly 2,000,000 kwh. could be developed, and this does not include the power potentialities of many other streams in this basin. No power is needed in the Sacramento Basin if this is developed, and it should be developed even though it may cost more than to divert this water, which we doubt, before any water is taken from this watershed.

The recent storm is direct evidence that they are now allowing the flood waters of this area to go to waste, and not only that, but permitting the water to damage and inundate vast areas of valuable land, and imperil life and property, and still it is the desire to come up into this basin and take our most valuable natural resource from us. The inequity and injustice of this shocks the senses of any just man. We will read an article that appeared in the Sacramento Bee of February 7th, 1945, as follows:

"WASTED WATER LOSS IN RECENT STORM IS SET AT $43,000,000

The water which flowed unchecked from the central valleys into the ocean in the latest storm would have been sufficient to irrigate an estimated 430,000 acres of land for one whole season and could have added at least $43,000,000 to the State's agricultural wealth. In addition the wasted water could have produced $390,000 worth of hydro electric power.

This was cited today by the United States Bureau of Reclamation here as additional evidence to substantiate the need for a comprehensive development of the Central Valley Project.

The bureau estimates roughly 1,300,000 acre-feet of water went to waste during the storm, enough to support 8,500 additional 50-acre farms in the central valleys.

COULD HAVE BEEN USED

Under a system of contemplated projects throughout the Central Valleys, the bureau reports all that water could have been saved and put to beneficial use.

Folsom Dam on the American River could have held about 250,000 acre-feet with a potential power value of $63,000.

An estimated 290,000 acre-feet could have been checked by a dam at Bullards Bar on the Feather River in Butte County and a similar amount held by a system of dams on tributary streams above Iron Canyon on the Sacramento River.

Ione Reservoir in Amador County could have caught an additional 120,000 acre-feet and a dam on Dry Creek in Amador County could have held 30,000 acre-feet.

The approximately 22,000 acre-feet which spilled over the Melones in the San Joaquin Valley would have been stopped.

15,000 ON LITTLE JOHN

Similarly, the bureau reports, projected dams would have controlled 15,000 acre-feet on Little John Creek in San Joaquin County; 18,000 acre-feet on the Tuolumne River; 15,000 acre-feet from creeks in the lower Cooperstown area in Stanislaus County; 2,000 acre-feet on Dry Creek near Snelling, Merced County; 110,000 on the Kings River at Pine Flat; 40,600 on the Kaweah River at the Terminus Damsite in Tulare County; 32,200 on the Tule River at the Seccess Damsite in Tulare County, and 19,500 acre-feet on the Kern River at the Isabella Damsite.

The estimate the water wasted could have irrigated 416,000 acres is based on the average use of 3 acre-feet of water per acre to bring a crop to maturity. Using $100 as the gross average of each acre's production (in 1944 the average was $136), the $40,000,000 value of the wasted water was arrived at.

DAMS ARE BRIGHT SPOTS

The performances of Shasta and Friant Dams, completed phases of the CVP, was a bright spot shining above the storm and the rampaging rivers.

Shasta Dam held in check 233,800 acre-feet while Friant caught more than 94,000 acre-feet. The storm increased the storage in Shasta Dam to 1,820,500 acre-feet, and in Friant to 331,700 acre-feet.

It is useless to pursue this phase of the matter further if this evidence and these figures will not convince you.

Evaporation

We are satisfied that the loss of these waters will have serious consequences on our climate. No matter what anyone says to the contrary. We saw what happened to the climate in Inyo and Mono Counties when the City of Los Angeles put its mammoth aqueduct up in that region and took away its waters. These areas became a desert with turbulent sand and dust storms menacing towns and villages and highway traffic. We believe that the evaporation from Shasta Dam will have a marked effect upon the climate in the Sacramento Canyon and vicinity and that was the opinion of everyone that should know something of the effects of evaporation and the moderating effect of large bodies of water on the climate. Those bare hills in the canyon, in five, ten or fifteen years hence will show effects of this storage. Then, why won't the loss of evaporation from the Klamath River have a marked effect? The Klamath River is nearly 200 miles long from Keno to the sea, and averages at least 100 feet in width. If so, the area of the water surface would be 2,400 acres. An acre of land in this altitude on a hot summer day will evaporate over 160 gallons of water according to the evaporation records taken at Lower Klamath Lake. Therefore 2,400 acres would evaporate 384,000 gallons per day. We believe it will be much more than that amount. Can it be said that this amount of water going into the air will not effect the humidity? The loss of this moisture will increase the fire hazard and have a marked effect on our foliage and verdure. Leaving out the element of evaporation, the moderating effect on this stream prevents frosts and sudden changes in temperature and its loss will, no doubt, be very detrimental.

Interstate Rights

This is an interstate stream and both Oregon and California have rights in that stream under the doctrine announced in Kansas vs. Colorado, 206 U.S. 46, 51 L Ed. 936; New York vs. Illinois, 274 U.S. 488, 71 L Ed. 1161; Connecticut vs. Massachusetts, 282 U.S. 660. Each State has a right to make reasonable use of a stream as it passes through it. If the riparian rights doctrine prevails in each State, the rights to the stream is based on the riparian rights in each State on the stream; if the doctrine of appropriation prevails, each State may take just and equal rights therein by appropriations. Most of the rights in this stream, both in Oregon and California are rights exercised within the watershed. The proposal is a new departure for use of this stream in California, and in our opinion would open the door for equal rights and use by the people of Oregon, and it is physically possible for Oregon to use this water and she may also claim rights to take part of these waters out of the watershed. We say this opens the door for interstate complications, perhaps, not at once, but who can look into the future in these matters. Document 181 recognizes this legal question and makes this statement: "but to divert it to the Sacramento River Basin for irrigation would require action by the legislatures of both States. It is doubtful if such legislation would be enacted, particularly if the plan required the withholding of water from the lands of one State to permit its use in another."

Conclusions

We desire to thank you for your kind attention to what we have said. We think every statement we have made will be supported by records and facts. You have stated that you are not promoting this diversion or any diversion. We hope not. If you go ahead, we earnestly request you to make a full investigation of every phase of this matter. At present, the officials of this State are greatly exercised because they believe that a treaty with Mexico over the Colorado River will put a damper on our future hopes. By this diversion you will not only put a definite ceiling on our future hopes, but will destroy much that we hold at the present.

APPENDIX XVIII

Statement by Senator Oliver J. Carter, Yreka, February 21, 1945

Senator Carter at the Yreka meeting made a fine statement of his position in reference to the three schemes for diversion as follows:

"I should like to speak as the elected representative of those people.

"Shasta County is the county in which Shasta Dam is constructed and in which your Scheme 1 would deliver water into the Sacramento River in that county. And Trinity County, the other county which I represent, is the county in which the Trinity River flows and from which water is proposed to be diverted under Scheme 3 into the Sacramento River into Shasta County. And I have also had the experience of representing those people not only before the Corps of Engineers but before the Congress of the United States, particularly the Senate Commerce Committee, in a project that started just like this one. I have some rather bitter memories and, although the fight is not yet completed, I have some definite ideas upon this procedure. So I wish for the moment to leave my committee association out of this picture and speak as a resident of the City of Redding in the County of Shasta and as the elected representative of those people in both Trinity and Shasta Counties.

"My first observation is that these hearings are untimely. They are untimely for a number of reasons, the first of which is that, particularly referring to Scheme 1, the diversion of the waters of the upper Klamath River into the Sacramento Basin, there has been no necessity shown, no need shown for that water in the Sacramento Basin.

"As a resident of the Sacramento Basin and living just below Shasta Dam, the biggest unit of the Central Valley Project, I am vitally interested in the Central Valley Project and I want to see it developed to its fullest extent and I want to see the waters of the State of California in the central valleys conserved and put to a beneficial use.

"The history of the Central Valley Project and all of the other organizations and laws which have led up to the formation of what is known as the Central Valley Project Act is a long one and I do not intend to go into that here. The only thing I have to say is that the construction and the development of that project have just been started and only two major units of that project have been anywhere near completed. Shasta Dam is near completion and Friant Dam, as I understand, has been completed except for some minor works to be done. But the development and the use of the waters stored in those projects have not been completed in any sense.

"So when we are faced with the diversion of waters from another watershed to put into that project the question immediately comes into our minds. What has been done to complete the project of which we have already entered into the construction? The answer is that there is a large number of power units upon which nothing has been done by way of construction and upon which a great deal of planning has yet to be done.

"Immediately below us on the Sacramento River we have the proposed Table Mountain Dam which the Corps of Engineers has proposed to construct on the Sacramento River. That dam is not a part of the State Water Plan, nor is it a part of the Central Valley Project as such. But you do have two major tributaries on the Sacramento River, the American River and the Feather River, which have a tremendous problem of water conservation and development. I include the Feather-Yuba System together. You also have the problem of the Calaveras River, Little John Creek. I think they call that the 'Calaveras-Little John.' Is that it? And you have the Melones on the Stanislaus, and then you have Friant on the San Joaquin, and you go on down into the Kern-King River Basin where you have the Tule, the Kaweah, the Kern, and the Kings. All of those rivers flow into the Central Valley and they have projects which have been proposed on them but which have not been developed at this time.

"It seems to me that until that project is completed, that is, in planning and at least in partial construction, we do not have sufficient knowledge to know whether we need additional waters from other watersheds. My people just believe that at this time to enter into a discussion of the diversion of the waters of the Klamath River, which were never considered in the Central Valley Project and which were not in the State Water Plan, which is one of the biggest for the Central Valley Project, is a waste of time. And, therefore, at this time we are opposed to it.

"That refers to Scheme 1 with both alternates. We are also skeptical of Scheme 1, that plan which proposes to divert water from the Klamath River into the upper Pit River Basin and put it through the Pit River power plants of the P. G. and E. and then down into Shasta Dam and through the Shasta power plant and down on through the Sacramento, through the proposed Table Mountain power plant. We have not yet heard, and we should like to know, what relationship the use of public moneys has to the private development of the water supplies of the Pit River by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company. There has been no testimony so far as I have been able to ascertain that has explained the nature of that development with respect to what is to be done with the private holdings or what contribution private ownership is to make toward the cost of bringing those waters into the Sacramento Basin.

"We also feel that it is untimely because, from the very nature of this discussion, the people are not able to be advised of what is proposed to be done in such detail that they can give you an intelligent answer.

"I stand here before you trying to guess what you are going to do to my people. I don't know. But if you are going to do what I think you are trying to do, I am against it. But it just seems to me that this proceeding is putting the cart before the horse.

"My experience with the Corps of Engineers' procedure of holding their hearing has been that hearings are of not any particular importance once they have made up their mind. We in Shasta County were never called into any consideration when Table Mountain Dam was discussed or when the plans were formulated. The bill was in Congress before we ever had any idea that the matter was to be taken up, and then we were met with the same argument that is used here: 'You have the opportunity to appear before the congressional committees.' We tried that. We finally got a hearing before the Senate committee. And I want to assure you ladies and gentlemen that any time you appear before a congressional committee with a Government agency as strong as the United States Army against you, you haven't much chance! And if you don't stop the thing at this stage of the proceeding, then your problem is one which you might as well consider a lost cause unless you can bring sufficient weight to bear in Congress to support your views. That for people of an area that is not very densely populated is one that is well-nigh impossible both from a financial and from a power point of view.

"You see before you, ladies and gentlemen, a very finely balanced battle that is going on. It is one in which the people are fighting their Government. It is one where Government agencies come before you and say 'We are asking you to tell us a story, but we are not going to let you know what are the answers. We're not going to give you the complete picture.'

"I have heard Senator Collier before ask for information and they say 'Well, we will try to get you the information, but it is not public and we don't know whether it should be released to you.'

"Well, ladies and gentlemen, that is just one of those things that you fight all the way through with that type of agency.

"It is untimely for another reason. It is untimely because at the present time this Nation is engaged in a conflict and all of the people in this area have been disturbed by the proposals here. There are a great many of them who are opposed to them. I have noticed it through sitting on the committee and having received communications from various interested parties.

"This is at best a long way in the postwar period and, in my opinion, I think that the time to start new projects of this kind which are not related with the war effort is after the war is over.

"It is well known that Government agencies, not only the Corps of Engineers but other agencies, are trying to build up a backlog of public works. This may be one of those proposed public works upon which the Nation will have to depend for employment in case there is a dislocation in employment. But the relationship of the construction of this project, even under the best of conditions, is such that I do not think it could be an immediate postwar construction problem and would have to be very far in the future, if constructed.

"I also desire to direct some remarks to the project itself as it affects the Klamath River. I want to say that I am on the Joint Interim Committee of the Senate and Assembly in Investigating Fish and Game Problems. I am also on the Senate commission which was formed in 1943 to investigate the timber resources of the State of California. Being a member of those committees, it has been my duty and it has been my pleasure to have participated in surveys of the Klamath River Area from the standpoint of timber and natural resources as they affected the fish and game problem. Through the technical experts of the Division of Fish and Game and the State Division of Forestry and other governmental agencies I believe that I have a pretty good picture of what are the resources.

"I must say that I have to concur with Judge Allen when he says that the great resources, and particularly the timber resources, of the lower Klamath River Basin have not been touched and the waters of the Klamath River should be dedicated first to the development of those resources. The State of California intends to embark upon a timber conservation program. One of the phases of that program is watershed protection. That is, we consider that the timber in the hills does protect the water resources and it has a definite relationship with it.

"We believe that the waters of the Klamath River should be dedicated to the protection of that resource. We also consider that the timber and the waters that run through the country where the timber lies are great recreational areas, and we feel that those areas should be developed for their best use. That is, if they are recreational lands they should be used as recreational lands. The Klamath River Basin has an abundance of that type of land. It has been only partially exploited to that extent.

"On top of that you have a fishery. And when I say 'fishery,' I mean the total fishing resource, and that does not just mean salmon or steelhead. It means all types of fish which can be used either commercially or for sporting purposes. The Klamath River in that respect has an abundant form of fish life. The salmon and the steelhead are the most valuable at the present time and they are taken in the ocean commercially, particularly the salmon, and are taken in the river by sportsmen.

"I know from estimates made and I know from figures that have been produced before those committees that the money invested in the sporting end or in the commercial end of the sporting fishery, that is, in the dollars-and-cents return to those people who are in the business of supplying sportsmen, is a valuable resource to the people of this community. It is something upon which a great number of people exist in the Klamath River Basin because it has been dedicated to and used by sportsmen.

"So, as a member of the Legislature who has had those problems before him, referring now to Scheme 1 and Scheme 2 insofar as they interfere with the use and development of the recreational features of this area, I believe they are unfeasible and should be resisted.

"As I say, I represent the people of Trinity County who are faced with Scheme 3. In that respect I take this position:

"The proposed Trinity River diversion is a part of the State Water Plan. That diversion has been discussed for many, many years. There is a Federal agency in the field making an investigation of that proposed diversion, being the Bureau of Reclamation of the Department of the Interior. That agency has been carrying on this investigation for a number of years.

"I know from previous discussions that the information that the Bureau of Reclamation obtains from this investigation will be available to the Corps of Engineers under what you call a 'Quadripartite Agreement.' That is quite a job! I call it the 'Four Power Agreement.' And that the Corps of Engineers does not intend to duplicate, any more than it has to, any of the work that may have been done by the Bureau of Reclamation. But I feel this way: that we do have a form of competition at least between the Bureau of Reclamation which has entered into the study of this project with the ultimate idea in mind of building the project if it is feasible and the Corps of Army Engineers, which is also studying the project with the idea of building it if that agency thinks that the project is feasible. So we have injected into the picture the competition between two Federal agencies. There may be more as far as I know, although I have not heard what the Federal Power Commission has to say because I was unable to attend our Sacramento meeting. And maybe the Department of Agriculture is interested, but I do not know to what extent.

"The point is that the people are being constantly put into an uproar by one agency or the other agency making an announcement as to what is going to be done on the project or what is proposed to be done.

"I feel this way: Let the Bureau of Reclamation finish its study and then let the various agencies involved make their proposals to the people of the areas that are involved, and then let the people either express approval or disapproval and let the matter follow its ordinary course. And for that reason I think that this proposal upon the Trinity River by the Corps of Engineers is unnecessary at this time.

"I am interested in the Trinity River from an additional point. I say that it is in the State Water Plan, and the State Water Plan has proposed a diversion of waters from the Trinity River into the Sacramento. It has a very high economic value in its power production possibilities and it will put additional water into the Sacramento River below Shasta Dam. That water may be of some value. But as a representative of the people of Trinity County and those people in Shasta County who enjoy the recreational features of the Trinity River, I do not believe that the waters of the Trinity River should be taken if the natural resource of fishing, wildlife, and so on, will be impaired or destroyed to such an extent that the county will suffer an irreparable loss. When we shall have the information as to what the proposal will do, then we shall be able to give you the answer and the people who are affected will be able to appear before you and give you their story. At the present time we do not have that information.

"I know by talking to representatives of the Division of Fish and Game and of the Fish and Wildlife Service that the information on the fishing question has not yet been assembled, that they are in the process of gathering that information, and that it will take a considerable period of time, three or four years at best, before that information can be assembled so that you will have some intelligent answers to questions that may be asked.

"So I say that as far as the Trinity River is concerned my people feel that you should let the bureau complete its study, let us have the information and then let us make our decision. I know that there is a division of opinion at the present time and that opinion will be more divided unless we have that information. Perhaps it will still be divided, I do not know.

"I have expressed my views as far as the people of Shasta and Trinity Counties are concerned and I have given you a general picture as to my position as a representative of the State of California, but the one thing that impresses me above all in this whole thing is that it is unnecessary at the present time. If it were allowed to remain until after the war or until the necessity for diverting waters from the Klamath River into the Sacramento actually occurs then the problem could be met on its merits. But, as Judge Allen said, all we are now trying to do is venture an opinion of what will lie before us in the future. The plan as such is premature at the present time. And until the time arrives when the waters of the central valley that are within the central valley have been developed to their fullest extent or at least have been developed to a point where we know what will be the water requirements of that valley, there will be no necessity for the diversion of the waters of the upper Klamath River for the use of the water except for hydroelectric power.

"Judge Allen has pointed out to you that many of these other projects in the central valley proposes the development of hydroelectric power, so that those projects should be developed and the power should be put to a use to determine the potential uses in the future that will be made upon the waters of the Klamath River for power in other areas, if necessary.

"As so at the present time we are opposed to Scheme 1. We are opposed to Scheme 2 insofar as it may interfere with the recreational values of the Klamath River and insofar as they are made for the development of the hydroelectric power that may be developed in the central valley. While we are not opposed to Scheme 3, we believe that any action on Scheme 3 should be held in abeyance until the agency charged with the investigation completes it."

APPENDIX XIX

Report and Estimate on Shasta Valley Project—United States
Reclamation Service—1905

REPORT AND ESTIMATE ON SHASTA PROJECT

During the summer, fall and winter of 1904, petitions signed by practically all of the resident landowners of Shasta Valley were presented to the engineers of the Reclamation Service, asking that a survey be made to determine whether or not it would be feasible or possible to irrigate that valley from the Klamath River. Complying with these requests, Mr. M. D. Williams, Assistant Engineer, during August and September of 1905, made a reconnoissance and prepared a report and estimate of the project. From this and also from limited knowledge of the Shasta Project gained from a two-weeks reconnoissance which I made during the summer of 1904, the following estimates have been made. It might be stated, however, that no effort has been made to go into minute details from the fact that the available information would not warrant it.

Shasta Valley is located in northern California and contains the largest body of farming land in Siskiyou County. It is from two to six miles in width, about 24 miles long and has an elevation of from 2,400 to 3,000 feet and is traversed throughout its entire length by the Southern Pacific Railway.

The climate of Shasta Valley is mild. The summers are warm, with a maximum temperature of 110 degrees. The winters are mild; the temperature rarely ever falls below 5 degrees. The springs are rather late and frosty. For the last ten years there has been an average of 17.6 inches of rainfall; not more than half an inch of this, however, comes during July, August and September. Irrigation, therefore, is necessary for successful farming.

The country is undulating, cut up and rocky in places. The soil on the west side of the valley is a heavy adobe underlain by lava. On the east side it is a sandy loam. There is a considerable area towards the southern part of the valley commonly known as the "Cedars," which looks to be an old lava flow; it is partially covered with pumice, also alluvial soil which has been carried from the adjacent foothills by the wind and rain.

There are perhaps 100,000 acres of agricultural land in Shasta Valley held for the most part in private ownership. Of this amount 58,100 acres are irrigable from Klamath River by gravity flow. It is possible to irrigate 10,000 acres by pumping with a lift of 200 feet and there is a chance to develop power for this purpose, but it is believed that the cost would be excessive. From Little Shasta River and various springs there are now perhaps 10,000 acres under an imperfect system of irrigation.

There are about 5,000 people in Shasta Valley; they depend upon lumbering, mining, stock-raising and farming for livelihood. Wheat, oats, rye, barley, vegetables, wild hay, alfalfa and fruits are grown successfully; the latter, however, are sometimes injured by the late spring frosts.

At an elevation of 3,000 feet, 16 miles below Keno, Oregon, the waters of the Klamath River can be diverted by an 8-foot weir, and carried along the east bank of the river into Shasta Valley, and, as stated above, applied for irrigation upon 58,100 acres of land. Because of the steep precipitous canyon the water must be carried for a distance of 20 miles either by a series of long tunnels or by short tunnels and cement-lined canals. The former could be maintained with much less expense when once constructed, but the first cost would be excessive and perhaps more than the land would justify. A line, therefore, contemplating three short tunnels, two siphons, and cement-lined canals, was surveyed and the estimated cost of constructing the same is here given.

The landowners of the Shasta Valley have expressed a desire to organize a water users' association and to do any other thing in reason to induce the Government to undertake the construction of this project. They are now waiting to know what can be done, and I would respectfully recommend that as soon as convenient this matter be taken up and these people notified of the findings.

APPENDIX XX

Report on Shasta Valley Project by J. E. Ludy, Montague, 1911

MONTAGUE, CALIFORNIA, June 24, 1911.

To the HON. G. W. DWINNELL, ARTHUR SIMON AND T. J. NOLTON, ET AL :

In accordance with your request and with your assistance, I have examined your valley (as thoroughly as the time will permit) with a view of determining the feasibility of installing a gravity plant, with a capacity sufficient to irrigating 60,000 acres of land in Shasta Valley by diverting 600 second-feet or 30,000 miners inches of the waters of the Klamath River in this State.

Having expected to rely upon the consideration of this matter, data maps, and profiles compiled by former surveys, the principal ones being the U. S. R. S. and what is known as the Davidson Survey, but which have not been available. Both of these surveys proposed diverting the waters of the Klamath River, but at different points (The Davidson being some 10 miles above the U. S. R. S.), and both surveys covering the same territory that the system now under consideration proposes to irrigate. The data contained in these surveys would greatly assist in making a study of the proposed and estimates of the cost of same, and also of great value in completing its surveys.

It will therefore be noted, that any statements or estimates hereinafter made, as to cost will be in comparison with the cost of like work in other localities, having similar formations, profiles and contours.

Under the foregoing conditions, I herewith submit the following estimate of costs from the point of diversion, some six miles above Klamath Hot Springs at or near the State line of California and Oregon at an approximate elevation of 2,900 (elevation of Hot Springs being 2,700).

Following down the Klamath River, on its South Bank with a proposed grade of three feet per mile, crossing Shovel Creek by means of a syphon, above the Hot Springs, continuing the same course for five or six miles to a point on the mountainside, above the County Steel Bridge over the Klamath River.

Thence bearing to the south through a saddle in the mountain and running via the head of Bogus Creek, to the divide between this stream and Willow Creek; at this point the grade of the canal will have an approximate elevation of 2,800 feet, and will be the point of distribution into the main lateral canals for Willow Creek and Shasta Valleys.

The country traversed by this main canal is mountainous and rolling section, slopes from one vertical to two horizontal, to 1 to 10. The general formation is basaltic cut by granite, slate and tufa.

The soil is a dark rich loam; in places partaking of the nature of adobe, generally rocky or gravelly.

The approximate cost of this main system, a distance of 20 miles, is estimated to be $743,000. This amount includes the construction of a syphon of one mile in length and tunnel excavation of one mile in length divided into three short tunnels, also $70,000 to be expended in constructing headgates, check gates and diversion gates, making a complete and up-to-date system, to a point a sufficient elevation to bring all the irrigable lands of the Willow Creek shed under the water of this system and also that part of Shasta Valley that does not reach too great an elevation in its southern portions. The estimated irrigable acreage under this system is 60,000 or more.

These lands would probably be irrigated by four main lateral canals taken from the main system at the head of Willow Creek, one on either side of Willow Creek at as great an elevation as can be economically maintained, the third one flowing along the east side or head water of Willow Creek Basin, crossing the divide into Shasta Basin, thence southerly along the east side of Shasta Valley, at as high a level as can be maintained covering the irrigated lands of that valley.

The fourth lateral canal following the divide between the Oregon Slough and Willow Creek (which will also conduct the water for the lateral that is to be constructed on the south and west sides of Willow Creek Basin) to a point near Snowden.

Thence following the west side of Shasta Valley in a southerly direction crossing Shasta Rivers west of the Town of Montague and continuing in a southerly direction as far as the line of lateral would cover unirrigated land. It is safely estimated that this system, with its various diverting points along its main line and after reaching its general delivery point at the head of Willow Creek, which includes the Willow Creek lands and those of Shasta Valley, would exceed 60,000 acres of good agriculture land now dry with a security on the land of $30 per acre, or securities to the amount of $1,800,000 backed by the land, which is not excessive, considering the magnitude of the undertaking and the raise in the value of the land to be reclaimed, raising its value from $15 per acre, its present value, to $100, its value when under water of this proposed system. The water rentals or maintenance should be $3.50 during the early periods of its operation, which will probably all be consumed for that purpose during the first few years of its operations, and later, after the lands were all under cultivation and defective points in the canals strengthened, $2 or $2.50 would probably keep up the maintenance and produce a reasonable return for the investment.

The survey of the canal should begin at the proposed point of diversion some six miles above Klamath Hot Springs, following the grade and line as hereinabove described.

For the relief of that portion of Shasta Valley which lays above the flow of the above proposed canal system, there is likely storage proposition by means of a dam 50 feet high at or near the point where Williams' upper dam is now located across Big Shasta River, which stream has a sufficient flow of water to irrigate 40,000 acres, in excess of its waters already appropriated and used for that purpose, except in its low water periods, and by the construction of the proposed reservoir with an estimated capacity of 60,000 acre-feet, a supply of water adequate to irrigate 40,000 acres of fertile but not irrigated land, by means of a canal leading from the proposed reservoir and running in a westerly and northern direction, covering the land in the vicinity of Gazelle and extending north until it meets the water of the proposed canal from Klamath River, also a canal taken from the proposed reservoir running easterly and northerly until it meets the water of the proposed canal from the Klamath River. The probable cost of constructing the proposed dam to store this water would be $250,000 to $300,000.

The extent of its storage capacity should be thoroughly estimated and reported upon at an early date, as it promises to be a capacious reservoir at a comparatively small cost except for the valuable property it covers. The above statements are made, believing them to be approximately true, and without any intention of color, and it appeals to me that your project now under consideration is very meritorious and deserving of your most earnest and untiring effects until its success is assured.

To you gentlemen who have taken the initiative in this enterprise, which means so much to this section when completed, deserve much credit and I am especially indebted to Mr. T. J. Nolton, who has been continuously with me during my investigation, from whom I have derived much valuable information and who has been untiring in his efforts, cordial and frank in his manner.

Hoping you success in this great undertaking, which means so much to this section, I am,

Yours truly,

APPENDIX XXI

Report on Proposed Shasta-Klamath Irrigation District by State of California, Department of Engineering, 1921

DEPARTMENT OF ENGINEERING, SACRAMENTO

April 19, 1921

Mr. W. F. McClure, State Engineer
Sacramento, California

SUBJECT: Proposed Shasta-Klamath Irrigation District

DEAR SIR: The proposed district comprises nearly all of Shasta Valley.

The area embraced in the petition presented to the board of supervisors aggregates about 287,000 acres. This includes about 35,000 acres which are irrigated in a more or less complete manner by water obtained from Little Shasta River, Shasta River and a number of large springs in different parts of the valley.

Of the 35,000 acres of so-called "irrigated" land, about 3,000 acres are in Grenada Irrigation District, the whole area of which is about 5,800 acres.

Many of the property owners in Grenada District signed the petition for the larger district and are desirous of having the former included in the latter. It may be that if any are opposed to its inclusion, that can not be legally effected, a question which is referred to the legal advisors.

A careful examination of levels run for canals around the valley indicate that about 64,000 acres included in the petition are above the probable line of gravity canals, or rough and rocky and should be excluded.

Embraced in the excluded area are 4,000 acres of "irrigated" land.

The irrigated land then appears in three classes, i.e.:

In the excluded territory-----	4,000 acres
In Grenada District-----	3,000 acres
Inside proposed district but excluded therefrom-----	28,000 acres

A map is presented upon which the boundaries are delineated in color which it is believed marks the outer limits to which it is practicable to deliver water by gravity.

Should it be found advisable to include Grenada District within the proposed district the west boundary of the former may be taken as the west boundary of the new district, but if Grenada District shall be excluded, then it were better to make the lines of the new district to coincide with the southeast and north boundaries of Grenada District so as to exclude the whole of it.

Assuming that Grenada District will be included, the computation for areas appear as follows:

Area included in petition-----	287,000 acres
Area excluded above canal lines-----	64,000 acres
Remainder to be included-----	195,000 acres

A large part of this area is occupied by detached buttes and chains of small hills which are too high or too rough and rocky for successful irrigation and should eventually be excluded. The determination of these areas can not be made without accurate detailed surveys. It is estimated that 40 per cent of the area may be properly excluded from irrigation, leaving 118,000 acres as the probable maximum net area of irrigable lands in the district requiring water.

The source of water supply will be, primarily, Klamath River; secondarily, small streams, tributary to the Klamath, intercepted by the main conduit, and Shasta River and its tributaries.

It is proposed to store surplus water of Klamath River in Lower Klamath Lake in California; in Upper Klamath Lake, Oregon, for which applications have been made to the respective water commissions. Also some smaller sites in Oregon are in contemplation.

Several surveys have been made looking to the irrigation of the valley. The first survey was made by County Surveyor Davidson in 1892. The data of this survey available is very meager.

A reconnaissance was made in 1904 by the U. S. Reclamation Service, which proposed to divert water from the Klamath about 16 miles below Keno. With this canal it was found practicable to irrigate about 58,100 acres. The cost was estimated at $3,784,235.

In 1921 Messrs. Symmes and Means made a survey for the same purpose. Three lines were examined, the selected one beginning a short distance below Keno at elevation 4,081 feet. The total length of the surveyed line was about 42 miles, coming into the valley at an elevation of 3,940 feet. Here it was proposed to drop 800 feet for power.

The area estimated to be irrigable was placed at 75,000 acres. The cost about $4,000,000. No surveys were made about the valley, but it was estimated that a distributing system would cost about $15 an acre, or a total of $72 exclusive of power value.

The proponents of the Shasta Klamath Project have caused surveys to be made of a possible canal route around the valley from the end of the Means Survey. This survey, keeping on a higher level, will enable a much larger area to be covered than was contemplated in the Means or Reclamation Service surveys.

By carrying the main canal on high ground it will be possible to drop water down to the lowlands through power plants.

The natural flow of the Klamath River is only about 350 second-feet in summer.

The California-Oregon Power Company which has a plant on the river about 24 miles below Keno, has entered into a contract with the Reclamation Service to raise the outlet of Upper Klamath Lake so as to regulate the flow. There will be about 1,600,000 acre-feet of regulated flow, of which the Klamath River Project will retain 300,000 acre-feet.

The power company expects to develop 25,000 h.p. from the regulated flow which will amount to about 2,500 second-feet over its dam.

Assuming that the irrigation project will acquire storage rights, and the power company by virtue of its participation with the Reclamation Service will be entitled to enough water to develop 25,000 h.p. at its Copco plant and the district canal will pass some 700 or 800 feet above higher than the Copco plant. By making its diverting canal large enough it can carry sufficient water in excess of its own needs to turn enough down to the power company to produce the power required.

If 118,000 acres are found to be irrigable and say 10,000 acres will demand water at the rate of two acre-feet in 120 days of irrigation period and allowing 25 per cent losses, it will require the delivery of 2,222 acre-feet a day or 1,100 second-feet diverted, leaving 1,400 second-feet for power production which is, with the high head available, about three times the needs of the power company.

There are some applications for power rights on the lower river, but the Water Commission has not reached action upon them.

The project appears feasible. A large body of land is susceptible of high development under irrigation. Klamath River appears to be the only source from which water can be obtained for more land than is already irrigated.

Sufficient data is not at hand to enable an estimate to be made of the probable costs other than the figure referred to above. Many of the landowners expressed the belief that if it were necessary to expand to such of the lands could stand $150 an acre to get a reliable supply of water. No way appears now to finance a very great outlay without governmental aid.

It is proposed to organize a district so as to have a legal organization with power to raise money and then to enlist the Reclamation Service to make the necessary investigations to determine details and feasibility of the project.

Doctor Elwood Mead obtained promise in Washington that the Service would make the investigations if the district could furnish the funds, or part of them. There is now a bill pending in the California Legislature to appropriate money for part of the surveys to be made in cooperation with the Government and others.

It is possible, also that if the project appears to the Reclamation Service to be of sufficient merit, it may become a part of the Klamath Project, which arrangement will greatly simplify any legal complications that will otherwise have to be settled between the district and the State of Oregon and the power companies.

The organization of an irrigation district seems the only way by which a comprehensive investigation can be financed and the landowners being well aware that it is possible that such investigation may show the scheme to be not feasible and would necessitate the dissolution of the district, they are in favor of taking that method of ascertaining, once for all, whether the valley can be irrigated.

The probable cost is not known, and apparently can not be ascertained without a public organization such as an irrigation district. An advantage that may accrue, if Grenada District can be included within the proposed district will be this:

The Grenada District has to pump its water to a great height at a constant expense for power.

With the Shasta District canals at the projected elevation, Grenada District could obtain its water therefrom by gravity and release its own water to irrigate low lands without pumping.

A map is presented whereon is shown the boundaries embraced by the petition and also the boundaries recommended for adoption.

APPENDIX XXII

Statement by Senator Quinn Regarding the Proposed Klamath and Trinity Diversions and Their Effect on the Commercial Fishing, Sport Fishing, and Industrial Opportunities in the Lower Klamath Basin

EFFECT OF THE DIVERSION OF THE TRINITY AND KLAMATH RIVERS TO THE LOWER REGIONS OF THE KLAMATH STREAM IN HUMBOLDT COUNTY AND DEL NORTE COUNTY

This part of the report is confined more to the question of what effect the contemplated diversion of the Klamath River and the Trinity River will have upon fishing, recreation and industry, and what effect such diversion will have upon the climatic conditions and the forests in the lower region of the Klamath and Trinity Rivers that flow through Humboldt, Del Norte and Trinity Counties, which contain most of the areas through which these rivers flow. In other parts of this report the question of unsoundness of said diversion and the fact that it is unnecessary, has been treated.

COMMERCIAL FISHERIES—It has been demonstrated beyond question that the Klamath River waters are the source of most of the salmon found in the Pacific Ocean coastal waters from the Oregon State Line south to Fort Bragg. A very large commercial fishing industry based on the catch of such salmon has been developed, with fishing ports at Eureka, Del Norte, Fort Bragg, and several lesser places along the coast. Humboldt Bay alone is the base of more than 125 fishing boats engaged in this industry. The number of combined ports of Crescent City and Fort Bragg is as great. Most of these fishing boats that catch salmon are manned by one or two and up to four men, they are usually the small fishing boats. The salmon catch is the fish they rely upon to make commercial fishing a profitable business. We find that the production of salmon spawning in the Sacramento River because of the Shasta Dam is doomed. It would take at least two years more to determine whether the salmon in that river can survive and maintain the commercial fishing in the Bay of San Francisco and lower regions of the Sacramento River. If this occurs then the only source of commercial salmon will be from the Klamath River System. There is an investment in commercial fishing equipment in Humboldt Bay of more than a million dollars. The backbone of this industry is the salmon. As to what this means, the report of one small fishing concern, Weissich & Company, produced with 20 boats, 486,902 pounds in the 1944 season, which had a commercial value of $99,814.91. The Consolidated Fisheries for the same season received 440,122 pounds. This is only a small portion of what comes into the Port of Eureka. The Crescent City and Del Norte commercial fisheries produce an income of more than $175,000. The commercial fishing of salmon from the ocean is a million dollar industry and as it now stands it is dependent upon the Klamath River and the Trinity River for spawning grounds. There can be no question but what a 365-foot dam on the Trinity River at Fairview with a 600-foot dam on the upper Klamath would have immediate and serious effect upon the spawning grounds for salmon and steelhead. The chief spawning grounds on the Klamath for salmon extends over those regions below Copco Dam for 100 miles or so. There were statements made to the effect that the flow of the Klamath River would be greatly lessened, as a matter of fact, during the summer months there would be much more water diverted than normally flows down the Klamath. If this were put into effect the result would be that many of the sandbars and areas on the river where the actual spawning takes place, would become exposed and dried up, thereby reducing the spawning area. It has also been demonstrated that even though there is some water left in the river it is more difficult for fish life to survive as the waters become too warm, stagnant in places, and not adapted to spawning life. Beside this, no one knows what further effect the upsetting of the natural conditions on the river would be upon fish life or vegetable life. As to what effect the construction of these dams would have upon the spawning grounds and fish life is now being closely and intimately studied by Dr. Van Cleve, of the Fish and Game Wild Life Commission of the California Fish and Game Commission, and Dr. Taft, of the California Fish and Game Commission, is making a like study on the Trinity River. Their studies have not been completed, but no doubt will be revealing. Already these gentlemen have expressed their unqualified opinions that the construction of these two dams would be disastrous to the salmon industry and the propagation of salmon on those rivers. No one yet has successfully devised a means of taking fish over a dam of a greater height than 100-feet, even that height is scarcely practicable from all reports.

SPORT FISHING—Without question Klamath River from the Copco Dam for two or three hundred miles through the mountains to the sea is one of the most outstanding sport fishing streams of the world, and is famous throughout the world among sportsmen for its salmon and steelhead fishing. Prior to the war thousands came from long distances, many of them clear across the Nation and from foreign countries, to enjoy this sport on this great stream which can accommodate tens of thousands at one time for the enjoyment of fishing. These people are lured to the Klamath River mostly by the famed steelhead. This fishing is best from July on through to the first of November, before the fall rains, and during the driest part of the season, at the very time of the year when the greatest demand for the diversion of the waters would be made. If the waters of the Klamath River were dropped as much as 25 per cent it would be practically ruinous to this type of fishing and is certain to have a damaging effect upon the propagation of steelhead and salmon. This magnificent sport fishing area would be ruined. It would completely stultify that vast area.

Since we have been engaged in the war for so long a period, it is difficult now to present any figures as to what recreation on the Klamath and Trinity Rivers business means, but from figures that were kept prior to the entry into the war, there are some interesting and startling tabulations. There were registered in camps and parks adjacent to the Klamath River during the year 1935, 25,835 families, these families averaging three or four. In addition to this there are hundreds of people who have summer homes scattered along from the mouth to Copco Dam, and it would be no exaggeration to say that at least 100,000 people sought recreation on the Klamath in the year 1935. An interesting feature is that a check in the following year, June and July, 1936, showed an average total increase of 118 per cent, which would mean that the number who enjoyed the Klamath and Trinity River fishing during that year was well over 200,000 people. It is estimated that an investment in resorts and business houses from the mouth of the Klamath to Blue Creek, a distance of about 15 miles, amounting to $729,300 produce an annual income of $577,400. No doubt if it had not been for the war, this recreational industry would have been more than doubled by now, and unquestionably after the war when conditions have settled down, there will develop an industry of large proportions, employing many people and giving great opportunity for small business and other opportunities. We can not emphasize too strongly that the Klamath and Trinity area is destined, if left alone and the waters not taken away, to become one of the greatest recreation areas in the Union, not only bringing pleasure and recreation to hundreds of thousands, but splendid business opportunities and work for thousands. This not only affects the towns and resorts directly along the rivers, but it also affects the business lives of the towns along the Redwood Empire and over the Trinity Highway, over which most of these people must come to reach that great outdoor region. It is part of the economic life of all the counties and cities along the Redwood Empire, contributing much to their prosperity and advancement. This is particularly true of Eureka, which is the most sizeable town of the Klamath and Trinity region. The waters of these streams are our life blood, and the thing that makes the country, and to take it away is to destroy all possibility of future development in those areas. As actual evidence we refer you to the photographs of fishing just inside the mouth of the Klamath River and some about 10 miles up at Klamath Glen.

INDUSTRIAL OPPORTUNITIES—In addition to the great recreational and fishing importance of the Klamath and Trinity Rivers, there is another and a great potential business industry and development in those areas. Lying along the Klamath basin from its very mouth to Copco Dam is a tremendous forest containing an estimated 15,000,000,000 feet of timber which has been practically untouched, is in a virgin state and ready to be harvested. Much of it is still in the National Forest. The only practical means of taking the timber out of this rough country is by floating it down the Klamath and Trinity Rivers. This can not be done in flood times in the winter, but will have to be done in the summer and when it is possible to control the floating of the logs down stream. Under normal conditions the rivers are barely high enough to float the logs down. It is expected that in the flat country near the mouth of the river there will be built many more moderate sized mills. Sawmills, veneer mills, battery mills, pulp and paper products mills, and chemical plants requiring wood for raw materials, and many other kinds of mills to produce wood products. It is a natural place for them. Klamath offers a cheap means of transportation for hundreds of miles up stream, and already some of the mills have been rafting the logs down stream for 25 miles or more. Rafting from far up the stream is possible and the floating of pulp wood is possible for practically the entire distance. This rafting is not continued in the winter time or when the streams are flooded, nor is it done when the water is too low. Consequently the period for floating is determined by the end of the flood season and period of low water in late summer. There is testimony to the effect that now in late summer there is barely enough water in the river to float the logs over the rapids. There is no doubt but what there will be a large scale timber product development on the Klamath River, and the only feasible way of taking timber out of the mountains to the mills is by floating them down the Klamath River. The terrain of the country is very rough, to build roads through much of this country is impossible and at least it would be tremendously expensive. This is an industry that will require the investment of millions of dollars for plants and equipment, and the employment of thousands of men in the mills and woods. There is no doubt that if not interfered with the lower Klamath River and the town of Klamath will in time be made a permanent wood conversion and mill center. The large scale development is still a matter for the future, and is certain to develop unless by the proposed diversion of the Klamath and Trinity Rivers the normal flow of the waters down Klamath River is interfered with. Certainly there can be no justification for taking away these waters and the destroying of such an industry as this, and the possibility of destroying the sporting life and recreation of those rivers. Why should this area be sacrificed for some other area that does not need the water, and even if it did, where is the justification? It is just a wrong assumption of power. The people who have pioneered in developing the vast area along and adjacent to the Klamath River have staked their fortunes and lives in many endeavors along and near the lower Klamath. They did so upon the assumption and with never a thought that some day their most essential and important natural resource would be taken away from them, namely the diversion of the Klamath and Trinity Rivers. Without the slightest doubt this area will develop in business, recreation and population far beyond anything that even its own people have visualized. But these diversions would stop it. What right has any man, or section, or group to stop this. Above all, what right, morally, legally or otherwise, has one section of our State for its benefit to take from another section those natural resources and advantages that God gave it? What right has an agency of the government to tell the people of this area that you can not hope for any future; that we will take what you have, your subsistence, hope, and future? That is what you propose. It is wrong and can not be sustained on any ground. To a man, over a hundred thousand people who live in this area are unalterably opposed to it, and additional hundreds of thousands who use those great rivers for recreational purposes, are opposed to it. This diversion must never happen.

APPENDIX XXIII

Summary Statement by Senator Collier Showing Need of Water in the Klamath River Watershed for the Beneficial Purposes of Agriculture, Fish and Wildlife, Lumbering, and Mining

We find that there is a beneficial need of the waters of the Klamath Watershed in its basin for the following industries.

(a) AGRICULTURE:

1. Sprague River and Upper Klamath Basin.
2. Modoc County.
3. Tulare Lake.
4. "J. & F." and "D" Ranches.

These make a total of 628,000 acres of land. I refer you to the report of the Klamath County Chamber of Commerce.

5. 60,000 acres of land in Butte Valley.

There will be at least 140 feet from the Klamath River into this valley. The electric power from the Butte Valley will soon be delivered to Klamath Falls, Oregon, and certainly the electric power for this project could be purchased from the Butte Valley source at one mill per kilowatt-hour. This is very feasible and there should be a development undertaken by the Bureau of Reclamation. The Bureau of Reclamation has done a very fine job in the river diversion around Klamath Falls, Oregon, and Tulelake, California.

6. In Judge Allen's report it is shown that there are more than 60,000 acres to be irrigated in Shasta Valley, Siskiyou County, California, around the town of Montague, Big Springs, Grenada district, and the town of Yreka and vicinity.

We recommend that the Bureau of Reclamation undertakes an investigation as to the feasibility of the diversion of the Shasta Valley area along with the feasibility of the diversion of the Butte County area.

(b) FISH AND WILD LIFE

1. Sportsmen.

The following is a release of the California Fish and Game Commission as of February 5, 1945:

The following is a copy of the resolutions that the California Fish and Game Commission passed at its meeting in Sacramento on January 12, 1945:

Meeting in Sacramento, January 12, 1945, the California State Fish and Game Commission passed the following resolutions opposing the diversion of waters from the Klamath and Trinity Rivers:

WHEREAS, The United States Army Engineers are planning to divert all water from the Klamath River that rises above Spencer Creek into the Sacramento drainage through the Pit River; and

WHEREAS, Both the United States Army Engineers and the United States Bureau of Reclamation are planning to divert all water from the Trinity River above Fairview into the Sacramento River at Keswick; and

WHEREAS, In 1924 the people of the State of California adopted an initiative establishing the Klamath River District which prohibited for all time the construction or maintenance of any dam or artificial construction in the Klamath River below the mouth of the Shasta River; and

WHEREAS, Such diversion of the waters of the Klamath River nullify the above initiative; and

WHEREAS, These diversions would adversely affect the productivity of the Klamath and Trinity Rivers in terms of fish life and would thereby destroy one of the principal recreational values of this area; and

WHEREAS, The Klamath and Trinity Rivers are one of the few remaining primitive recreational areas in this State; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Fish and Game Commission of the State of California shall oppose such diversions of water from the Klamath and Trinity Rivers into the Sacramento watershed until such time as it has been demonstrated that such diversion is essential to the State of California; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the Secretary of the Interior, United States Army Engineers, United States Bureau of Reclamation, all members of the United States Congress and all members of the State Legislature.

If the proposed diversion of waters came to pass, it would destroy some of the best fishing in this State. With the probable increase in population in California after the war, recreational areas will assume much greater importance than they hold even now. The Klamath and Trinity River drainages include some of the finest recreational possibilities in this State, if not on the West Coast, and their value in terms of recreational possibilities in this State, if not on the West Coast, and their value in terms of recreation will be far greater to the State than will be the value of the power that will be generated from their diverted waters.

The following is a letter and statements furnished the committee by Mr. A. C. Taft, Chief, Bureau of Fish Conservation of the California Division of Fish and Game:

February 13, 1945

Senator Randolph Collier
Yreka, California

DEAR SENATOR COLLIER: As you requested, I am sending you herewith our estimate of the amount of fish taken and the number of fishermen participating in the angling on the Klamath River during the last prewar year for which figures are available, e.g. 1941.

There are no satisfactory data available as to the total value of the business directly or indirectly resulting from the recreational fishing on the Klamath.

Through a questionnaire sent by the California Division of Fish and Game to approximately 10 per cent of the licensed anglers in the State the following data as to the number of anglers and the fish caught by them in the Klamath River and tributaries, exclusive of the Trinity, are available for the year 1941.

TABLE I

Estimated catch of salmon and trout by legal anglers in the Klamath River System in California, excluding the Trinity River drainage, based on the year 1941

Number of Anglers 9,000	Licensed Anglers		Number of Fish Caught 666,000
	Number of Fish Caught 64,000	Number of Anglers 12,800
	Legal Unlicensed Anglers (Persons Under 18)
500	2,000	1,900	76,000
9,500	66,000	14,700	742,000

NOTE: Figures for anglers are not mutually exclusive by species; i.e., anglers catching both salmon and trout are included in each total. It is estimated that the true total of individual licensees fishing for trout and salmon, after eliminating all such duplications, is 16,000 and of legal unlicensed anglers 1,900.

There are no duplications in figures for numbers of fish caught.

Table II which follows is designed to show the ration between resident and out-of-county anglers for all watersheds in the three counties in which the Klamath lies and the relationship should be very nearly the same for the Klamath if it could be taken separately. Approximately two out of three anglers came from outside the counties named above.

TABLE II

Total number of resident angling licensees in Del Norte, Humboldt and Siskiyou Counties, by actual count. Compared with estimated numbers of anglers catching salmon and trout in those counties. Based on the year 1941

County	Number of resident angling licensees in the county by actual count	Estimated number of anglers catching salmon and trout in the county
Del Norte -----	579	8,400
Humboldt -----	5,418	11,200
Siskiyou -----	4,050	8,340
	10,047	27,940

NOTE: This comparison includes all watersheds in each county. However, the ration between resident and out-of-county anglers on the Klamath River System should be very nearly the same, and it is believed that approximately two out of every three anglers on the Klamath River System come from outside the counties through which it flows.

For purposes of evaluation if it is assumed that each out-of-county angler spends a two weeks vacation in the Klamath area and that local anglers spend an equivalent time in more frequent trips of shorter duration and each individual spent on an average $200, the conservative figure of $3,200,000 is obtained for the value of the annual pre-war recreational angling on the Klamath River.

Yours very truly,

(signed)

A. C. TAFT

Chief, Bureau of Fish Conservation

Practically all fish and game groups are against this proposed diversion and we quote herewith the following telegram from H. Clyde Amesbury, President of the Northern California Sportsmen's Association.

"The Northern California Sportsmen's Association strongly oppose the diversion of Klamath River water to Pit watershed.

We can see no reason for such action when so many areas capable of storing water are undeveloped in Sacramento Basin.

California will as time passes have reason to place a much higher value on recreational resources of Klamath Basin. To a certain extent, the necessity for additional water may be met by substitution among several possibilities. If the Klamath is ruined, there is no substitute. If the stream flow below the Copeo is stabilized, we could anticipate that the stream would be restored to its original capabilities of fish production for both sport and food.

To divert the Klamath would betray the men in our fighting forces and generations of Californians yet unborn."

In 1924 there was submitted by the initiative and approved by electors on November 4, 1924, and became effective December 17, 1924, the following initiative act.

"Initiative act to create the Klamath River Fish and Game District, and prohibit the construction or maintenance of any dam or other artificial obstruction in the waters of said district, provide penalties and declare such obstructions a public nuisance.

"The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

"SECTION 1. The Klamath River Fish and Game District is hereby created and shall consist of the Klamath River and the waters thereof, following its meanderings from the confluence of the Klamath River and the Shasta River in the County of Siskiyou to the mouth of the Klamath River in Del Norte County.

"SEC. 2. Every person, firm, corporation or company who constructs or maintains any dam or other artificial obstruction in any of the waters of said Klamath River Fish and Game District is guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction must be fined not less than five hundred dollars ($500) or be imprisoned in the county jail of the county in which the conviction shall be had, not less than 100 days, or by both such fine and imprisonment, and any artificial obstruction constructed, placed or maintained in said district is hereby declared to be a public nuisance." (Page xciii, Statutes 1925.)

The above and foregoing show that the sportsmen of California do not in any way wish the waters of the Klamath River Watershed to be diverted because they feel that any one of the three schemes presented by the Corps of Army Engineers would be detrimental and disastrous to the fish life of said stream forever. The people of California have taken a personal interest in the Klamath River and believe that it should be set aside forever as a recreational and fishing stream for the people.

I think that the committee in its hearings have found conclusively that this would be the case.

In the hearings of the committee it was shown that the building of dams on the Sacramento River and the Klamath River and in the diversion of the proposed minimum of 600 cubic feet per second of the waters of the Klamath that it would be very disastrous to the commercial fishing on the Pacific Coast of California. It was first shown that approximately one-half of the commercial salmon caught off the California

Pacific Coast were raised in the Sacramento River and one-half were raised in the Klamath River. It was shown that if it was not for the commercial salmon there would not be any commercial fishing off the California Pacific coast, for the reason that the commercial fisher depends on the salmon for his livelihood and the other fish caught are only incidental to his purpose. It would mean that the commercial fishing business up the California Pacific Coast as an industry would be gone forever from California. The CIO is out to protect the commercial fishing industry by taking a very definite and positive stand against the building of the Table Mountain Dam on the Sacramento River and the three schemes for the diversion and building of dams on the Klamath River Watershed for the reason that they believe that commercial fishing will be destroyed forever. The following figures are presented herewith to show the value of the commercial catch of salmon on the Klamath River for the year prior to 1934 when it was closed forever but these figures are not the figures for the commercial catch off the California Pacific Coast.

Year	Pounds	Year	Pounds
1916 -----	801,150	1925 -----	956,082
1917 -----	265,537	1926 -----	811,714
1918 -----	672,345	1927 -----	408,081
1919 -----	535,198	1928 -----	308,826
1920 -----	872,295	1929 -----	321,502

(c) LUMBERING

For many years the waters of the Klamath have been used to transport logs by floating them downstream to mills for the production of lumber. Lumber at this time is one of the critical needs. There have been seven new mills put into operation on the lower Klamath. The logs for these mills come to them by being floated downstream.

(d) MINING

The committee heard from Walter W. Bradley, State Mineralogist, and he has supplied the following information to the committee:

Figures on employment in the accompanying table are from the census of 1940, and represent direct employment only. Our Bulletin 130, "Economic Mineral Resources and Production in California; A Survey With Reference to Postwar Employment," by Samuel H. Dolbear and others, now in the hands of the State Printer, shows that a dependency factor of 2.735 applies to all industry in California. Using this factor, we find that in 1940 in Del Norte, Humboldt, Siskiyou, and Trinity Counties, 4,141 persons were directly dependent on mining, including the miners themselves. If you want to go still further and estimate the number both directly and indirectly dependent on mining, you can double this last figure, because 50 per cent of the population of the United States is indirectly dependent on the primary industries. This would include retailers, barbers, and other such service industries.

Gold mining would be more adversely affected than any other type of mining by any decrease in the flow of the Klamath and Trinity Rivers. Hence figures on gold-production have been kept separate in the attached table. Winter flood-waters are needed to transport the tailing down the rivers, and a large flow is desirable in summer to reduce turbidity to amounts allowed by law. Numbers of laws relating to this matter follow:

DEFINITION OF TRINITY AND KLAMATH RIVER FISH AND GAME DISTRICTS.
Fish and Game Code, Section 97.

Prohibiting hydraulic mining in above district between July 1st and Nov. 30th, and fixing allowable turbidity at a point one mile below the confluence of the Klamath River and the Salmon River or at a point one mile below the confluence of the South Fork of the Trinity River and the Trinity River at 50 parts per million.

Fish and Game Code, Section 482

WALTER W. BRADLEY, State Mineralogist

County	Gold production	Production Other minerals	No. of persons employed	List of minerals other than gold produced
Del Norte -----	$1,750	$22,939	26	Chromite, platinum, silver, miscellaneous stone.
Humboldt -----	20,685	112,905	79	Brick, natural gas, chromite, clay, miscellaneous stone, silver.
Siskiyou -----	2,068,815	150,388	899	Copper, mineral water, platinum, pumice, silver, scoria, miscellaneous stone.
Trinity -----	1,730,155	42,172	510	Chromite, copper, lead, coal, manganese ore, platinum, quicksilver, silver, miscellaneous stone.
Totals -----	$3,821,405 328,404	$328,404	1,514

Gold mining has been the principal industry in the Klamath and Trinity River Districts in Siskiyou and Trinity Counties for over 65 years. Constant improvement in mining methods and particularly the development of dragline dredges, bulldozers, carryalls and diesel power, together with the increase in the price of gold, has made it profitable to rework old tailings and smaller and lower grade deposits. Gold production was at an annual rate of more than $3,800,000 when the dredges were closed by government order L-208 in 1942, in spite of the fact that they were compelled to shut down during the dry season from July 1st, to November 30th, of each year by the Fish and Game Code, Section 482.

Large areas on both sides of the Klamath and Trinity Rivers are still unmapped geologically and they have scarcely been explored or prospected. Deposits of copper, chromite, gold quartz, graphite, manganese, quicksilver, iron ores, etc. await access roads, electric power and development of Pacific Coast markets.

Mining can and will continue to be a very important industry, giving employment to increasing numbers of men.

Any diversion of the Klamath or Trinity Rivers from their present natural channels will almost surely shut down the hydraulic and dredging properties and it will certainly jeopardize the development of the mineral deposits which are such an important natural resource in this area.

MESSAGES FROM THE GOVERNOR

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE

SACRAMENTO 14, June 4, 1945

*To the Honorable Members of the Senate,
State of California
Sacramento, California*

GREETINGS: I am returning herewith, without my signature, Senate Bill No. 64, entitled: "An act to amend Section 4242 of the Political Code, relating to compensation for public service in counties of the thirteenth class."

My objections to this bill are as follows:

This bill is a county government bill increasing the salaries of certain county officers in counties of the thirteenth class (Tulare County). It duplicates the provisions of Senate Bill No. 703 which included this county among several others. The author of this bill advises me that it was passed inadvertently and that there is no purpose to be served by permitting it to become law.

I am accordingly returning it without my approval.

Respectfully submitted.

COMMUNICATIONS

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE

SACRAMENTO, May 2, 1945

Honorable Ralph E. Swing, Member of the Senate

*Senate Chambers, State Capitol
Sacramento, California*

DEAR SENATOR: I have your letter of May 2, 1945, with which you enclose to me a copy of re-drafted amendments to Senate Bill No. 625.

I think these should be introduced in the manner agreed to yesterday. I think that the fund should be called "The Post-War Unemployment and Construction Fund."

Based on our understanding of yesterday I issued my press releases which were perused by you or the members of your group before they were released. I think it would be a mistake to change at this time.

You will recall that the proposed amendments as originally submitted to me referred to the fund as "The Special Post-War Unemployment Fund." It was my thought that inasmuch as construction would probably play so large a part in the use of the fund, it should be named "The Post-War Unemployment and Construction Fund." Certainly the prime purport of the fund is the alleviation of unemployment and not merely construction. I therefore think that to properly express this, the name should be retained as agreed to yesterday.

The proposed amendments handed to me without the change which has been made in ink set forth my understanding, and in that form are satisfactory to me.

Sincerely,

EARL WARREN, Governor

SENATE CHAMBER, RALPH E. SWING

SACRAMENTO, May 3, 1945

To the Members of the Senate

In Re: Senate Bill No. 625

GENTLEMEN: During the last few days the authors of Senate Bill No. 625 have had a number of conferences with the Governor and with Members of the Senate and Assembly relative to a program which will carry into effect the Governor's plan for tax reduction, and which also makes available for appropriation by the Legislature the sum of $90,000,000 to alleviate unemployment in all parts of the State. Inasmuch as the proposed program involves substantial changes in Senate Bill No. 625, we feel that it is but fair that you have before you the substance of our understanding of the program which has been tentatively agreed to. This program, as we understand it, is in substance as follows:

The members who participated in such conferences agreed they would cooperate in the enacting of legislation which will carry into effect the proposed tax reductions recommended by the Governor; also that Senate Bill No. 625 will be amended by striking out all of the material provisions of the bill and insert in lieu thereof language substantially as follows:

The sum of ninety million dollars ($90,000,000) out of unappropriated moneys in the State Treasury is hereby set aside and transferred in the State Treasury to the Postwar Unemployment and Construction Fund, which fund is hereby created and established. No money shall be expended from or withdrawn from said fund except and only when appropriated by the Legislature for public works projects and public improvements which will provide employment of citizens released from the armed forces following the cessation of war, and which public works projects and public improvements will create employment in various parts of the State and thus prevent and alleviate unemployment in all parts of the State.

The Legislature shall have the exclusive power to allocate, appropriate and provide for the expenditure of all or any part of the fund hereby created for any public works projects or public improvements in which the State shall have an interest, and will aid in preventing or alleviating unemployment in all parts of the State following the cessation of the war.

The language in the bill expresses the broad purposes for which the money may be used, but the specific purposes and projects will be determined by the Legislature at the time the money is actually allocated and appropriated.

There are no strings attached to the money set up in said fund and all of it can be used for any public works project in any part of the State, either within or without the incorporated area of any county, so long as it is within the scope of the language used in the bill and approved by the Legislature.

The Governor stated in the event a special session of the Legislature is called to appropriate money for public works projects or public construction to meet postwar conditions, he will so word the special call that it will be broad enough in its scope to permit allocations and appropriations from the fund created and set up under the amended Senate Bill No. 625. To use his language, he said, "I will throw the door wide open."

We believe that this is a very satisfactory solution of the controversial subjects which are pending before the Legislature.

We believe the carrying out of this program will result in a continuation of the harmonious relations which have at all times prevailed between the Legislature and the Chief Executive.

Respectfully,

RALPH E. SWING
BEN HULSE
GEO. E. HATFIELD

If such disability resulted from injury or disease arising out of and in the course of his employment, upon the death of the member his disability retirement allowance shall continue to be paid to his surviving wife as long as she lives or until her remarriage; or if there is no widow, or if the widow dies or remarries before all children of the deceased member attain age 18, to his children under 18 collectively until every child dies or attains age 18."

Amendment No. 11

On page 4 of said bill, between lines 42 and 43, insert
"SEC. 18. (a) Any benefit payable by this system because of the death or retirement of any member as a result of any injury or illness arising out of and in course of employment shall be reduced in the manner hereinafter provided by the amounts of any benefits other than medical benefits payable to, or on account of, such member under any workmen's compensation law of the State of California because of death or disability resulting in retirement.

(b) If benefits under any workmen's compensation law run concurrently with the benefits hereunder and are due to the beneficiary in payments which are equal to, or less than, the benefits payable by this system, then the benefits payable by this system shall be reduced each month by the amount of said benefit, so due said month, and the beneficiary shall have no more right to such reduction than if this retirement system had never existed.

(c) If benefits under any workmen's compensation law run concurrently with benefits hereunder, and are due to the beneficiary in payments which are greater than the benefits payable by this system, then the benefits payable by this system shall be withheld until the total of the amounts so withheld equals the total of said benefits paid, and the beneficiary shall have no more right to the amounts withheld, than if this retirement system had never existed.

(d) It is the purpose of the foregoing provisions to reduce the benefits payable under this act by the amounts of benefits, other than medical benefits, due to the beneficiary concurrently with, such benefits under any workmen's compensation law, and the payment before due date by the commutation (through compromise or otherwise), of such workmen's compensation benefits, shall not prevent the reduction of benefits payable under this act in the amounts which would have been payable concurrently with the benefits payable under this act in the absence of such commutation regardless of the person receiving such payments.

(e) If any benefits other than medical benefits have been paid under any workmen's compensation law because of a permanent disability concurrently with payments of wages or salary, to said beneficiary, then payment of benefits payable under this act shall be withheld until the total of the amounts so withheld shall equal the total of such benefits paid because of the permanent disability, and the beneficiary shall have no more rights to such amounts withheld than if this retirement system had never existed. Benefits which are payable for time during which the salary is not paid and prior to the date benefits become payable under this act shall not be considered hereunder.

SEC. 19. As used in this act, "State Fund" means the State Compensation Insurance Fund.

SEC. 20. If benefits are payable under this act because of an injury to or the death of a member and such injury or death is the proximate consequence of the act of a person other than his employer, the board may on behalf of this system recover from such person an amount which is the actuarial equivalent of the benefits which are provided by this system and for which this system is liable because of such injury or death.

SEC. 21. The board may contract with the State Fund for the recovery by the State Fund on behalf of this system of any amounts which the board might recover from third persons under this act, or Chapter 5, Part 1, Division 4 of the Labor Code, or which an insurer might recover under Section 11662 of the Insurance Code, or otherwise.

SEC. 22. Under such contract, the State Fund, in its own name or in the name of the board, may, to recover such amounts, commence and prosecute actions, file liens, or intervene in court proceedings. The State Fund may compromise claims before or after commencement of suit for such amount as may be approved by a person duly authorized by the board for such purpose. The agreed cost of such service and the expense incidental thereto is a proper charge against the contracting agency by which a local member was employed.

SEC. 23. Any amount recovered by way of subrogation by the employer, workmen's compensation insurer or this system shall be applied first to the amounts which the employer or its insurer has paid or become obligated to pay, and second to the amounts which this system has paid or become obligated to pay.

SEC. 24. Net amounts recovered from third persons under this act shall be paid by this system to the contracting agency by which the member was employed.

SEC. 25. Upon the death before retirement of a member while in fire service, or within four months after discontinuance of fire service, or while physically or mentally incapacitated for the performance of his duty, if such incapacity has been continuous from discontinuance of fire service, this system is liable for either the basic or special death benefit.

SEC. 26. The basic death benefit is payable in all cases where the special death benefit is not payable.

The basic death benefit shall consist of an amount equal to one-twelfth of the annual compensation earnable by the deceased during the 12 months immediately preceding his death, multiplied by the number of completed years of service under the system, but not to exceed one-half of such compensation.

A member or his beneficiary, after death of the member, may elect by a writing filed with the board to have the basic death benefit paid in monthly installments, fixed in number or amount, subject to such rules as the board may adopt. Regular interest shall be credited on the unpaid balance of such benefit.

SEC. 27. The special death benefit is payable if the death was the result of injury or disease arising out of and in the course of his employment in fire service, as determined by the Industrial Accident Commission and if there is a wife or child who qualifies under subdivision (b), Section 28.

SEC. 28. The special death benefit consists of:

(a) The basic death benefit; and

(b) An amount sufficient, when added to the basic death benefit, to provide, when applied according to tables adopted by the board, a monthly death allowance, equal to one-half of the average compensation earnable by the deceased during the five years immediately preceding his death, payable to the surviving wife to whom he was married prior to sustaining the injury or disease resulting in death, as long as she lives or until her remarriage; or if there is no widow, or if the widow dies or remarries before all children of the deceased member attain age 18, to his children under 18 collectively until every child dies or attains 18.

SEC. 29. The special death benefit shall be paid in monthly installments to the surviving wife and children as prescribed in Section 28.

SEC. 30. If payment of the special death benefit is stopped because of remarriage of the widow or attainment of the age of 18 years by a child, before the sum of the monthly payment made equals the basic death benefit, a lump sum equal to the difference shall be paid the remarried widow, or if there is no widow, to the surviving children of the deceased member, share and share alike.

SEC. 31. In the absence of an application to the Industrial Accident Commission, filed by a proper party, the board shall proceed with the payment of the basic death benefit. If the Industrial Accident Commission determines on the basis of such an application subsequently filed, that death was the result of injury or disease arising out of and in the course of his employment in fire service, an amount equal to the benefit shall be deducted from the special death benefit.

SEC. 32. If a beneficiary is not designated, or if the estate is the beneficiary and the estate would not be probated if no amount were due from this system, all of the amount due by reason of the death of a member or retired member, including retirement allowances accrued but not received prior to death, shall be paid directly without probate to the surviving next of kin of the deceased or the guardians of such survivors' estates, share and share alike.

Such payment shall be made in the same order in which the following groups are listed:

1. Husband or wife,
2. Children,
3. Father and mother,
4. Grandchildren,
5. Brothers and sisters,
6. Nieces and nephews.

SEC. 33. No payment shall be made to persons included in any group if at the date of payment there are living persons in any of the groups preceding it, as listed. Payment to the persons in any group, upon receipt from them of an affidavit upon a form supplied by the board, that there are no living individuals in the groups preceding it and that the estate of the deceased will not be probated, is in full discharge of the board and system on account of the death.

SEC. 34. If the estate of the deceased member is his beneficiary, or if no beneficiary has been designated by him, or if the designated beneficiary can not be found by the board, it may in its discretion pay to the funeral director who conducted the funeral, or to any person or organization that has paid the funeral director from his or the organization's funds, all or a portion of any amount payable under this system, but not more than the expenses of the funeral or the portion of such expenses paid by the person or organization, as evidenced by the sworn itemized statement of the funeral director and by such other documents as the board may require. Payment so made is a full discharge of the board and system for the amount so paid.

SEC. 35. In the event of termination of membership by a member upon termination of his employment as a fireman, there shall be paid to him any accumulated contributions he has made to this system, together with the interest credited thereto.

SEC. 36. In the event of the termination of membership of a member upon termination of the contract of the public agency by which he is employed with the board, all amounts held by this system on his account, whether contributed by him, by the public agency by which he is employed, or by the State, together with the interest thereon, shall be paid to the person whose membership is so terminated."

To the Hon. Earl Warren, Governor, and to the Legislature of the State of California

The California Commission on Interstate Cooperation, in accordance with the provisions of Section 8009 in the Government Code providing for the submission of reports at such times as the commission deems appropriate, respectfully submits this special report relative to pending Federal aid airport legislation.

We invite your earnest attention to the contents thereof, and in particular to the proposed resolution which we urge the Legislature to adopt before adjournment.

ROBERT W. KENNY, Chairman

SPECIAL REPORT OF THE CALIFORNIA COMMISSION ON INTERSTATE COOPERATION RELATIVE TO PENDING FEDERAL AID AIRPORT LEGISLATION

From time to time this commission has taken upon itself the responsibility of calling to the attention of the Governor and the Legislature particular matters of Federal-State concern in which the State should take an active and definite stand.

One of the more important problems now facing Congress is that of Federal aid for airports and the method by which such aid should be made available by the Federal Government to the various States and their political subdivisions. Having in mind the valuable experience developed over a period of 30 years between the Federal Government and the States in establishing and promoting cooperative programs in such fields as agriculture, highways, public health, social security, and vocational education which have, in the main, followed a "Federal-State" pattern, we wish to view with alarm and express our opposition to certain proposed bills now before Congress which would seek to by-pass the well-established "Federal-State" pattern on Federal aid for airports.

It must be remembered that in embarking upon a Federal aid program for airports Congress is starting a new venture of long range implication and large-scale costs to the public. We are not unmindful that up until recently the Federal Government has allocated funds direct to municipalities or has itself engaged in the construction of airport facilities as under the WPA program. However, relatively few cities, usually those with large commercial airports, have been the beneficiaries thereof, and where Federal moneys have been expended it has been on a direct grant basis. This "Federal-city" experience, therefore, is not a valid basis upon which to determine the possible success of any Federal aid airport program developed in any other manner than through the established, well-tried "Federal-State" method.

In this view we are supported by such National organizations as the Council of State Governments, the Governor's Conference, the National Association of State Aviation Officials, and the United States Chamber of Commerce, all of whom have opposed the "Federal-city" plan of Federal aid for airports embodied in the compromise version of S. 2, known as the McCarran Bill, which would allocate up to 35 per cent of Federal aid for "urban" projects, Class 3 airports or larger, and the remainder for "State" projects, Class 2 or smaller. These groups, as well as your commission, are also unalterably opposed to H.R. 3170, known as the Lea Bill, which goes even farther than the McCarran Bill in permitting the Civil Aeronautics Administration to deal directly with any and all non-Federal public agencies without reference to State Governments.

We are not merely basing our opposition to these bills because they depart from the long-established practice of channelling Federal aid through the States followed since 1916 when the original Federal Aid Highway Act was enacted. On the contrary, as the United States Chamber of Commerce points out, from the all-important viewpoint of securing good administration, progressive technical development and sound financing, we believe the long-range advantages of building up the States' part in the airport system very closely parallel the similar advantages that have been derived from their active part in the highway field. The airplane has no monopoly on the crossing of State lines. Automobiles, trucks, and buses by the thousands are daily passing through many different States on trips over the interstate system of highways. In addition, although the primary emphasis up to now has been on the interstate aspects of air transportation, in the future the primary objective of Federal aid airport programs should be to meet all needs including those of fixed-base operations and personal flying. Further, the great technical advances in highway work which have been the outgrowth of the cooperative State-Federal highway planning surveys may well form the basis for similar action in the airport field.

One of the most important reasons why the "Federal-State" pattern should be preserved in the airport field is the fact that it will be conducive to better coordination not only in the development of airports which should be built to serve the municipalities and the States as well as the Nation, but in the elimination of unrestrained competition between municipalities for Federal allotments which, it must be observed, would go in large part to the largest cities under a "Federal-city" pattern.

A completely Federally dominated system as contemplated by H.R. 3170 and an implied Federally dominated system as provided under the terms of S. 2 as far as its "urban" program is concerned would create a serious departure from the traditional Federal aid pattern by their development of the theory of primary financial responsibility by the Federal Government. The fact that States have the basic taxing powers, and municipalities generally finance airport work by bond issues, which in many cases are already too high, leads only to the conclusion that it would be only a matter of time before the Federal Government will be called upon for increased contributions for local airport construction. The fact that the State of California may also be called upon to assist municipalities in airport work because of their local financial condition is indicated by the tenor of present legislation being actively supported by the municipalities before the California Legislature. We should further like to point out that the Governor of Massachusetts joined with the other 47 Governors in urging Congress to retain a "Federal-State" pattern for airport aid, and that as the recent Mayor of Boston he had observed the State of Massachusetts taking over the Boston airport because of its financial difficulties.

For these reasons we have prepared a draft of a proposed Joint Resolution which we would like very much for the Legislature to adopt in order that the National groups already mentioned may be supported in their efforts to maintain certain governmental practices in the field of Federal aid in this most important postwar National airport program.

Proposed Joint Resolution

RELATIVE TO MEMORIALIZING CONGRESS TO AMEND PENDING FEDERAL AID AIRPORT LEGISLATION TO PROVIDE FOR THE CHANNELLING OF FUNDS ENTIRELY ON A "FEDERAL-STATE" BASIS

WHEREAS, There are now pending in the Congress of the United States certain bills intended to establish a National system of airports; and

WHEREAS, One bill, H.R. 3170, known as the Lea Bill, provides for a ten-year program of Federal airport aid totalling $650,000,000 under which the Civil Aeronautics Administration would deal with any and all non-Federal agencies without reference to State Governments; and

WHEREAS, Another bill, S. 2, known as the McCarran Bill, and which, in its present form, represents a compromise between the various proponents of certain other Federal aid airport bills, provides for the allotment of 35 per cent of Federal funds direct to large municipalities under a so-called "urban" program, and the remainder of Federal funds through the States under the so-called "State" program; and

WHEREAS, Either bill in its present form would be a serious departure from the traditional "Federal-State" aid pattern so successfully developed and administered in such fields as agriculture, highways, public health, social security, and vocational education; and

WHEREAS, Either bill, as presently written, would result in a serious lack of proper coordination on airport planning and excessive competition between municipalities for Federal aid; and

WHEREAS, The indicated postwar financial conditions of municipalities would require them under the terms of these bills, as now written, to rely increasingly upon Federal contributions with consequent commensurate Federal control; and

WHEREAS, The Council of State Governments, the Governors' Conference, the National Association of State Aviation Officials, and the United States Chamber of Commerce have joined in opposing the projected method of allocation on the grounds that it is unnecessary, that it would complicate any sound plan for a National airport system and would be likely to result in many abuses, particularly in the direction of increasing friction between the States and such of their political subdivisions as might be eligible for direct aid thereunder; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly and Senate of the State of California, jointly, That the Legislature of the State of California hereby memorializes and respectfully urges the Congress, to provide in any plan that it may adopt in aid of the establishment and development of a National airport system, that grants in aid be made only to the several States, and that no part of such grants be made direct to municipalities, no matter how large, in derogation of State interests and authorities; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this Joint Resolution be transmitted to the President of the United States, to the President of the Senate, to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to each of the Senators and Representatives of this State in Congress.

Senate Resolution No. 130

Relative to the Creation of a Senate Fact-Finding Committee on Un-American Activities in California to Investigate the Activity of Persons and Groups Known or Suspected to Be Foreign Dominated or Controlled and to Recommend Legislation for Their Regulation

WHEREAS, These are yet times of public danger. Subversive persons and groups are endangering our domestic unity so as to leave us unprepared to resist attack from without and within. Under color of the protection afforded by the Bill of Rights these persons and groups seek to destroy our freedom by force, violence, threats, undermining and sabotage, and to subject us to the domination of foreign powers and ideologies; and

WHEREAS, There is danger that the ordeal through which the country has suffered to keep the pursuit of its ideals free may be in vain; and

WHEREAS, Persons and groups, motivated by hatred of American ideals, our republican form of government and democratic processes, some bound together by allegiance to foreign powers, are even now seeking to achieve by subversion what we have so valiantly fought to sustain from force; and

WHEREAS, California, as one of the laboratories of this great Nation, may profitably study the problem within its boundaries, and enact pertinent legislation therein, if facts are available therefor; and

WHEREAS, State legislation to meet the problem and to assist law enforcement officers can best be based on a thorough and impartial investigation by a competent and active legislative committee, now, therefore, be it

The Joint Fact-Finding Committee on Un-American Activities is hereby created, authorized, appointed and directed to investigate, ascertain, collate, appraise, study and analyze all facts directly or indirectly relating to the foregoing, including any facts causing or constituting interference with the National defense program or the war effort in California or rendering the people of the State, as a part of the Nation, less fit physically, mentally, morally, economically or socially.

In addition to other duties imposed upon the committee, the committee shall investigate and study the activities of groups and organizations whose membership include persons who are members of organizations who have as their objectives, or part of their objectives, the overthrow of the governments of the State of California or of the United States by force and violence or other unlawful means; to investigate and study all organizations known or suspected to be dominated or controlled by a foreign power which activities affect the conduct of this State in National defense or in its war effort, the functioning of any State agency, unemployment relief and other forms of public assistance, educational institutions of this State supported in whole or in part by public funds, or any political program, or which may affect the conversion of the State from a wartime economy to a peacetime economy or affect the economic and social problems incidental thereto, including but not limited to the operation, effect, administration, enforcement and needed revision of any and all laws in any way bearing upon or relating to the subject of this resolution, and to report thereon to the Legislature.

3. In addition to the foregoing, the Joint Fact-Finding Committee on Un-American Activities is authorized and directed to ascertain, study and analyze all facts relating to the activities of persons and groups known or suspected to be dominated or controlled by a foreign power, and who owe allegiance thereto because of religious, racial, political, ideological, philosophical, or other ties, including but not limited to the influence upon all such persons and groups of education, economic circumstances, social positions, fraternal and casual associations, living standards, race, religion, political, ancestry and the activities of paid provocation and any other factors which may account for their conduct or condition their action, as well as the operation, effect, administration, enforcement and needed revision of any and all laws in any way bearing upon or relating to the subject of this resolution.

(c) To adopt and from time to time amend such rules governing its procedure (including the fixing of its own quorum and the number of votes necessary to take action on any matter) as may to it appear appropriate.

10. Every department, commission, board, agency, officer and employee of the State Government, including the Legislative Counsel, the Attorney General and their subordinates, and of any political subdivision, county, city, or public district of or in this State shall furnish the committee and any subcommittee, upon request, any and all such assistance, and information, records and documents as the committee or subcommittee deems proper for the accomplishment of the purposes for which the committee is created.

11. The sum of twenty thousand dollars ($20,000), or as much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby made available from the Contingent Funds of the Senate for the expenses of the committee and its members and for any charges, expenses or claims

WHEREAS, Programs for the prepayment of such costs have been devised and recommended, and the Legislature will again at its next session be confronted with similar measures, in which there is a large popular interest, and will be required to take such action as the facts revealed to it warrant, and

WHEREAS, More pertinent facts can be considered by the Legislature if the opinions, practices, and arguments of those interested are first weighed and tested by an investigating committee; now, therefore, be it

MESSAGES FROM THE GOVERNOR

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE

SACRAMENTO 14, June 7, 1945

*To the Honorable Members of the Senate,
State of California,
Sacramento, California*

GREETINGS: I am returning herewith, without my signature,

Senate Bill No. 359, entitled: "An act to amend Sections 643 and 644 of the Agricultural Code, relating to sterilization on dairies and in milk plants."

My objections to this bill are as follows:

This bill would amend Section 643 and Section 644 of the Agricultural Code relating to sanitation of dairies and milk products plants. Inadvertently the bill would delete from Section 643 requirements for sanitation of containers, utensils, appliances and equipment, which were not intended to be omitted. Because of this error, arrangements have been made to amend the provisions of this bill into another bill still pending in the Legislature.

There is, therefore, no necessity for this bill, and it is agreed it should not become law due to the omission of essential sanitary regulations. The entire question has been discussed with the author, and he has consented to this bill being returned without my approval.

Respectfully submitted.

EARL WARREN, Governor
